first of a series of weekly articles on America's most famous war corre- t, who has just returned from the bat- ls of France and Belgium, from which it notable letters to the Post-Dispatch, clear that this war is the most destruc- modern history.

ais war, more than in other campaigns, wastefulness is apparent. In recent wars at to the man at home was most distress- s the destruction of life. He measured portance of the conflict by the daily lists d and wounded. But in those wars, ex- man life, there was little else to destroy. war in South Africa was fought among stone, across vacant stretches of prairie. en trees were destroyed; because there trees. In the district over which the passed there were not enough trees to he men with fire wood. In Manchuria, Japanese we marched for miles with- even a mud village and the approaches Arthur were as desolate as our Black e Italian-Turkish War was fought in of a desert, and in the Balkan War heard of the cities bombarded until they were in flames.

a and France the vacant spaces are and the shells fall among cities and lying so close together that they seem ds. For hundreds of years the land tivated, the fields, gardens, orchards lovingly cared for. The roads date back ays of Caesar. The stone farmhouses, as the stone churches, were built to en- nd for centuries until this war came they ured. After the battle of Waterloo some stone farmhouses found themselves fa- them Napoleon or Wellington had spread or set up his cot, and, until this war, the ses of Mont Saint Jean, of Caillou, of Haie of the Belle Alliance, remained as they the day of the great battle a hundred . beautiful, in making their farms self-supporting. After the work of the day was finished, they had planted gardens, had reared fruit trees, built arbors; under them at meal time they sat surrounded by those of their own household. To buy the horse and the cow they had pinched and saved; to make the gardens beautiful and the fields fertile they had sweated and slaved, the women as well as the men; even the watch dog by day was a beast of burden. When in August I reached Belgium, between Brussels and Liege, the whole country side showed the labor of these peasants. Unlike the American farmer, they were too poor to buy machines to work for them, and, with scythes and sickles in hand, they cut the grain, with heavy flails they beat it. All that you saw on either side of the road that was fertile and beautiful was the result of their hard, unceasing, personal effort.

Belgians Became Tramps.

THEN the war came like a cyclone and in three weeks the labor of many years was wasted. The fields were torn with shells, the grain was in flames, torches destroyed the villages, by the roadside were the carcasses of the cows that had been killed to feed the invaders and the horses were carried off harnessed to gray gun carriages. These were the things you saw on every side, from Brussels to the German border.

The peasants themselves were huddled beneath hedges. They were like vast camps of gypsies, except that, less fortunate than the gypsy, they had lost what he neither possesses nor desires, a home. As the enemy advanced the inhabitants of one village would fly for shelter to the next, only by the shells to be whipped further forward; and so each hour growing in number, the refugees fled towards Brussels and the coast. They were an army of tramps, of women and children tramps, sleeping in the open fields, beneath the hayricks, seeking shelter from the rain, living on raw turnips and carrots they plucked from the deserted vegetable gardens. The peasants were not the only ones who suffered. The rich and the noble born were as unhappy and as homeless. They had credit, and in banks they had money, but they couldn't get at the money; and when a chateau and a farmhouse are in flames, between them there is little hoice.

Three hours after midnight on the day the Germans began their three days' march through Brussels I had crossed the Square Rogier to send a dispatch by one of the many last trains for Ostend. When I returned to the Palace Hotel, seated on the iron chairs on the sidewalk was a woman, her three children and two maid servants. The woman was in mourning which was quite new, for though the war was only a month old, many had been killed, among them her husband. The day before, at Tirlemont, shells had destroyed her chateau and she was on her way to England. She had around her neck two long strings of pearls, the maids each held a small handbag, her boy clasped in his arms a forlorn and sleepy fox terrier and each of the little girls was embracing a bird cage. In one was a canary, in the other a parrot. That was all they had saved. In their way they were just as pathetic as the peasants sleeping under the hedges. They were just as homeless, friendless, just as much in need of food and sleep and in their eyes was the same look of fear and horror.

Bernhardi tells his countrymen that war is glorious, heroic and for a nation an economic necessity. Instead it is stupid, unintelligent; it creates nothing, it only wastes.

War Like a Mad Dog.

IF it confined itself to destroying forts and cats' cradles of barb wire, then it would be sufficiently hideous. But it strikes blindly, brutally, it tramples on the innocent and the beautiful. It is the bull in the china shop and the mad dog who snaps at children who are trying only to avoid him. People were incensed at the destruction in Louvain of the library, the Catholic college, the Church of St. Pierre that dated from the thirteenth century. These buildings belonged to the world and over their loss the world was rightfully indignant, but in Louvain there were also shops and manufacturies, hotels and private houses. Each belonged, not to the world but to one family.

> FOR the wounded Paris is full of hospitals—French, English and American. And the hospitals are full of splendid men. Each one had been physically fit, or he would not have been passed to the front, and those among them who are officers are finely bred, finely educated, or they would not be officers. But each matched his good health, his good breeding and knowledge against a broken piece of shell, or a steel bullet, and the shell or bullet won. They always will win. Stephen Crane called a wound the red badge of courage. It is all of that, and the man who wears that badge has all my admiration. But I cannot help feeling, also, the waste of it. I would have a standing army for the same excellent reason that I insure my house; but, except in self-defense, no war. For war, and I have seen a lot of it, is waste. And waste is unintelligent.
> RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.

Those individual families made up a city of 45,000 people. In two days there was not a roof left to cover one of them. The trade those people had built up had been destroyed, the "good will and fixings," the stock on the shelves and in the storeroom, the goods in the shop windows, the portraits in the drawing room, the souvenirs and family heirlooms, the love letters, the bride's veil, the baby's first worsted shoes and the will by which someone bequeathed to his beloved wife all his worldly goods.

War came and sent all these possessions, including the will and the worldly goods, up into the air in flames. Most of the people of Louvain made their living by manufacturing church ornaments and brewing beer. War was impartial and destroyed both the beer and the church ornaments. It destroyed also the men who made them and it drove the women and children into concentration camps. When first I visited Louvain it was a brisk, clean, prosperous city. The streets were spotless, the shop windows and cafes were modern, rich looking, inviting, and her great churches and Hotel de Ville gave to the city grace and dignity. Ten days later, when I again saw it, Louvain was in darkness lit only by burning buildings. Rows and rows of streets were lined with black, empty walls. Louvain was a city of the past, another Pompeii; and her citizens were being led out to be shot.

The fate of Louvain was the fate of Vise, of Malines, of Tirlemont, of Liege, of hundreds of villages and towns, and by the time this is printed it will be the fate of hundreds of other towns.

Slaughter of Horses.

IN this war the waste of horses is appalling. Those that first entered Brussels with the German army had been bred and trained for the purposes of war and they were magnificent specimens. Everyone who saw them exclaimed ungrudgingly in admiration. But by the time the army reached the approaches of Paris the forced marches had so depleted the stock of horses that for remounts the Germans were seizing all they met. Those that could not keep up were shot. For miles along the road, from Meaux to Soissons and Rheims, their bodies tainted the air. They had served their purposes, and after six weeks of campaigning the same animals that in times of peace would have proved faithful servants for many years were destroyed that they might not fall into the hands of the French.

Just as an artillery man spikes his gun, the Germans on their retreat to the Aisne River left in their wake no horse that might assist in their pursuit. As they withdrew they searched each stable yard and killed the horses. In village after village I saw horses lying in the stalls or in the fields still wearing the harness of the plow, or in groups of three or four in the yard of the barn, each with a bullet hole in its temple. They were killed for fear they might be useful.

Waste can go no further. Another example of waste were the motor trucks and automobiles. When the war began the motor trucks of the big department stores and manufacturers, and motor buses of London, Paris and Berlin were taken over by the different armies. They had cost from $2000 to $3000 each, and in times of peace, had they been used for the purposes for which they were built, would several times over have paid for themselves. But war gave them no time to pay even for their tires. You saw them by the roadside cast aside like empty cigarette boxes. A few hours' tinkering would have set them right. They still were good for years of service. But an army in retreat or in pursuit has no time to waste in repairing motors. To waste the motor is cheaper.

Between Villers, Cotterets and Soissons the road was strewn with high-power automobiles and motor trucks that the Germans had been forced to destroy. Something had gone wrong, something that at other times could easily have been mended. But with the French in pursuit there was no time to pause, nor could cars of such value be left to the enemy. So they had been set on fire or blown up or allowed to drive head on into a stone wall, or over an embankment. From the road above we could see them in the field below, lying like giant turtles on their backs.

In one place, in the Forest of Villers, was a line of 15 trucks, each capable of carrying five tons.

Festus J. Wade Tells of Birth, Growth ar Purpose of His $150,000,000 Cotton Poo

Loans Will Provide Funds for Immediate Busine

Proving the "Necessity" of Giving Value to South's Money Crop Was Problem Put Upon Originator of Plan by Eastern and Reserve Bank Financiers Before They Indorsed It.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

(Air—"Along Came Ruth.")
We just about despaired of cotton,
When—along came Wade, along came Wade,
We thought the situation r-t--n,
When—along came Wade, along came Wade.
We had bought a bale, yes, quite a number,
But we feared we wouldn't save the day,
When along came Wade, and to help our trade
He brushed the clouds away.

EVERY year or so, St. Louis has the fun of seeing the country at large get acquainted with some man whom St. Louis has known for quite awhile. It has happened twice this year. First, when Fred Lehmann, at Niagara Falls, learned the Spanish for "watchful waiting." And now Festus J. Wade is Prime Minister to King Cotton, and the Southern planters are naming babies after him, while the presidents of some large New York banks, and even the Secretary of the Treasury at Washington, are holding to their jobs with both hands whenever he goes East.

The going East has been a frequent matter in the last two months, and Wade has learned the first names of most of the Pullman porters running between here and Washington and between the capital and New York. But his suit case is unpacked at present and a bale of cotton, fired from the northeast corner of the Federal Building, would scatter plate glass around his feet at almost any time during banking hours.

In a 20-minute gap between two engagements Thursday, he was asked to tell how he came to devise the $150,000,000 (now $135,000,000) cotton pool plan, when the financiers of the Cotton States had failed to find any means of relief for the crisis caused by the war and the closing of European markets.

His reply showed that Wade's plan, on which Government officials now rely to avert disaster to the South, was not handed out by him in mere take-it-or-leave-it fashion. He showed those to whom he offered the plan, as he went along, that it was necessary and that it would work. Those whom he had to show were St. Louis business men, New York bankers, the Federal Reserve Board, Southern business men and the President of the United States. The way in which he went about this task of demonstration, and the way in which he now tells about it, were very much the same as the way in which he would carry out, and would afterward describe, a real estate deal in which a number of interests were to be considered.

Listened, Then Studied.

"IT began Aug. 24," he said, "when I was one of 300 men who met Secretary McAdoo in Washington, at his request, to consider the situation.

"The Buy-a-Bale movement was then being carried on, but it was seen to be inadequate to relieve the South. What was desired was to find some means by which the financial interests of the country, with the co-operation of the Government, could keep the planters from having to sacrifice their cotton at ruinous prices.

"There was much conversation in Secretary McAdoo's office but nothing practical was offered. I listened all day and that night I went to New York and talked over the matter with some bankers there. While there, I got a telegram from Washington telling me I was appointed one of a committee of seven to consider proposed measures.

"I returned to St. Louis, still studying on the matter, and finally I asked for a meeting of the local Buy-a-Bale Committee. The wholesale merchants on the committee approved the plan I suggested and when I tested their sincerity by asking if they would subscribe $100,000 each to such a plan, they replied, to a man, that they would.

"That was a vote of confidence that counted. On the strength of it, I called a meeting of the banks, as president of the Clearing House Association, and the plan I offered was indorsed by the bankers. It was agreed that $7,500,000 would be St. Louis' share of a $150,000,000 fund and that the banks should provide $5,000,000 and the merchants $2,500,000.

Is There a Necessity?

"THEN I went to New York, with the plan pretty well outlined by that time, and submitted it to my financial friends.

"They listened and said the plan was practical, but they raised the question whether it was necessary. They also had doubts whether the Government at Washington would give the needed approval.

"'If you can show us that this is a necessity, that a crisis exists, and if you can get the approval of Washington,' they told me, 'come back here, and we will raise $50,000,000.'

"I went to Washington and saw Secretary McAdoo. He immediately called the Federal Reserve Board and after the board had heard the plan and approved it, it was laid before the President.

"President Wilson gave his approval and the next day another conference was held with the board. At that time, members of the board suggested, as the New York men had done, that something should be done to prove the necessity of such a measure.

"So I suggested that a man be named from each of the cotton states, and that the men thus selected meet in St. Louis, consider the plan and advise Secretary McAdoo as to their opinion.

"The men were appointed, and the meeting was held Oct. 5. As a result, this telegram, with the signatures of the nine men, was sent to Mr. McAdoo:

"'The plan as laid before you and the Federal Reserve Board on Friday last, to endeavor to raise a cotton loan fund of $150,000,000, was today submitted to the undersigned, and after careful consideration of subject, the following resolutions unanimously passed:

"'"It was moved by E. W. Robertson of Columbia, S. C., and seconded by D. N. Fink of Muskogee, Ok., that the plan outlined by Mr. Festus J. Wade, in general essence, be adopted, and the details worked out later. It is believed the South will subscribe its proportion, as suggested and outlined."'

Reserve Board Indorsement.

"THEN I returned to Washington and met the Federal Reserve Board again and told them it was necessary that the board should indorse the plan publicly, if they thought it wise. The board published its indorsement of the plan and I went to New York for a two-days' conference with bankers. A committee of the New York Clearing House Association met and agreed to underwrite $50,000,000 of the pool, conditioned on the raising of an equal sum in non-cotton states, and a third $50,000,000 in the cotton states. Later, when some deemed that the assessment on the cotton states was too heavy, it was reduced by $15,000,000, making the total amount of the proposed pool $135,000,000.

"With a committee of the New York Clearing House Association, I went to Washington last week, and we were in consultation with the Federal Reserve Board Oct. 23 and 24. The board then undertook to apportion the money outside of New York, and assessed St. Louis $7,500,000, the amount already agreed on by our local business interests, and other banking centers in proportion.

"The board's request went out from Washington last Monday and the matter is now in the board's hands.

Owners Will Participate.

"THE subscription to the fund f[illegible]m non-cotton states will be known as Class A subscriptions. Class B subscriptions will be those from the 10 cotton states, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas. Participat [illegible] certificates will be issued, specifying the [illegible]ms under which the owner will be entit [illegible] share in the distribution of the proceeds of the loans. The shall be made on a basis of 6 cents a pou a bale) for middling cotton.

"The Class B subscriptions, in the So States, will be made as part of their applic for loans for customers. The subscription be in an amount equal to 25 per cent of the the banks receiving transferable certificates participation.

"For example, a cotton planter, merchant manufacturer in Corsicana, Tex., has 1000 bale of cotton, and wishes to borrow on it.

"This plan gives him the opportunity of going to his banker at Corsicana and applying for loan of 6 cents a pound, or $30,000 in total. He makes his note for $30,000 with the cotton as se curity; the banker knowing that risk, commercially and financially, a him the loan.

"The banker advance. $7500 of takes a Class B certificate bear interest for $7500 and secures merchant or manufacturer, $22,5 bales of cotton as security, from (against which will be issued a cate for $22,500, which certificate subscribers other than those in states).

Take Care of Own Custo

"IT will be observed that no definite scription to any fund is required f the South. Thus each bank, whethe be a State Bank, National Bank or Trust pany, can finance any customer needing fi ing, and as such banks or trust companies to whom they are loaning, they take no ris their Class B certificates, if they are conse tive in making such loans.

"The whole idea is to care for the surplus cotton crop, and thus steady and strengthen the price of the whole crop. The cotton crop this year will be nearly 15,000,000 bales and of this amount, the 4,500,000 bales which can be cared for through this fund, represents the surplus over this year's probable demand.

Will Reopen Markets.

"THE certainty of the surplus crop being cared for will open the cotton exchanges of Europe, Asia and America and the speculator will resume business and thus raise the market price. The farmers, storekeepers and small bankers of the cotton states will make their usual fall purchases and remit their obligations to the cities and thus start the movement of freight and passenger traffic and he to restore normal business conditions.

"The shipment of cotton to Germany and tria, as well as to England and France, the present assurance that such shipment not be subject to interference, will help store the normal movement of the cotton ness.

"Agents should be sent to Japan an to France and England, to the neutral and to Germany and Austria, to urg chase of cotton at present prices. tries which wait until after the war able to compete, for two or three goods, with the countries wh of the present prices.

VIOLA K…MAN.

A FAITHFUL CONGRESS.

The best that can be said of any Congress during its life is that it has been true to its trust. Time alone will determine the wisdom of its deeds. The Sixty-third Congress, in session longer than any other in the history, is noteworthy for its industry. It should always be even more memorable for its faithfulness to the pledges upon which it was chosen.

When this Congress began its labors, April 7, 1913, certain great measures of reform had been promised by both parties for years. Except for two years in the House of Representatives, the Republicans had been in complete control of the Government since 1897. They had been bound by their platforms to reduce and equalize tariff and other taxation, to extend and strengthen the anti-trust law, to reform our finances, to stop the exploitation of Alaska and to promote justly the principles of self-government in the Philippines.

To every one of these obligations they had proven false. In most cases they had done nothing. Revising the tariff twice, they increased its burdens upon consumers. Exacting some useful and progressive legislation in other directions, they studiously ignored or rejected popular demands for relief from privilege, extortion and monopoly. Such was the situation a year ago last spring, when for the first time in more than 50 years a Democratic President with a Congress having a dependable Democratic majority in both branches took office.

For good or for ill this Congress, co-operating with this President, has met the issues of the last 20 years in accordance with its covenants. It has dealt with several new problems besides. No other Congress has enacted so many laws reaching to the very foundations of finance, commerce, industry and social order. In no other Congress has there been more freedom from lobbyists and promoters. At the hands of no other Congress have the people suffered less from demagogy and violence.

The Sixty-third Congress has revised downward in the interest of consumers a tariff whose schedules not many years ago were sold to the contributors of campaign funds.

It has reformed our banking and currency systems, putting an end to the financial tyranny centralized in a private coterie.

It has supplemented and clarified the anti-trust laws establishing personal guilt, although it has fallen short of its full duty in this respect, preventing monopoly and interlocking directorates and emancipating labor from summary punishments without trial by jury.

It has levied an income tax by means of which wealth must bear a share of public burdens heretofore heaped solely upon consumption. It has created a Trade Commission empowered to investigate and report upon commercial oppressions that tend toward criminality.

It has amended the employe's arbitration law, by which means it recently, in the case of the railroads, averted what threatened to be the greatest strike ever known.

It has provided for the construction of a Government railroad in Alaska and for the leasing of public coal lands in that territory, thereby forever protecting national rights in a dependency long menaced by the avarice of a money sovereignty.

It has passed in one branch an act extending the liberties of the Filipinos and preparing the way for their self-government, a fulfillment not only of our most solemn pledges but a reaffirmation of the principle underlying our own freedom as expressed in the Declaration of Independence.

These are the mighty promise-keeping performances of the Sixty-third Congress. Of its many achievements relating to issues unforeseen, we shall cite only the repeal of the Panama Canal tolls act, in which a former Congress had violated a treaty to serve the coastwise-shipping monopoly; the act authorizing the President to use force at Vera Cruz, but not declaring war upon the people of Mexico; the admission of foreign-built ships to American registry; the extension of the emergency currency act, anticipating the activities of the Federal Reserve Bank, not yet in operation, and the establishment of a bureau of maritime insurance to continue during the European war.

Proof of the rectitude of purpose displayed in this remarkable record and of the fact that both parties have long been pledged to root privilege and plutocracy out of our laws, reference may be made to the attitude of the minority on some of these questions. Republican leadership, of course, was antagonistic, but it could not prevent men who respected their word from standing true. In the Senate on the first passage of the Clayton anti-trust bills even Republicans voted with the Democrats; in the House 56 Republicans. In the House no Republicans voted against the Trade Commission bill; in the Senate the banking and currency bill received the votes of four Republicans; in the House 49 Republicans. Practically all of the important measures above referred to had Republican support in considerable numbers. The most notable exception is that of the tariff act, and even as to that six Republicans in the House and two in the Senate aligned themselves with the Democrats in perfect accord.

When partisans usually hostile unite in this way it is clear that honor and principle and reason abide for these movements forward, but progress such as this would not have been made except under highly favorable conditions, when the temper of the people was known. In both houses the majority was ably and sincerely led. There was an unalterable purpose to respect public opinion. There was the most laborious industry. There was unlimited patience. Above all else, there was the lofty inspiration of the White House, which, to the condemnation of a great party, had not been there before.

Nothing in a republic is more inspiring than obedience to the popular will. The Sixty-third Congress has been more than obedient. It has been highly efficient. It has been a people's Congress in which the best traditions of representative government have been courageously maintained. It must look to the people for its rewards.

MR. EDISON'S PLAY SPELL.

Thomas Edison at play would be less interesting if he was less untiring in devoting himself to work.

He has been making this week one of his infrequent visits to his old home in Michigan. He took a ride on the Detroit-Port Huron train, on which he used, 50 yea… go, to sell war extras, prize pack… … magazines, and picked up wh… … nowledge of telegraphy and the mysteries of electricity. At Mount Clemens, one of the stations at which he used to get a chance to practice with the key, he jumped off and sent a telegram with his own hand to the family in New Jersey. When his successor as "butcher" came through the train, Edison commandeered his stock and acted as a substitute.

A great time the Wizard had back in the old scenes. But there was disillusionment. He has added many new accomplishments in these 50 years, but has retrograded in the old ones. While he was sending the message some operator down the line broke in with the vicious advice to the amateur to "cut it out." Even with resort to the old trick of short-changing purchasers he was able to sell only $5 worth of stuff for the lad who now has his train "butcher" run. Hardly anything was as he remembered it in the past or as he thought it was going to be now.

But that only added to the fun. Edison has never believed in vacations. He is having the time of his life this week and is already weakening in his view.

THE HOME RULE REFERENDUM.

Two acts of the Legislature repealing some of its own former laws denying St. Louis important essentials in self-government are made subject to the decision of the voters of the whole State because a referendum on those acts was ordered on petition of the people.

St. Louis' own officials now have the power within certain limits to regulate dramshops and prescribe the city license fee they should pay. But an official named from Jefferson City has the power to determine the worthiness of those who receive licenses and to forfeit the licenses of those unamenable to regulation.

Offenders against any part of the whole body of law are prosecuted by a Circuit Attorney selected by the people of St. Louis, are tried before a Judge selected by the people of St. Louis, are pronounced guilty or innocent by a jury selected from among the people of St. Louis. But they can be taken into custody only by officials whose appointment is dictated from the State house, 125 miles away.

The law is not vindicated in a mere arrest. The policies that contribute most effectually to law enforcement are determined by persons accountable to the city—by its Circuit Attorney, its Judges, its juries. But some extremists insist that law enforcement would be impaired if the selection of the men who clap offenders on the shoulders, who walk beats, who drive patrol wagons, was placed in the hands of commissions selected by the Mayor of the city instead of by the Governor of the State.

A certain demoralization results from making police appointments a recognized part of the State house patronage. Political assessments on police salaries were a logical consequence of naming commissioners as reward for party service. By no means the least of the scandals resulting were such scandals as the disgraceful police salary grab attempted at the last session of the Missouri Legislature, when members of the department flagrantly violated the law to lobby for the hold-up.

No. 11 and No. 12 are the propositions on the referendum ballot. The laws are carefully drawn. They provide for nonpartisan police and excise departments. They will take both out of politics under the civil service provisions of the new charter. They are needed to carry further that amplification of city authority and harmonious allotment and concentration of city powers gained when the 1914 charter was adopted last June.

Home rule is a fundamental democratic principle. St. Louis is entitled to it.

AMENDMENT NO. 1—A TRICK.

Voters throughout the State should not overlook the false pretense in Amendment No. 1.

Ostensibly directed against the single tax it designedly knocks out the initiative and referendum and perpetuates all the iniquities of the present tax system.

Voters can always defeat a single tax proposal whenever they have a mind to, but they cannot do without the safeguards of the initiative and referendum. The amendment prohibits its own repeal.

The success of Amendment No. 1 would be the greatest stroke for the special interests that have fattened on the corruption of public officials and the helplessness of the people, in the history of rotten politics. It would be a deadly blow to direct legislation and honest taxation.

Vote down Amendment No. 1.

THE PERFECTED TRADE OF WAR.

The present war is differentiated from past wars, not only in picturesque and stirring incidents, but in the more important technique of the military trade, chiefly by the submarine, the aeroplane and the machine gun. All three of these important inventions, which have revolutionized military operations, had their origin in the United States.

Holland and Lake made the most important contributions to the submarine as it is known today. Gatling and Maxim had a part equaled by that of men of no other nation in perfecting the present type of machine gun. Of the flight the Wright brothers made on Dec. 13, 1903, after they had equipped the planes of a "glider" with a gasoline engine, one authority says: "This is considered the first instance in which a person has been carried from the ground in actual flight by mechanical means."

The United States had previously given the ironclad battleship to the world. It had rewritten cavalry tactics for the world's armies. It had shown how railroads could be used in unsuspected ways in facilitating campaigns. In addition, it had more than kept its end up in developing the maximum possibilities of the motor car and in perfecting small arms and explosives and explosive projectiles.

Why is it that the countries in which militarism is carried to the greatest extreme had to come to the country which, of all countries, is most committed to peace to relearn the trade of war and provide themselves with the most up-to-date of war's tools? Why did not the emphasis laid on militarism and the habit of thought that subordinates everything to utility in war lead them to invent the things that give this present war its destructive character?

NOVEMBER.

November was put in the calendar by Numa Pompilius, who would have been, had he lived in our time, much such a character as Dr. Irl Hicks. He was always interested in the weather, and endeavored even so long ago as before the Christian Era to reduce this fascinating science to some sort of order. He was the first person in history to appreciate the relation of the weather to humankind. Before Numa it was customary to suppose that the weather defied analysis. The periodicity of the seasons had not been particularly observed, and it was not definitely established when they began. He divided the year into four equal seasons, provided the necessary solstices and equinoxes, and very soon familiarized all the Romans with what they might reasonably expect. Thus, when Caesar invaded Gaul he was really enabled to divide that country into the historic three parts because his army was prepared for all kinds of weather. The enemy had more troops than Caesar had, but the Romans had more weights of clothing. People laughed at the Romans for laying stress upon this in that early time, but Rome conquered the world. We have seen some intimation in the present great war that Russia expects to win this winter by reason of the superiority of her bearskin coats. That does to laugh about now, when the weather is soft; but Caesar said very much the same thing, and he made it good. You will perhaps recall that celebrated line in the commentaries of Caesar, "The bravest of these were the Belgii, for they fought all Winter in their Summer clothes."

War was the business of Rome, and Numa therefore determined when her armies could operate to the greatest advantage. He called this season November, from the Latin nine, meaning that an army could do about nine times as much damage as it could at any other season of the year. In November the crops were ripe and the cattle were fat. An army could live. In November it was neither too hot to march nor too cold to camp. Everybody rose with the crisp breath of the frost in their nostrils, and a man felt like jerking a bull off a bridge. There was almost no mud in which to mire, and the army was not often bothered by rain. It was the soldier's time of year, and in that blest season Rome cracked about everybody's head in the known world. Our forebears in this country called the season Indian Summer because it was then that the Indians went on the war path. It was a primitive instinct. Scalps were a minor consideration with the Indians. What they wanted were pumpkins, turnips, cider, chitlins, souse, cracklings and home-smoked hams. The whites defended those stores with such vigor that the Indians finally starved to the point of having to be supported on reservations. That is the history of Indian summer. Don't let anybody tell you it is so named because the leaves are red. The pioneer cared nothing about the leaves being red.

The festive calf will sniff the breeze
And show us all the new fox trot,
And Europe's soldiery will freeze
Without requiring to be shot.
The men will proudly strut about
With feathers in their new fall hats.
The husky candidate will shout
His hollow warning to the fats,
The chilly doodlebugs will all
Interne themselves before the blast.
And one by one the leaves shall fall,
As per the custom in the past.

Afar from Europe's bloody strife, the gentle blandishments of Fall will gladden everybody's life and deftly captivate us all. The farmer selling wheat and corn to nations busy with the sword will blithely blow his auto horn and make additions to his hoard. If some keep peace while others fight, then some must buy what others sell, and sellers, too, reserve the right to charge the buyers pretty well. The war tax may work here and there a little hardship on a few, but think of finding anywhere a farmer feeling very blue! He doesn't run a bucket shop, nor is he busy selling bonds; no matter where the market drops, few farmers throw themselves in ponds. What Europe needs the more and more is bread and meat, the truth to tell, and on this rich and peaceful shore, we have those articles to sell.

The longer Armageddon lasts, the more alluring is our chance, especially since Winter's blasts are almost ready to advance. The only ammunition known to serve against that common foe is such as all of us have grown and learned to cradle and to hoe. In war nobody raises wheat, or gives a passing thought to hogs; the wreck of farming is complete, and everything goes to the dogs. The hired man goes off to fight and joins his colors in the ranks, the forager comes down at night and loots the place with little thanks, the gunners shoot the windmill up, the trim haystacks are set afire, the infantry takes down the fence and makes obstructions of the wire, the house and barns are filled with men, the smokehouse is a Captain's cot, and when the camp is moved again the farmer's opulence is not.

At any rate, we shall give thanks
For being neutral over here,
Though doing so shall thin the ranks
Of guileless turkeydom, we fear.
Alas! for custom and for strife,
Whenever we address the sky
To show our gratitude for life,
The luckless turkey has to die.

Congress having adjourned, the fear of any further reform for the time being will induce everybody to come out of hiding, and times will be a little livelier than they have been. We shall meanwhile sell Europe everything we can. She can have anything over here except our theory of government. We must hang on to that. The first 22 days of November will be under the influence of Scorpio, the eighth sign of the zodiac. People born under this sign are great thinkers and believe the English should make an exception of Mr. Rockefeller's oil boats. Europe is much too busy fighting in the daytime to pay any attention to what we are saying about the war, and without some of John's oil, it is not easy to see how she is going to read it at night. The British are away off on that, as the Scorpio people, who are great debaters, hope to make them admit. The last eight days of the month will be under the influence of Sagittarius the Archer. Sagittarians are the greatest neutrals we have. They can discuss the war continually without once betraying where their sympathies lie. They are the principal support of the Wilson idea, and if we keep out of the war to the end we shall owe it to the fact and diplomacy of these remarkable people. Thanksgiving will be observed on the twenty-sixth.

Then bleak December shall return
To chill the very soul,
And we shall all begin to burn
That pile of winter coal.

WAR'S MORAL UPLIFT.

From the Philadelphia Record.

We should be glad to believe that war produces wholesome and elevating moral developments. The effort to see some good, prospectively at least, in the European convulsion is almost inevitable. Persons who revolt at the idea of glorifying war as a beneficial form of national exercise still make an earnest effort to see some good come out of war. But we are compelled to believe that the moral uplift of war is mostly a matter of the imagination.

The material consequences of war are often salutary. The result of the Napoleonic wars was to the advantage of mankind, but this is not to say that the wars were beneficial. The French Revolution itself was a necessary revolt against the ancient regime. The Man on Horseback is better than anarchy, but peace and progress are better than either. That the fighting during the Napoleonic period resulted in a better humanity and higher standards of mankind it would be difficult to prove.

We have had our own experience of a great war, and we are accustomed to hear orators describe its vast stimulus to the moral life of Americans. The actual consequences of the war, in the perpetuation of the national Union and the destruction of slavery, were beneficial to all parts of the country, the South recognizing this as well as the North. But when we look for the moral uplift due to a war of four years, what do we see?

We see all the scandals of the carpetbag regime. We see the condition of our political life at its very lowest. The Whisky Ring, the Star Route Frauds and the Erie Canal Ring flourished under the immediate influence of a great war for a great cause. Five members of Congress were expelled for selling cadetships, and a member of the Cabinet resigned to escape punishment for taking bribes. If anyone desires to study the moral uplift of war let him read the speech of George Frisbie Hoar in opening the impeachment proceedings against Secretary Belknap, in which he enumerated the public scandals during his then brief public career. Besides the scandals alluded to above, he mentioned those of the Tweed regime, the worst features of which were not the stealing of the municipal funds, but the corruption of the fountain of justice, as the result of which one Judge in New York was impeached and another died of his shame.

THE SUFFERING HORSE.

From the Ohio State Journal.

Our hearts go out to him. Next to man he is the greatest victim of the war. He goes in and gets killed, thousands of him, and he doesn't know what for. It's no affair of his. He doesn't care which wins, Germans, French, English or Russian—it is all alike to him. He gives up his life for one just as soon as for the other. He doesn't hesitate. He rushes up to the blazing cannon just as freely as he scampers across the green fields, not thinking or caring for death. He gives up his life for some country, he doesn't know which.

In artillery or cavalry he plunges to death and becomes a part of the havoc of war without a reason or reward. He belongs to the armament and is on a level with powder, gun, cannon and sword, and yet he is a part of the soldiery when it comes to suffering and cruelty. Never does he experience the old Roman sentiment: "It is sweet to die for one's country." It might be if he had a country. He hasn't—he belongs to all mankind, and this is the way they treat him.

THE MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

A DIGEST OF THE BEST EDITORIAL COMMENT AND INFORMATION ON PUBLIC QUESTIONS PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE READERS OF THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH.

The Week's Political Pointers

REED AND MAJOR.

St. Joseph News-Press: That the expected is about to happen is indicated by this which comes out of the Missouri State capital: "It is believed here that immediately following the election, or at least within a few days thereafter, Gov. Major will tell his friends that he would like to go to the United States Senate as a successor to James A. Reed." A race between Reed and Major would be even more sensational than was that between Reed and Francis.

ROOSEVELT NOT A CANDIDATE.

Philadelhia Inquirer: "Every man who voted for me two years ago and is not ashamed of it owes it himself to vote for Pinchot this year," declares Mr. Roosevelt.

But why, pray? Why should Pennsylvania, which is a protective State, throw away votes on Pinchot, who is a factor in this campaign only to the extent of aiding Palmer and the Democratic policies?

Roosevelt was running for President two years ago. He isn't running for anything this year. By what right does Roosevelt ask Pennsylvania Republicans to elect a New Yorker to represent Pennsylvania in the Senate?

Pennsylvania has vast industrial, manufacturing, mining and agricultural interests—altogether too vast to be intrusted to the inexperienced and ignorant hands of a rank outsider.

PENNSYLVANIA'S OPPORTUNITY.

Philadelphia Ledger: Comprehensive analyses of the political situation throughout the Union, conducted by each newspaper in its special territory, convince the San Francisco Chronicle, the Denver Post, the Minneapolis Tribune, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the Chicago Tribune, the Cincinnati Enquirer, the Boston Globe and the New York World that the Republicans are sure to make substantial gains in the lower house and the Democrats just as certain to increase their majority in the Senate. They will gain at least three seats and probably four.

An independent investigation, conducted by the New York Sun, indicates that the present Democratic majority of 10 in the Senate "will be increased to 12, and it may go considerably higher."

What an opportunity for good citizens! They have at last their chance to overwhelm Penroseism without imperiling to any degree whatever the principles for which they sincerely and he politically stands. They are already caught in a Democratic majority; without loss of prestige they can rid themselves of the incumbrance which drove them into this political innocuousness.

PALMER THE MAN.

New York Evening Post: Although the Pennsylvania Progressives are maintaining that a vote for Palmer is a vote for Penrose, and those of Illinois that a vote for Sherman is a vote for Sullivan, the independents in these states will be well advised to vote for the old party opponents of the two bosses. They inevitably have the best chance of winning.

AN ANTI-BOOZE CAMPAIGN.

Philadelphia Ledger: Ohio is not the only State in which the liquor issue is paramount today. Like Virginia's campaign against booze, Ohio's is but an instance. California, Colorado, Indiana, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oregon, Washington, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are among the other states which are engaged in the [illegible] tremendous fight.

It is a whole country aroused to indignation and revolt that is waging war on this foul traffic, which debauches political life as truly as it debauches men and women, boys and girls.

Rum's alliance with dirty politics and affiliations with crime of all sorts have been traced by a nauseating trail, the stench of which no one's nostrils can escape. Its menace to safety, efficiency and profit in manufacturing, in railroading and in all branches of legitimate business has been discovered. Rum is a political issue, a civic issue, an economic issue and a moral issue everywhere in the nation.

LIQUOR FIGHT IN MINNESOTA.

Minneapolis Journal: What would be the effect on Minnesota politics, if William E. Lee should be defeated for Governor by the strenuous efforts of the brewers and liquor dealers of the State?

In the first place, it would be notice to the world that Minnesota prefers to take its politics and its beer from the same spigot. But it would also be notice to men who aspire for office that they would best not incur the opposition of the brewers. The issue is clear-cut and the outcome can mean only one thing, either that Minnesota has thrown off brewery domination, or that the brewers have a tight grip on the North Star State. In the latter event, the candidate for office in future campaigns must make his peace with the brewers first, and then, secure in [illegible] position, go through the motions of asking [illegible]e people for their votes.

LORIMERISM THE ISSUE.

Louisville Evening Post: The [illegible]ost of Lorimer rises up to confront each me[illegible]er of the Republican Old Guard in the Senate [illegible] he comes up for re-election.

At present Senator Gallinger's v[illegible] to keep Lorimer in the Senate, despite the pr[illegible]n charges of bribery in connection with his ele[illegible]n by the Illinois Legislature, is the chief is[illegible] in the New Hampshire campaign. Mr. Gall[illegible]r is a tariff standpatter, and the New Ham[illegible]e electorate is supposed to be, of the sa[illegible] opinion. But Gallinger's vote for Lorimer in th[illegible]nate is something that the New Hampshire [illegible] cannot forget and there is said to be a [illegible] possibility Gallinger will be retired.

Germany and the Monroe Doctrine

NOT CONVINCING.

Philadelphia Ledger: What the attitude of Germany would be toward the Monroe doctrine if the war should end in her favor is at present an academic question. The promise that she will respect it will not make a very deep impression just now; as a correspondent points out, recent German disregard of treaties as "scraps of paper" suggests that the best American policy is "extremely watchful waiting." The assurances of Count von Bernstorff and Dr. Dernburg do not, in fact, commit the German Government. They are simply part of the program of convincing us of the overpowering respect and affection of Berlin.

Everyone who has followed the course of events in South America, who understands the strength of the German desire for colonial expansion, knows perfectly well that the Monroe doctrine has been for years a source of irritation to the German Government. Is it not a fair conviction that, if the allies are beaten and that Government has a free hand, the propagation of German "Kultur" will not be confined to the other side of the Atlantic? In forecasting the consequences of such an event, it will be well not to forget certain episodes in Samoa and the Philippines. "The lady doth protest too much."

NO NEED FOR ALARM.

Indianapolis News: At a time of such sensitiveness and unrest as the present it was very unfortunate that the German Ambassador should have discussed publicly the Monroe doctrine, and its relation to a possible German invasion of Canada. Count Bernstorff is represented as having said that inasmuch as Canada had sent soldiers to Europe, the United States should not consider it an infringement of the Monroe doctrine if Germany should land an armed force on Canadian soil. Later in the day the following "amplification" of the Ambassador's rather inept statement was given out:

> The German point of view is that by joining in a European war Canada has put herself outside the pale of the Monroe doctrine. But Germany has not the intention of attacking Canada, nor colonizing Canada.

Further than that, it now appears that as long ago as Sept. 3 the German Government voluntarily pledged itself to our State Department not to attempt colonial expansion in South America, no matter what the outcome of the war might be.

There is, of course, small probability of any move against Canada, and now we are assured that none is contemplated. So there is no reason why even the most timorous soul should be alarmed. Whether the Monroe doctrine covers the case or not would be hard to tell, as few are wise enough to be able to say just what that doctrine is at the present time.

CANADA AND GERMANY.

Springfield Republican: Embassador von Bernstorff's statement that Germany is entitled to attack Canada can be reasonably disputed by no one in this country. The Monroe doctrine has no more to do with the case than with the binominal theorem. To deny Germany's right to send an army to Canadian soil, in view of the sending of a Canadian army to the war in Europe, would be to deny Germany's right of self-defense. The question of a German invasion does not press itself upon the New World, however; nor will it be anything more than academic so long as the British Isles themselves are not overrun by a German army.

Speaking more broadly, out of a much greater knowledge of North America than of Europe, it might be helpful to point out that no European Power could ever invade Canada without causing a tremendous commotion and arousing the keenest apprehension in the United States; and that, too, is said without the slightest reference to the Monroe doctrine. Canadians and Americans have been living in North America together for some 300 years, and they will be living here side by side for at least 300 years to come. No European power could ever attempt to conquer Canada without carefully weighing the probabilities of having the United States to conquer at the same time; and this is offered as a purely academic contribution to a subject as remote in its character as one pleases.

Yet what far-reaching effects may not be imagined as coming possibly from Canada's participation in the wars of the British empire. The first step was taken in the Boer War, when the Dominion sent a contingent to the battlefields of South Africa. Now Canadians, by throwing their military weight into the wars of continental Europe, are laying the foundation of issues which may be dismissed as remote yet which in time, perhaps, will leave their marks upon history.

GERMANY'S DENIAL.

Philadelphia Inquirer: From some remarks that were made the other day by Dr. Bernard Dernburg, former Colonial Secretary of the German Government, or that were attributed to him, the inference was somewhat hastily drawn that Germany had communicated to the Department of State at Washington a formal recognition of the Monroe doctrine and an assurance of its intention to respect it. This would have been an extraordinary concession and one for which there is no precedent. What is known as the Monroe doctrine is no more than a declaration of national policy on the part of the United States. It has never been embodied in any international agreement. It has never been the subject to that end or any diplomatic negotiation. It has never been formally accepted or acquiesced in by any other Power, nor has this country at any time sought or desired to erect it into a principle of international law.

What happened was that last Sept. 3 the German Ambassador informed the State Department that he had been "instructed by his Government to deny most emphatically the rumors to the effect that Germany intends, in case she comes out victorious in the present war, to seek expansion in South America." That is obviously a very different thing from the recognition supposed to have been made of the Monroe doctrine as a principle of international law.

MARSHAL VORWARTS

"Blucher's loyalty saved the cause of Europe."—Major-General Sir J. F. Maurice, K. C. B.

FRANK TAYLOR.

Here's to him who, bruised and ill,
Wrote from Wavre, "Come I will!"
Gneisenau said yea and nay,
He would go and he would stay;
Vorwarts scarce could sit his steed,
Vorwarts marched in England's need;
He was two and seventy then—
Here's to him and all his men!

Bulow's corps is fresh for fight;
Bulow leads, but rear and right,
Corps of Pirch and corps of Ziethen,
Battered, famished, but unbeaten,
Up the height and down the hollow,
On from Wavre follow, follow;
Thunder, growling far away,
Tells where England stands at bay.

Westward through the drenched lanes faring,
Grimly went they, sweating, swearing,
Deeper still in mire and muck,
Till the batteries sank and stuck,
Gun-teams floundering to the knees,
Gun-wheels to the axle-trees,
And the men sat down and sobbed,
While the thunder swelled and throbbed.

Blood-red spur, and eyes ablaze,
Blucher rode the trampled ways—
"Hundert Teufel! what is here?"
But they answered, "Father, dear,
Can thy children thrust and flog
Through this barbarous, Belgian bog?
Half the guns to hell are gone;
Father, dear, we can't get on."

"Can't get on? But yonder—hark!
Hear ye not the bulldog's bark?
Shall the Englanders allege
That your father broke his pledge?
Shame it were, if that should be!
Children, children, follow me!
I am sworn to Wellington—
Sapperment! We must get on."

Thus he spake; and panting, steaming,
Hugely heaving and blaspheming,
On his batteries lurched and rumbled,
On his columns reeled and stumbled;
But from Wavre Thielman wrote,
"I have Grouchy at my throat,
Backward here the game's begun,
And the odds are two to one."

"Two to one," quoth Vorwarts. "So!
Donnerwetter! it will go,
If, bei Gott, till close of day,
Thielmann hold them all in play;
But we cannot help him there,
Not one saber can we spare;
What though Thielmann stand or fall,
Yon's the great game, forward all!"

Came a redcoat, racing through—
"What, in God's name, what are you?
"Black Hussars that ride before
Graf von Bulow's army corps;
Back to Wavre, miles on miles,
You shall find his sweltering files—
Hark! they roll the Prussian drums!
Courage! Father Blucher comes!"

Forward all! And Bulow drove Right upon Plancenoit, and strove
Hour by hour of blood and flame,
Hour by hour, till Ziehen came,
Storming in upon Papelotte,
Storming in with steel and shot;
Then, as flared the sinking sun,
England struck—and it was done.

Such was Vorwarts, such a fighter,
Such a lunging, plunging smiter,
Always stanch and always straight,
Strong as death for love or hate,
Always first in foulest weather,
Neck or nothing, hell for leather,
Through or over, sink or swim,
Such was Vorwarts—here's to him!

This ringing tribute to a German soldier was published in the London Spectator on the anniversary of Waterloo, two years ago.

Carman Murder Still a Mystery

WOULD A MAN HAVE ESCAPED?

New York World: To have sent a woman to the electric chair on the statements of a colored maid whose testimony was directly challenged in essential respects would have been to accept a responsibility that few persons would care to bear. Too much room for doubt existed, too many elements of mystery entered into the case, to permit of the conclusion that impartial justice demanded the life of another woman.

It is easy to argue that the written law, in its sternness, makes no distinctions of sex. Juries are often moved by influences beyond their power to express. Sympathies too vague for words, hesitancy not arising only from the nature of the evidence and the appearance and manner of the witnesses, are likely to sway their decisions unknown to themselves. But it would be absurd to say that Mrs. Carman escaped conviction out of a feeling of mercy toward her as a wife and mother The real question is, Would a man in the same circumstances have been convicted of murder on the same showing of facts?

NO PARTICULAR MORAL.

Philadelphia Inquirer: In view of the conflicting evidence and the personality of the accused, the disagreement of the Carman jury will occasion little or no surprise. If the testimony of the colored girl had been believed, conviction must have followed, but this witness had contradicted herself to an extent which materially impaired her credibility. It does not seem likely, if Mrs. Carman had committed the crime, that she would have made the incriminatory and gratuitous admissions she was alleged to have done, while her own statement in denial of having done so was sufficiently coherent and straightforward to be reasonably convincing.

Evidently, however, some of the jurors had been so much impressed by the evidence offered in this connection, taken together with the other testimony going to show a motive, that they could not be brought to admit a doubt of which the defendant should have the benefit. The foundation of the case for the prosecution was jealousy, and that Mrs. Carman was jealous she frankly admitted when she installed the eavesdropping dictograph. There seems to be no particular moral except the obvious one that a jealous woman is not well fitted to be a doctor's wife.

NOT SURPRISING.

Pittsburg Leader: The disagreement of the jury in the case of Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman is not surprising to the many who follow proceedings in such cases.

When the trial began the Leader stated that the Prosecuting Attorney had a very slim chance for sending Mrs. Carman to the electric chair. Subsequent events have shown the substantial grounds upon which this statement was based.

The Leader did not base its statement entirely upon the evidence that would be submitted, but almost wholly upon precedent.

It is difficult to secure a dozen men who are willing to send either a man or woman to the electric chair on circumstantial evidence.

It is the nature of all juries to give prisoners at the bar the benefit of doubts.

A woman who is attractive in appearance and surrounded by influential friends has the greatest opportunity to benefit through the existence of doubts as to her guilt.

NO TANGIBLE TESTIMONY.

Pittsburg Press: Just what the New York District Attorney will do in view of the Carman jury's disagreement is not the easiest thing in the world to guess. The prisoner's friends are quoted as expressing a belief that she will not again be placed on trial. But it is perhaps of some significance that the District Attorney says nothing. He tried the case as if there was not the least doubt in his mind of the woman's guilt. If he is as sure of this as his manner indicated, he will probably not allow her to go forth a free woman until he has made an attempt to explode the "mysterious man" evidence with which the defense brought about the disagreement.

However, the witnesses who supplied this evidence have only to stick to their testimony to create a legal doubt by which another jury would be affected much as this one was. There was little or nothing in the testimony that was tangible. There was no effort to identify, locate or describe the man, or suggest what could have been his motive. There accordingly seems to be little chance of the State's proving the "mysterious man's" nonexistence. It need not be surprising if the State concludes that the task is beyond its resources and concedes the jealous wife her liberty.

STILL A MYSTERY.

New York Times: The prosecution was based on a theory, and it does not matter in the least whether or not that was a theory widely entertained. The law has nothing to do with popular theories. The disagreement cannot be considered a result of the conduct of the defense. Mrs. Carman's own testimony was coherent and not seriously shaken in a severe cross-examination, but no successful effort was made to confuse the situation, to divert suspicion. The tale of the unknown man who jumped the fence was of no consequence as evidence. Therein lies the weakness of the defense. The expectation that some new turn might be given to Freeport's mystery was not fulfilled. But it is still a mystery, nevertheless.

JURY SYSTEM VINDICATED.

Washington Post: The system which has been in effect in the United States since the Government was founded has been vindicated. There have been some instances where men and women have been convicted and even executed, only to be exonerated by the confession of the real culprit many years afterward, but such cases, thanks to the safeguards of the jury system, have been few and far between.

Suspicion, once pointed against a man or a woman, is invariably cumulative. Many innocent acts may seem to give support to the original suspicion. Circumstantial evidence, therefore, is always dangerous, and unless a complete case can be made out "beyond a reasonable doubt" it is far better to err in freeing a defendant [illegible] the risk of spilling innocent blood.

Business Prospects Brightening

COTTON LOOKING UP.

Washington Post: The President is authority for the statement that the cotton situation is improving and that it may be expected to improve steadily. Spinners in England are anxious to keep their factories going, as they have heavy orders to fill, and they would buy liberally if they were assured that prices were right and that present prices would not be followed by a ruinous slump. American manufacturers are in practically the same situation, although they have no large orders requiring immediate decision on their part.

Since two-thirds of the human race is dependent upon the South for cotton, and since cotton must be used, war or no war, there is ground for hope that the bales now piled up in the South will move toward the market in spite of artificial obstacles.

FEELING BETTER IN TEXAS.

San Antonio Light: Wheat is arriving at Galveston now at the rate of 200 carloads a day. More than a dozen ships are now in the harbor, loading grain and others are en route for cargoes. Exporters are urging grain men in Texas to "rush shipments," for Europe is sending cablegrams every day asking quick action on its order.

Europe is buying cotton, too. Five steamships have cleared from Galveston this month with cargoes of cotton for foreign shippers. Southern cotton mills are running on full schedule now and substantial war orders for goods are daily being placed in this part of the country. Conservative cotton men say the situation is clearing. Grain men say they can't get enough grain to supply their customers. Cattlemen are sending armed guards along with their shipments, so precious have their steers become since the war. And still a lot of people have the nerve to say that "the war has killed business."

A BRIGHTER OUTLOOK.

Springfield Republican: The financial situation brightened perceptibly yesterday. The break in sterling exchange down to 4.90, less than 1 cent above normal, carried exchange to its lowest point since the week before the war began. While several causes may be mentioned, the most potent is doubtless the rapid increase in exports of goods. War orders for belligerents are finally making themselves felt in deliveries and creating credits abroad which tend to balance our current foreign indebtedness. Reports of increasing foreign trade are certainly conspicuous in the news of the day. The French order for a million pairs of soldiers' boots, made known yesterday, is a sample of the foreign trade now gaining headway.

BLANKETS IN DEMAND.

Fiber and Fabric: If there is a mill, large or small, that is equipped to produce army blankets, that is not well supplied with orders, we should be pleased to hear from them, as we have been asked to get in touch with mills that can take orders for rush business on blankets.

The business to be offered is for the armies of the European nations now at war, and satisfactory arrangements will be made for payments. The chief question is quick delivery, as the approach of winter makes it imperative to supply millions of wool blankets at the earliest possible moment.

The present war is going to make the demand for wool clothing unprecedented, and neither England, France, Belgium nor Germany can begin to supply the needs of their soldiers, so the United States must be drawn upon heavily, both for clothing and coverings.

The most pressing demand is for cheap blankets, and the rag and waste markets as well as the wool market are beginning to feel the pressure for raw stock.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

THE week's calendar is marked by several events of importance. (MISS MARJORIE MORTON) A BRIDE OF THURSDAY

WEDNESDAY Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott of 31 Westmoreland place will present her daughter, Miss Nannie Scott, to society at a large reception. The card of Miss Mary Nagel, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nagel's debutante daughter, is inclosed.

FRIDAY, the Pipe and Mug Club will give their first dance this season, at the Woman's Club, and Saturday evening will be the first monthly dinner dance at the St. Louis Club.

FRIDAY also will be the opening of the Symphony season, which will begin with the matinee on that day and will be followed by the concert Saturday evening and the first "pop" Sunday at the Odeon.

The Symphony tea given Thursday afternoon at Cicardi's was a great success and was one of the most brilliant assemblages so far this fall. The winter garden was filled with beautifully dressed women in the gayest mood sitting around the tea tables.

The hosts were all friends of the orchestra and their guests pledged themselves to make the Friday afternoon concerts a success.

The Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips, in his brief address, said what he found that the "matter with St. Louis" was a "lack of enthusiasm." In Chicago and Boston there was not a seat to be had for the afternoon concerts, but it had not always been so and it was time for us to work to keep one of the best orchestras in the country together. He told the women and men present if they thought they did not care for music to subscribe anyway, so that they could give pleasure to someone else who did.

It was an altogether charming party, with about two hundred women and about one hundred men present.

THE marriage of Miss Louise Marion Lionberger, daughter of Isaac H. Lionberger, and John Austin Amory of Boston, Mass., which took place yesterday afternoon, was one of the most important nuptial events of the season.

Although the bride had but one attendant, her sister, Miss Anne Shepley Lionberger, there were 10 groomsmen, all but two of whom came from Boston for the wedding, besides a number of Mr. Amory's relatives.

The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock at the Lionberger mansion at 37 Westmoreland place, by the Rev. Carroll M. Davis, dean of Christ Church Cathedral. Roger Amory was his brother's best man. The groomsmen were John S. Lionberger, the bride's brother; Donald F. Cutler, Lieut. Charles B. Amory Jr., U. S. A., another brother of the bridegroom; Carlton and Isaac Tucker, Burr, Dudley L. Pickman Jr., Francis W. Sargent, Loring Young, Constantine Hutchins and Bayard Tuckerman Jr. of New York.

A reception followed the ceremony, and afterward Mr. Amory and his bride departed for Honolulu to spend their honeymoon.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Amory; the bridegroom's parents; Mr. and Mrs. A. Amory Lawrence, Misses Laura and Elizabeth Amory, Mrs. Loring Young, Mrs. Francis W. Sargent, Mrs. Donald F. Cutler, Miss Mary Coolidge, Miss Mary Sargent and Q. A. Shaw McKean, all of Boston.

Miss Sargent is stopping with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wooster Lambert who gave a dinner dance at the Country Club Thursday evening for the bride and out-of-town guests, and Friday night Mr. and Mrs. Lambert entertained at dinner in honor of Miss Sargent.

Last night, after the departure of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. George S Tiffany were hosts for the wedding party at Sunset Hill Country Club.

The bride is the second daughter of Mr. Lionberger and is one of the most attractive girls in Imperial Club set. She made he debut two winters ago. She is a fine horsewoman, and one of the girls who tried polo at the Country Club. She is fond of outdoor sports, skates, plays tennis, and does well everything she undertakes.

Her mother was a Miss Shepley, sister of John F. and Arthur B. Shepley, and a cousin of Mrs. Dexter Tiffany and Mrs. Charles Nagel. Her older sister, who was Miss Margaret Lionberger, married Donald F. Cutler of Boston, about two years ago.

Mr. Cutler and Mr. Amory were classmates at Harvard and both are of old New England families.

Mr. Amory and his bride will reside in Boston.

ONE of the most notable weddings of the week was that of Miss Marjorie Morton, daughter of [illegible] Lee Morton of Glendale, and [illegible] derson, which took place [illegible] evening at the Episcopal [illegible] he Ascension, which the [illegible] tended since she was a lit- [illegible] mony at 8 o'clock was per- [illegible] derick F. She wore her mother's wedding lace to trim the top of the bodice that showed above a short surtout of white plush, held together with strands of pearls. The plush that had trimmed her mother's wedding dress, now creamy with age, was used for the long court train that fell from the shoulders and finished at the top with a high standing collar of point lace.

Her veil was of tulle simply arranged with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Werner, who is a niece of the present Mrs. Morton, was maid of honor and Miss Kathleen Miller, whose engagement to Edward de Laureal Bakewell was recently announced, was bridemaid.

The bride's attendants wore pink frocks and carried pink roses.

Mr. Anderson had Russell E. Gardner Jr. for his best man. Mr. Bakewell was the groomsman and the ushers were the bride's brothers, Stratford, Charles H. and Leonard Matthews Morton and Howard Werner.

MISS ELIZABETH WEST WEISIGER

WHOSE ENGAGEMENT TO MR HAMILTON D. WHITELAW HAS BEEN ANNOUNCED

After the church service Mr. and Mrs. William Nisbet Matthews gave a dinner to the bridal party. The only other guest was Mrs. Matthews' cousin, Miss Vera Clark of Minneapolis, who is visiting her.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Anderson of 25 Marshall place, Webster Groves.

Mr. Anderson and his bride have gone away to spend their honeymoon, and when they return they will take possession of their own home in Glendale.

SATURDAY there will be two interesting weddings—Mill Mildred Stickney's in the afternoon and Miss Eloise McLeod's in the evening at 8:30 o'clock. Miss Stickney's marriage to Orion Willis will take place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. William C. Stickney of 46 Westmoreland place, and will be very quiet, as the Stickney family is in mourning. Miss Helen Morton will be the only bridemaid. Mr. and Mrs. W. Arthur Stickney, whose marraige took place in Boston Oct. 24, will return from their wedding trip in time to be present.

Ribbon flowers, buttonieres, corsages made to order, paper decorations, favors, specialty. Phone Forest 6276R for appointment.

Miss Eloise McLeod and Howard V. Stephens will be married at the McLeod mansion at 15 Kingsbury place. There will be a large reception after the ceremony and it will be a brilliant affair.

MISS NANCY GERARDI, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gerardi of the Westmoreland Hotel, and John W. Mackay Jr. were married yesterday morning at the parish house of the New Cathedral, at 8 o'clock.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Francis Gilfillan.

Mrs. John Hanson, the bride's sister, was matron of honor, and the bridegroom's brother, Frank Mackay, was his best man.

Only the nearest relatives and a few friends were present at the wedding, which was quite a simple affair.

The bride wore her traveling costume, and directly after the ceremony Mr. Mackay and she departed for the East for their wedding trip.

They have taken an apartment at 4500 McPherson avenue, which they will occupy upon their return.

Miss Stella Gerardi, who has been in New York for several years, came home for her sister's wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest C. Donnell of 5753 McPherson avenue are rejoicing over a daughter who arrived last Sunday and whom they have named Ruth.

Mrs. Donnell was, before her marriage, Miss Hilda Hays, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Hays.

MISS IRENE CLIFFORD, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Clifford of 22 Westmoreland place, and Wilbur B. Jones were married Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Woodrow officiated. A large reception followed the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and [illegible] Allen Wyman as matron of honor and Misses Louise Nugent, Helen Bonsack and Isabel Wyman as bridemaids. Jewett Jones served his brother as best man, and John Love, Oliver Clifford, Eugene Tittmann and Ralph Whitelaw were the groomsmen. The bride was gowned in white satin, trimmed with tulle. Her veil was of tulle and her bouquet of gardenias was tied with a bow of tulle. The matron of honor and three bridemaids were attired alike in short frocks of ping Georgette crepe with little capes of satin depending from the shoulders, silver girdles and silver slippers. They all carried sheaves of peachblow roses. The same color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the house decorations. Mr. and Mrs. Jones departed for their wedding journey, the objective point of which was not announced, and will be at home at 6147 Berlin avenue upon their return.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clifford of Pasadena, Cal., came to St. Louis for the wedding and in about ten days will return, accompanied by Mr. Clifford's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Clifford, and his sister, Mrs. Marion Clifford Blossom, to spend the winter.

THE REVIEW

GLEN ECHO CLUB had its annual harvest dinner Thursday evening when about 200 members and guests assembled for a jolly time.

The tables for dinner were arranged in the new sun room and the large dining room was used for dancing. The rooms were decorated with cornstalks and autumn leaves and from every corner a Jack-o'lantern beamed.

The columns were wreathed with vines with clusters of grapes and red apples hanging in them. Everything was suggestive of Hallowe'en.

All the women are supposed to wear calico dresses and sunbonnets on this occasion and the men to dress as farmers, but Thursday evening Stewart McDonald was one of the few country lads and some of the young matrons in the Fred Gardner party and one or two others wore aprons over their gowns.

During dinner a band of Hawaiian singers gave a cabaret.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Gardner entertained a large party, among whom were Messrs. and Mesdames Colin Selph, Jessie Carleton, Arthur Blumeyer, Pat O'Brien, Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Leggat.

Others present were Messrs. and Mesdames Harry Blodgett, Harry Papin, William Dee Becker, William C. Steigers, Robert Burns, S. T. G. Smith, Clarence Johnson, Frederick F. Campbell, Richard Blanke, William S. Thompson, Mrs. Celeste Clark Thompson, Misses Charlotte Boeckeler, Arline Clark, Messrs. James S. Bemis, Frank Tate and Julius Koekler.

THE Friday Dancing Club of Kirkwood, which has been one of the most delightful institutions of suburban social life for more than 40 years, has just issued invitations for four subscription balls, to be held during the season at the newly finished Kirkwood Country Club. The dances will be given on the evenings of Nov. 27, Jan. 1, Jan. 29 and Feb. 16.

Especially attractive features, two dance orchestras and probably a short cotillion will be introduced on the different evenings, though it has been definitely decided that the fourth dance, coming on Shrove Tuesday, will be a Mardi Gras Bal Masque, thus following the old established custom of the club, and terminating the ante-Lenten season.

The patronesses, each of whom will be a hostess for one, are Mmes. Eugene H. Abadie, William R. Barnhart, H. W. Beck, Davis Biggs, Trustin B. Boyd, Daniel Sidney Brown, George B. Compton, John R. Hair That Is Streaked With Gray

Restored to the Original Color in From Four to Eight Days. 25-Cent Trial Bottle Will Prove It.

There is a way to restore gray hair in from four to eight days. A way to bring back the original color without using dangerous lead and sulphur dyes, so greasy and disagreeable.

Hair treated in this way is light, clean and fluffy. It can be washed and curled as usual.

To prove this send for a 25-cent trial bottle of Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer and use it on a lock of hair as directed. Watch the gray disappear and the color return and then decide if this is not a miracle worker for all gray-haired people.

Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer

is a pure, colorless liquid, clear as water, and is as easy and dainty to use. Applied by simply combing it through your hair.

When sending for your trial package be sure to tell exactly what color your hair was before turning gray. Say whether it was black, dark brown, medium brown or light brown. Better still, enclose a lock in your letter.

Send the 25 cents in stamps and you will get the trial bottle, and a special comb by return mail. The regular $1.00 size bottle can be bought at your druggist's or we will fill your orde

WASHING WON'T RID HEAD OF DANDRUFF

Dissolve It, That's Best Way.

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to preserve your hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everyone notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

To Put on Flesh and Increase Weight

A Physician's Advice

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay-there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.

For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is a scientific combination of six of the most effective and powerful flesh-building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet wonderfully effective, and a single tablet eaten with each meal often has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by Judge & Dolph, Weipert Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co. 5 stores and other good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back—ADV.

IS YOUR HAIR RIGHT FOR THE NEW FALL STYLES?

You will delight in arranging your hair in the new and interesting modes of this season if you keep it perfectly soft and fluffy so that it appears naturally heavy. This will be a simple matter if you use the right shampoo. It is not advisable to use a makeshift but always use a preparation made for shampooing only. You can enjoy the best that is known for about three cents a shampoo by getting a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—ADV.

DENTIST AWARDED $3000 FOR STREET CAR INJURY

Plaintiff Sued for $56,000 Against Street Railway and Contracting Companies.

A verdict for $3000 was returned by a jury in Circuit Judge W[illegible]w's court yesterday in favor of [illegible]ank Wild, 3424 North Fourteenth [illegible]et, a dentist and oculist, against United Railways, Frank C. R[illegible] the James Black Masonry a[illegible] [illegible]racting Co.

[illegible] testified he was left-handed [illegible] that the injury had made it difficult for him to follow his profession, as it was awkward for him to use his right hand. As a result, his income, he testified, had dropped [illegible] $700 a month to $100 a month.

SEVEN-YEAR SENTENCE FOR ATTACK ON GIRL

Man Found Guilty in Case in Which Judge Ordered Grand Jury Inquiry.

A jury in Judge Jones' court yesterday found Frank Helderle, 21 years old, of 2138 South Broadway, guilty of participating in an attack on Miss Della Amend of 2011 Penn street. His punishment was fixed at seven years in the penitentiary.

This was the first case in which Judge Jones several weeks ago ordered a grand jury investigation after he was told that a conversation in a saloon near the Municipal Courts Building indicated that certain politicians were planning to "fix" a jury in Helderle's behalf.

BISHOP SMITH TO BE BURIED IN PITTSBURG

St. Louis Churchman, Dead in Washington, Was Known as Legal Mind of Board.

Bishop Charles W. Smith of 14 North King's highway, who died suddenly of heart disease yesterday in Washington, D. C., will be buried in Pittsburg, Pa., tomorrow. His daughter, Miss Edna Smith, and the Rev. William Wirt King, pastor of the Grace M. E. Church, Waterman avenue and Skinker road, departed at once to attend the funeral.

Bishop Smith died at the home of Justice Anderson of the District Supreme Court, where he was being entertained while attending a conference claimants' meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

He was born in Fayette County, Pa., Jan. 30, 1840, and was ordained in 1859. He served as pastor in many parts of the country. He was elevated to the bishopric of the Methodist Church in 1908, and immediately moved to St. Louis. Prior to this he had been pastor in Pittsburg for 20 years, a presiding elder four years, and editor of the Pittsburg Christian Advocate for more than 15 years.

He was active in all departments of church work, and was said to have had the "legal mind" of the Board of Bishops.

Appalling Waste of the European War

The gasoline to feed them had been exhausted and the whole 15 had been set on fire.

In war this was necessary, but it was none the less waste. When an army takes the field it must consider first its own safety; and to embarrass the enemy everything else must be sacrificed. It cannot consider the feelings or pockets of railroad and telegraph companies. It cannot hesitate to destroy a bridge, because that bridge cost half a million dollars. And it does not hesitate.

Some Cannot Be Restored.

Motoring from Paris to the front these days is a question of avoiding roads rendered useless because a broken bridge has cut them in half. All over France are these bridges of iron, of splendid masonry, some decorated with statues, some dating back hundreds of years, but now with a span blown out or entirely destroyed and sprawling in the river. All of these material things, motor cars, stone bridges, railroad tracks, telegraph lines, can be replaced. Money can restore them. But money cannot restore the noble trees of France and Belgium, 80 years old or more, that shaded the roads, that made beautiful the parks and forests. For military purposes they have been cut down, or by artillery fire shattered into splinters. They will again grow, but 80 years is a long time to wait.

Nor can money replace the greatest waste of all, the waste in "killed, wounded and missing." The waste of human life in this war is so enormous, so far beyond our daily experience, that disasters less appalling are much easier understood. The loss of three people in an automobile accident comes nearer home than the fact that at the battle of Sezanne 30,000 men were killed. Few of us are trained to think of men in such numbers; certainly not of dead men in such numbers. We have seen 30,000 men together only during the world's series or at the championship football matches. To get an idea of the waste of this war we must imagine all of the spectators at a football match between Yale and Harvard suddenly stricken dead. We must think of all the wives, children, friends affected by the loss of those 30,000 and we must multiply those 30,000 by hundreds and imagine these hundreds of thousands lying dead in Belgium, in Russia, in Alsace-Lorraine and within ten miles of Paris.

After the Germans were repulsed at Meaux and at Sezanne the dead of both armies were so many that they lay intermingled in layers of three and four deep. They were buried in long pits and piled on top of each other like cigars in a box. Lines of fresh earth so long that you mistook them for trenches intended to conceal regiments were in reality graves. Some bodies lay for days uncovered until they had lost all human semblance. They were so many you ceased to regard them even as corpses. They had become just a part of the waste, a part of the shattered walls, uprooted trees and fields plowed by shells. What once had been your fellow men were only bundles of clothes, shapeless, like scarecrows stuffed with rags.

The wounded were hardly less pitiful. They were so many and so quickly did they fall, that the ambulance service at first was not sufficient to handle them. They lay in the fields or forest sometimes for a day before they were picked up, suffering unthinkable agony. And after they were placed in cars and started back towards Paris the tortures continued. Some of the trains of wounded that arrived outside the city had not been opened in two days. The wounded had been without food or water. They had not been able to move from the positions in which, in torment, they had thrown themselves. The foul air had produced gangrene. And when the cars were opened, the stench was so fearful that the Red Cross workers fell back as though from a blow.

For the wounded Paris is full of hospitals—French, English and American. And the hospitals are full of splendid men. Each one had been physically fit, or he would not have been passed to the front, and those among them who are officers are finely bred, finely educated, or they would not be officers. But each matched his good health, his good breeding and knowledge against a broken piece of shell, or a steel bullet, and the shell or bullet won. They always will win. Stephen Crane called a wound a red badge of courage. It is all of that, and the man who wears that badge has all my admiration. But I cannot help feeling, also the waste of it. I would have a standing army for the same excellent reason that I insure my house; but, except in self-defense, no war. For war, and I have seen a lot of it, is waste. And waste is untelligent.

How to Get Rid of a Bad Cough

A Home-Made Remedy that Will Do It Quickly. Cheap and Easily Made

If you have a bad cough or chest cold which refuses to yield to ordinary remedies, get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents' worth), pour into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking a teaspoonful every hour or two. In 24 hours your cough will be conquered or very nearly so.

The above mixture makes a full pint—a family supply—of the finest cough syrup that money could buy—at a cost of only 54 cents. Easily prepared in 5 minutes. Full directions with Pinex.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup preparation takes right hold of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough in a way that is really remarkable. Excellent for bronchitis, spasmodic croup and winter coughs. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children like it.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex"—do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

To Get Rid of Wrinkles and Bad Complexions

It is more important now than during the period of profuse perspiration, to keep the pores clean. All cosmetics clog the pores. In cool weather this interferes greatly with elimination of waste material, injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Ordinary mercolized wax serves all the purposes of creams, powders and rouges, giving far better results. It actually peels off an offensive skin, at the same time unclogging the pores. Minute particles of scarf skin come off day by day, causing not the least pain or discomfort. Gradually the healthy, younger skin beneath peeps out, and in less than a fortnight you have a lovelier complexion than you ever dreamed of acquiring. Mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is spread on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings. One ounce usually suffices.

For removing wrinkles, without stopping the pores with pasty stuff, here's a never-failing formula: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this daily for awhile; every line will vanish completely. Even the first application gives surprising results.—ADV.

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

A Beautiful Complexion

As I regard it, there are only two essentials for a beautiful complexion—pure blood and the proper materials to treat the skin scientifically. Given these and time, with effort, and any woman under 50 can possess a beautiful, tinted complexion, making her admired by all mankind. Pleasant, generous thoughts make expressions divine.

Assuming the blood is pure, but the skin red, sallow, hard, dry, oily, muddy or blotched, then all that is required is scientific treatment and care. The treatment I have found best of all—and likewise hundreds of my correspondents—consists of gloriol glowene, a "water massage," gloriol balm, a vanishing cream, and gloriol emollient, a nourishing cream. With the treatment is full and detailed directions for use, to restore and preserve a beautiful skin and complexion. This is a treatment that all women, pretty or otherwise, should use, as it makes the "pretty even prettier."

Mrs. E. S. L. asks: "A friend of mine living in Denver informs me that after trying innumerable treatments for developing the bust without success, she learned through a physician that medicated venosol would. She says that in three months her bust increased from 30 to 38. Would you advise me to use medicated venosol or do you know anything about it?"

Answer: I know it to be one of the best and surest treatments, and advise any woman who wants to develop to use it as per directions with each sealed tube.

Consuella asks: "My blood is impure, my face pimply, greasy and muddy, and some few black-heads. Advise me."

Answer: There are many good blood purifiers, but medical experts assert that for clearing and whitening the skin of the face and hands there is only one reliable article and that is one-grain quinoxide tablets, sold in sealed tubes at druggists, with accompanying directions. These tablets may safely be used by you or any one.

Ione asks: "Can you recommend a formula for waving and curling the hair?"

Answer: I use regularly about once a week a splendid preparation called gloriol wavolene, and by my picture you can judge how beautifully it keeps my hair. I advise you to try it, as it is harmless and cannot be detected.

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large and retail department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Mrs. C. R. asks: "I notice that you have a wealth of beautiful hair. Do you use a tonic?

Answer: My hair was thin and poor luster until I began using one-half ounce hairwand powder mixed with a pint of water. In less than six months my hair grew eight inches and it has ever since been envied and admired. Use this tonic once or twice daily.

Mrs. L. C. R. asks: "Will you please advise some safe reduction treatment? In a year my weight has increased 40 pounds."

Answer: I have frequently answered this question, but repeat it for you. Obtain 5-grain phythyrin tablets in sealed package with full directions as to diet and use. I have received splendid reports on the efficiency of this treatment.

Miss C. B. asks: "How can one remove superfluous hair on face and arms?"

Answer: By obtaining a sealed original vial of fluvol powder and applying as per the directions with vial. It does not irritate the skin or scar it and is prompt in action, too.

Harry M. asks: "Will you kindly advise a cure for itching scalp, dandruff [illegible] falling hair?"

Answer: I used plain yellow minyol [illegible] years ago and have never had a return of the trouble. Physicians and professional hair dressers recommend it highly. It is on sale in 4-oz. jars.

Miss Elsie J. asks: "Can one overcome extreme thinness and an anaemic condition of the blood?"

Answer: A diet of fresh milk and beaten raw eggs made into a flavored, palatable drink, and taken once each day, together with 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets will add a pound a day in most cases. Thorough mastication and a half hour's rest after eating are very beneficial.

Miss Ella C. asks: "Will you please recommend a harmless but sure freckle remover?"

Answer: There is on sale an ointment called Madame Leslie's Freckle Balm which has proven to be a most excellent remedy for the removal of freckles, and I would advise you to try it.

Mrs. J. C. asks. "Do you recommend eggs for shampooing?"

Answer: No, I do not, because of the animal matter, which is likely to ruin the hair unless every particle is removed. Gloriol liquid shampoo is superior to anything I know of. It cleans the hair and scalp thoroughly and gives the hair a soft lustrous appearance.

Miss Arline asks: "Please advise if one should use face powder and what is the best?"

Answer: Face powder is almost essential and the gloriol face powder is [illegible] favorite. It comes in pink, white and brunette shades. It is pure and very fine.

You and all of my readers are invited to send for my booklet, "Beauty Truths." [illegible] gives you much valuable information on health and beauty. Send two stamps [illegible] mailing.—ADVERTISEMENT.

U. D. C. EXPECTS BIG ATTENDANCE AT STATE CONVENTION

Reception for Delegates Will Be Held Wednesday Evening; Election on Saturday.

The committee having in charge arrangements for the seventeenth annual convention of the Missouri division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, which meets here Nov. 5, 6, 7, says indications point to full delegations from all parts of the State. Mrs. Frank Gaiennie is chairman of the committee, which embraces the board of directors of the monument association and the presidents of each of the local chapters—the St. Louis, the M. A. E. McClure, the Confederate Dames and the Confederate Memorial Society.

One of the important matters to come before this year's convention is the revision of the constitution. Mrs. J. B. Gantt of Jefferson City is in charge of the revision committee.

It had been hoped that the unveiling of the Confederate monument in Forest Park might form a portion of the convention exercises, but the non-arrival of the shaft has forced a postponement of the ceremony.

Business sessions will be held each morning at the Planters Hotel. On the evening of Nov. 4 there will be an informal reception to the visiting delegates at the Jefferson Memorial. The next evening exercises will be held at St. John's M. E. Church, at which Mrs. Elliott Spalding of St. Joseph, State Librarian, will speak. Other speakers will be Rabbi Sale and the Rev. Father Phelan.

The first and second prize essays upon the subject "Bayonets and Swords Into Plowshares Wrought," will be read. Miss Anna Williams of Clinton was awarded first prize and Mrs. W. H. Hudson of St. Louis the second.

On Friday, Nov. 6, the hostess chapters will give a reception to the visiting delegates at the Buckingham Hotel. The convention will adjourn Saturday with the election of officers.

ARCHITECTS SEEK EXHIBIT

Wish Display Now in New York to Be Brought Here.

The St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects is making efforts to have the City Planning exhibit in New York brought to St. Louis.

The annual convention of the American Institute of Architects in Washington, D. C., on Dec. 2, 3 and 4, will have as delegates from St. Louis, E. C. Klipstein, William B. Ittner, Louis LaBeaume, C. F. A. Brueggeman and E. J. Russel.

Royal Arcanum to Give a Twentieth Century Minstrel Show.

All arrangements have about been completed for the entertainment and benefit to be given by the Royal Arcanum in aid of its hospital fund at the Odeon, Nov. 4, 5 and 6. The entertainment will be a minstrel show of the twentieth century order rather than of the program that was popular several decades ago. For instance, the "end men" will be society women of prominence and there will be 50 voices heard in the chorus. One of the features of the show will be the largest live dancing doll ever witnessed on any stage. This doll will be impersonated by a clever society woman. Vocal classes from all over the city have contributed to the chorus and the solos. Prominent among the singers will be Mrs. Georgia Lee Cunningham and Mrs. Stella K. Haines. The opening chorus will be in three parts.

Many jokes have been prepared that touch on St. Louisans and St. Louis life. It is expected that all of the 11,000 members of the Royal Arcanum and their friends in this jurisdiction will attend the big show.

OPEN FORUM ORGANIZED

Discussions to Be Held Upon Matters Affecting Labor.

An open forum for the working people of St. Louis has been organized to discuss the great radical movements of the day, particularly those affecting labor. The members will be allowed to ask questions of the speakers.

The first forum will be held this evening at 928 North Seventeenth street. Roger Baldwin will be the first speaker.

OPENS UP NOSTRILS, CLEARS HEAD, ENDS COLDS OR CATARRH AT ONCE

Instantly Relieves Swollen, Inflamed Nose, Head, Throat—You Breathe Freely—Dull Headache Goes—Nasty Discharge Stops.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lie awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed: nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—ADV.

WENT TO PRISON TO SAVE A FRIEND, HE SAYS YEARS LATER

Former Wilmington Fire Chief Tells Story First Time When Vote Is Challenged.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 31.—Hugh F. Sweeney, a former Chief of the Wilmington Fire Department and an active Democrat, answered a summons to the Superior Court as a result of a Republican challenge of his citizenship on the ground that he had been convicted of a felony.

His conviction followed the killing of a man at a firemen's picnic at Sea Breeze, N. J., on Aug. 14, 1872. He served four years and nine months in the penitentiary at Trenton. When Sweeney, now 65, took the stand he asked permission to make a statement. Judge Rice acquiesced, and Sweeney said:

"Forty years ago I went with the Fame fire company of Wilmington on an excursion to Sea Breeze. There was a fight and a man was struck on the head with a blackjack. He died from his injuries, and, though I was innocent of the deed, I was arrested and convicted of manslaughter. I served a sentence of six years, less 15 months off for good behavior.

Tells Who Struck Blow.

"I have never told the name of the man that dealt the blow, and I would not now were he alive. It was my friend, Lewis Legg, and I am not sorry I made the sacrifice for him. My right to vote has never been questioned before, and the only time there was ever any doubt of my citizenship was when I was elected Fire Chief."

Sweeney's story was heard with amazement, but with credence, despite the fact that Legg was a well-known business man at the time of his death. The immediate consequence of the declaration was the beginning of an effort to establish Sweeney's citizenship.

No one in the courtroom, when he told his story, doubted either Sweeney's version of the killing or the reason he advanced for having kept his secret so long. It is said that others than Sweeney knew the truth from the time of the killing, but that they sealed their lips through friendship, as Sweeney had done.

Will Come Into a Legacy.

The former Fire Chief lives in a cabin on the Christiana River. He will come into a legacy two years hence, when a trust created by his father, who died many years ago, comes to an end. In the meantime, his circumstances are straitened, but an independent habit of mind leads him to live within his own means.

He has a number of married children. He has been separated from his wife some time. A brother, who lived in Philadelphia, is a Catholic priest. A sister lives in Chester, Pa., where the Sweeney family formerly resided.

HOW TO HAVE LONG BEAUTIFUL HAIR

By a Hair Specialist.

It is not hard to stop the hair from falling out and promote its growth if the right means are used. There is no hope for the scalp where the hair roots are dead and the scalp is shiny. However, to those who have not reached this condition, immediate steps should be taken to stop it before it is too late. Here is a simple recipe which you can make at home, that will stop the hair from falling out, promote its growth and eradicate scalp eruptions and scalp humors. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine, and apply to the hair, rubbing with the finger tips, two or three times a week. These ingredients can be obtained at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home. This recipe not only promotes the growth of the hair, but darkens streaked, faded gray hair and makes it soft and glossy.—ADVERTISEMENT.

GIRL MAKES CROP RECORD

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 31.—Corn Patterson, 13 years old, of Caldwell, is the proudest girl in her neighborhood. Last fall she asked her father for a small plot of his farm near town on which she could experiment with wheat raising. Mr. Patterson allotted his daughter four acres. She plowed the ground, harrowed it and sowed the grain. She cared for it and watched it with an eager eye.

Recently the wheat was threshed. It averaged 47 bushels to the acre, the best yield in this part of Kansas. In only the cutting and threshing did Miss Patterson take no part.

SYMPHONY MUSIC FOR FIRST CONCERT WARLIKE IN PARTS

Max Zach, Recently Returned From Europe, Selects "Tragic Overture."

Max Zach, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orcehstra, has selected the "Tragic Overture" of Brahms for the first number of the program of the orchestra's opening concerts this season, Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, because of its appropriateness to the present tragedy of the European war.

Zach and several of the members of the orchestra are fresh from the scene of war. The theme of the overture is not warlike, except in parts.

The first program will be wholly orchestral and will contain, besides the Brahms overture, the tenth symphony of Schubert, a new symphonic poem by Smetana which will have its first St. Louis hearing at the Friday concert, and the "Tannhauser" overture. The same program will be given Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. It follows:

Brahms.............Tragic Overture, Opus 81
Schubert...............Symphony in C. No. 10
(Sometimes called No. 7.)
Smetana.............Symphonic Poem, No. 4
(From Bohemia's Groves and Meadows. New.)
Wagner..............Overture to Tannhauser

The orchestra will have its first rehearsal tomorrow morning in Aschenbroedel Hall. In personnel it is practically the same as last year, the only notable change being the resignation of Max Steindel and the engagement of Ludwig Pleier, the new European 'cellist, in his place. Steindel has remained in Chicago this season.

The first "Pop" concert this season will be given next Sunday.

A Foe to Tuberculosis

THE Journal of the American Medical Association (August 9, 1913), reviewing an article on "The Influence of Calcium Salts on Constitution and Health," published in a Berlin medical journal of high repute, said:

"They (the authors) report numbers of concrete instances in which patients gained in vitality and energy after taking calcium."

All doctors seem to agree that in tuberculosis and chronic throat and bronchial affections, lowered vitality and lost energy are conditions to be overcome before improvement can be hoped for.

One of the constituents of Eckman's Alterative is calcium (lime) so combined with other ingredients as to be easily assimilated by the average person. To this, in part, is due its widespread success in the treatment of these distressing and disastrous troubles.

By preventing, as well as arresting the ravages of the tubercle bacilli, Eckman's Alterative performs a service which even some ethical practitioners have acknowledged to their patients. We do not make wholesale claims for it, but our knowledge of what it has done warrants the statement that IT CAN HELP.

It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, hence a trial is safe. Should your druggist be out of it, you can order through him or direct from the makers.

Greatest Living Hamlet Vanishes When Forbes-Robertson Retires From Stage

Distinguished English Actor's Farewell Engagement in St. Louis Next Week an Epochal Event — Some Thoughts Concerning His Three Most Memorable Character Creations — A Career of Noble Achievement.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

ALTHOUGH I have seen the "farewell tours" of certain other famous players repeated again and again until they assumed something of the aspect of a more or less pathetic joke, I am inclined to believe that, when Forbes-Robertson bids us good-by at the close of his own "farewell" engagement in St. Louis next week, it will be good-by in sad reality.

There are three potent factors, one noble and two ignoble, that prevail to forbid a great player's voluntary retirement from the stage. The first of these is the artist's joy in the exercise of his art. The second is personal vanity. The third is avarice. These must needs be considered in weighing the chances of Forbes-Robertson's return to the footlights in years to come.

That this distinguished English player loves his art no one familiar with his devoted service to the drama may deny. It will not be a happy moment in his life when the curtain falls for the last time on a stage upon which, thereafter, he shall be seen no more. My own conviction, however, is that Forbes-Robertson thoughtfully has chosen the moment for his abandonment of a cherished task. If now he voluntarily denies himself a further performance of that task, two points of vital import to an artist who respects his art and himself are gained beyond peril of later losing. He leaves upon the world's mind the strongest impression of his task's best performance. He safeguards his art against the peculiar shame born of its once masterful exercise degenerated into impotence that becomes almost ridiculous even while poignantly deplorable.

Against a resolution thus justified, only the two ignoble factors of personal vanity and avarice can prevail to lead any great player into the pitiable folly that causes him to "lag superfluous on the stage." My own estimate of Forbes-Robertson places him as the most modest and unassuming actor whom I have ever known. Happily, he does not need money. Still more happily, if all the signs upon which a judgment of character is based hold good, he does not love money for money's sake. Undoubtedly he might easily earn another $100,000 or so on the American stage if he were willing to come for it in sheer greed of gold.

I do not believe he will thus come.

When I have seen Forbes-Robertson for the last time next week, I shall thereafter most vividly remember him in "Hamlet," in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" and in "Caesar and Cleopatra."

Here, as it so chances, is a curious trinity of character-creations that strangely converge toward one common center, radically dissimilar though they be. In his Hamlet we contemplate a marvelously luminous picturing of weak and ineradicable Doubt; of heart-breaking spiritual instability, of a wistfully helpless questioning of Life and of the eternal verities that gladly would resolve itself into sturdy Belief if sturdy Belief were possible to a temperament so waveringly self-cursed. In "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" we see an almost divine embodiment of simple Faith, gentle, loving, all-conquerful in tenderness, well-nigh supernatural in benignance of soul, with an unshakable trust in the kindred goodness of God and man, deeply serene and sure of its anchorage. And in the Caesar of Bernard Shaw's profoundly ironic "Caesar and Cleopatra" we encounter the Pagan cynic incarnate, grim, powerful, sardonic, a bit weary, yet chucklingly humorous on occasion, greatly frank and as greatly subtle, imperially self-sufficient, a formidable materialist who laugh's in Life's face with splendid Roman hardihood. The setting of these three characters—Hamlet, the Passer-By and Caesar—face to face in itself creates an intensely dramatic contrast in psychology.

And in these three characters, it seems to me, Forbes-Robertson's genius has attained its highest achievement and its most convincing revelation.

His Hamlet, however, marks the supremest height of Forbes-Robertson's gaining and, in the austere nobility of its conception and realization, constitutes the foundation stone upon which his fame as one of the immortals of the world's stage needs must rest.

It is, I take it, a truth beyond dispute that Forbes-Robertson stands in critical esteem as the greatest living Hamlet. With the one exception of Edwin Booth, by Nature's own equipment a Hamlet incarnate, I doubt if a more soul-moving Hamlet than that of Forbes-Robertson's playing has ever been seen. More fully than any other player of my knowing, he imbues the part with a certain futile loftiness, a curiously effective blend of innately royal dignity and dazed helplessness under Life's buffeting, that brings one to the final catastrophe with an infinite and unutterable pity for its tragic central figure, tugging at one's heartstrings. He makes irresistible the human appeal of his Hamlet. He excites in its behalf a tenderness of comprehending love such as no other Hamlet of our day has inspired. One remembers the figure of his creating with the keen emotional pang that would come from remembering a veritable flesh-and-blood lad of inexpressible anguish in the grip of a ruthless and man-mocking Fate. The profoundest tragedy of this greatest of Shakspeare's plays, the highest utterance of its ultimate cry of human bafflement in the web of Destiny, have never, I believe, been more completely attained than in Forbes-Robertson's playing.

And it is deeply significant that England, Germany and America are one in giving to the Hamlet of Forbes-Robertson a world-pre-eminence in greatness.

The Othello, Macbeth and Shylock of Forbes-Robertson's playing, while of sincere distinction in certain important essentials, have not so signally heightened his fame as has his Hamlet. His conception of Shylock, it seems to me, is at variance with Shakspeare's obvious intent in the racially prejudiced spirit which plainly dictated the merciless cartoon-drawing of that character.

When I saw Forbes-Robertson's first New York essayal of Shylock last November I ventured the assertion that he was at fault in so playing the part as to diminish to the lowest possible emphasis the greed of usury with which the character is so bitterly stamped and in magnifying instead the revelation of that nobler Shylock passion, the justified resentment of the Jew as one of a ruthlessly persecuted and unjustly stigmatized people. Prompt issue was taken with this view, yet still, in reading my Shakspeare, I find myself unable to concede the truthfulness of the Forbes-Robertson portrait along the lines of his New York performance. It seems to me that Shakspeare himself convincingly and with undisguised venom made it imperative upon the world to accept the ignoble chagrin of the baffled money-lender as the dominant motive of Shylock's hatred of the merchant Antonio and of his bloodthirsty lust for the forfeited pound of flesh from Antonio's body. My warrant for this belief I find in the keynote utterance which Shakspeare puts into the mouth of Shylock in the third scene of the first act of "The Merchant of Venice." This all-illuminating speech, an "aside" of Shylock's as he looks upon the entering Antonio, come to borrow the 3000 ducats needed by his friend Bassanio, reads as follows:

"How like a fawning publican he looks!

"I hate him, for he is a Christian;

"BUT MORE, FOR THAT, IN LOW SIMPLICITY,

"HE LENDS OUT MONEY GRATIS, AND BRINGS DOWN

"THE RATE OF USANCE HERE WITH US IN VENICE.

"If I can catch him once upon the hip,

"I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him!"

Here, it seems to me, and beyond all controverting, is Shakspeare's own statement of the "Shylock motive" controlling the central action of this drama and explaining Shylock across the footlights of the stage of all time. I do not understand how anyone can deny or seek to obscure this truth without intentionally distorting Shakspeare's own drawing of the Shylock figure. And I contend now, as I contended a year ago, that, just to this extent, Forbes-Robertson defaults in the fidelity of his portrait to the original Shakspearean conception and intent.

It is not at all a question of the truthfulness or justice of Shakspeare's own drawing. That has been settled long ago by the proper classification of Shylock as a particularly envenomed libel upon his race. But as Shylock the Jew was made by Shakspeare, so must he be played, precisely as Shakspeare's three other smashing melodrama villains, Iago, the Italian; Richard III, the Englishman, and Macbeth, the Scotchman, must be played—in all the blackness and unadulterated guile of their Shakspearean creation. There's no getting away from this truth.

Happily, however, for the sake of peace, no Shylock controversy is to be aroused by Forbes-Robertson's farewell offerings in St. Louis next week.

It is a reasonable certainty that every St. Louis lover of Shakspeare—and there are many such—will see the Hamlet of Forbes-Robertson's presenting during this engagement. It is good to hear, too, that there will be an especially large attendance of school children at the Saturday matinee performance of the play. Genuinely noble stage aspiration and achievement are rare now, as always. The upcoming generation should not be denied opportunity to contemplate drama in its highest expression. As for their elders—well, as life goes, it is one of the penalties of age that farewells to old friends departing must needs be voiced with ever-increasing frequency. Believe me when I say that the fall of the last curtain on Forbes-Robertson's "Hamlet" will send more than a little heart-ache to the gray-heads across the footlights.

A very great figure then vanishes from the stage.

Three Players Who Now Will Be Seen on St. Louis Stages

MOLLIE McINTYRE in "KITTY MACKAY" SHUBERT

ROSE MELVILLE in "SIS HOPKINS" AMERICAN

REGINA RICHARDS in "THE PRINCE of PILSEN" OLYMPIC

MOLLY M'INTYRE IN 'KITTY MACKAY' NOW AT SHUBERT

John W. Ransone in "Prince of Pilsen" at Olympic—Other St. Louis Playbills.

"KITTY MACKAY." Shubert. Original company, headed by Molly McIntyre. A dashing romantic comedy by Catherine Chisholm Cushing. Scored big New York success last season.

The play's story, of the mid-Victorian era, has for its heroine a bright little Scotch waif of Cinderella-like environment, but plucked later, by the strong hand of the British army, from her lowly hovel and placed in a patrician setting where she quickly proves her good birth and gentle breeding. The hero is a young soldier, Lieut. David Graham of the Coldstream Guards, a regiment now fighting gallantly on the Belgian frontier, and there are many complications before the hero and the heroine happily are united.

The company appearing with Miss McIntyre includes Margaret Nybloc, Eugene O'Brien, Eleanor Scott L'Estelle, Henry Stephenson, Kate Wingfield, Ernest Stallard and others.

"THE PRINCE OF PILSEN." Olympic. Return engagement of Pixley and Luders' popular musical comedy, which has played prosperously every season since its first production a number of years ago.

The present company is headed by John W. Ransome in his original role of Hans Wagner, the susceptible old Cincinnati brewer, and others of its former cast are Edward T. Mora, baritone, as the dashing young Prince, and Dorothy Delmore as the diminutive bellboy. Among the newcomers are Eda von Luke, as the pretty city widow; G. Burke Scott, as the American Lieutenant; Geraldine De Rese, as the vivacious Sidonie; Claudia Rogers, as the demure Nellie Wagner; Regina Richards as the college girl, and others.

A big chorus an augmented orchestra and an entirely new scenic and costume production are announced.

ROSE MELVILLE in "Sis Hopkins." American. Revival of greatly successful comedy-drama of character-types with its famous original star in the role of her creating and long playing. The play has been a favorite with the American public for 14 years and Miss Melville in its title role has become a household word. An excellent cast and a picturesque scenic investiture are promised.

"THE FAIR COED." Park. Musical comedy, its book by George Ade, in which Elsie Janis, for whom he wrote the piece, scored one of her most emphatic successes. Mabel Wilber, prima donna of the Park Opera Company, is cast in the Elsie Janis role, which gives exceptional opportunity for the best revelation of her sweet voice, cleverness and versatility.

A newcomer in the cast is Sara Edwards, character contralto, once a favorite member of the old Delmar Garden company and later appearing in support of DeWolf Hopper and other musical comedy stars. Royal Cutter, Louise Allen and Roger Gray are particularly well cast, and others in important roles are Matt Hanley, the new comedian; Carl Haydn, tenor; Chester A. Beach and Edward A. Smith. The chorus is expected to distinguish itself in several big drills and song numbers and a brilliant scenic and costume production is announced.

"STOP THIEF!" Shenandoah. Carlyle Moore's briskly diverting farce excellently presented by The Players, with Marion Ruckert and Mitchell Harris in its leading roles and Leonora Bradley, Robert McClung, Henry Hull, John Maurice Sullivan, Eda von Buelo, Carson Davenport, Louis Calhern, Elsa Rendel and Anna Berger Price effectively cast.

VAUDEVILLE. Columbia. Bill headed by Trixie Friganza, popular singing comedienne, in new songs and original humor.

VAUDEVILLE. Grand. Bill headed by "The Stage-Struck Kids," four boys and five girls, in a singing, dancing and comedy sketch.

VAUDEVILLE. Hippodrome. Bill headed by the De Art Girls in "A Night at Monte Carlo.

BIG JUBILEE CO. Princess. Company, headed by Pat White, Irish comedian, in his famous role of Casey. Cast also includes Jack Davis, Tom O'Neil, Anna Grant, Red Feather, the Indian prima donna, and others. Election returns read from the stage Tuesday night.

"GARDEN OF GIRLS." Standard. Musical comedy, featuring Andy Gardner, and telling story of the rivalry between an American flower girl and an English society woman at a carnival in Germany. Burlesque entitled "Patsy at the Beach With a Peach," also presented.

BIG JUBILEE BURLESQUE. Gayety. Company headed by Jack Reid, assisted by Dorothy Vaughn. Will present a new musical farce-comedy entitled "Elected," also high-class vaudeville.

"THE SCALES OF JUSTICE." New Grand Central. Photoplay featuring Paul McAllister and Jane Fearnley. A comedy reel and pleasing music complete the program.

"DAMAGED GOODS." Garrick. Return engagement of Eugene Brieux's drama of disease.

"BEHIND THE SCENES." West End Lyric. Frohman Famous Players photoplay, featuring Mary Pickford.

DUSTIN FARNUM in "The Virginian," Juniata. Photoplay version of Owen Wister's great Western drama. Sunday afternoon and evening and Monday.

SINGLE-NIGHT SALE FOR OPERA OPENS TOMORROW

Three Downtown Ticket Offices Established for Convenience of Public—Brilliant Two-Weeks' Repertoire.

The single-performance seat sale for the San Carlo Opera Company's engagement at the Odeon, which, under the auspices of the Grand Opera Committee, will begin on Monday evening, Nov. 9, opens tomorrow and seats may be secured at three downtown offices—Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney; the Famous-Barr Co., and Stix, Baer & Fuller.

Seats will be on sale for all the operas and for the benefit of those in whose minds the repertoire is not quite clear, and to enable them to purchase their seats without the likelihood of error, the list of operas, with dates as to guest performances, special club nights, and the production of "Faust" at the Lindell Theater, Grand and Hebert, on Saturday, Nov. 14, is given herewith. It should be noted that on Tuesday of the first week the San Carlo organization, owing to the occurrence of another event at the Odeon, will be out of the city. There will be no opera on Thursday of the second week, for similar reasons. The repertoire is:

FIRST WEEK.

Monday, Nov. 9 .... Rigoletto
(Guest night, with Sig. Constantino.)
Tuesday—No opera.
Wednesday—
Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci
(Italian night—All boxes sold.)
Thursday (matinee) .... Barber of Seville
Thursday (evening) .... La Traviata
(Art League night.)
Friday .... Aida
(Guest night, with Sig. Constantino.)
Saturday (matinee) ...... Tales of Hoffman
Saturday (evening) .... Faust
(At Lindell Theater, Grand and Hebert, under the auspices of the North St. Louis Business Men's Association.)

SECOND WEEK.

Monday .... Carmen
(Guest night, with Mme. Gerville-Reache.)
Tuesday .... Masked Ball
(City Club and charity ball night.)
Wednesday (matinee) .... La Traviata
Wednesday (evening) ..Lucia di Lammermoor (Million Club night.)
Thursday—No opera.
Friday .... Il Trovatore
(Guest night, with Mme. Gerville-Reache.)
Saturday (matinee) .... Martha
Saturday (evening)—To be announced later.

Naturally, an unusual interest attaches to the "guest" performances of Signor Florencio Constantino, the distinguished tenor, engaged especially for the event, and Mme. Gerville-Reache, the contralto, who, upon past occasions, has sung herself into the hearts of St. Louis music lovers.

Constantino has won some of the highest honors upon the opera stage in the identical roles he will sing here—those of the Duke of Mantua in "Rigoletto," and Radames in "Aida."

Mme. Gerville-Reache is acknowledged as the greatest Azucena of the present day. As Carmen she has achieved enviable triumphs upon the leading European and American opera stages,

With Mme. Ester Adaberto, the Italian prima donna, as Leonora in "Trovatore," and Mme. Edvige Vaccari, the little Forentine coloratura as Micaela, in "Carmen," these two performances stand out with especial atractiveness, while Constantino will also have as Gilda, in "Rigoletto," Mme. Vaccari and Mme. Adaberto will appear with him in the "Aida" title role, which she sang at Covent Garden, London, and at the Metropolitan, New York, with Signor Caruso.

The appearance of Mme. Vicarino on Art League night is also of exceptional interest to lovers of the voice in the third octave. Vicarino has been said by eminent critics to be unexcelled in the character of Violetta, which she will sing here on Thursday evening, Nov. 12, ond on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 18.

The tenor section of the San Carlo forces this year is of exceptional quality, embracing, besides Signor Constantino, such notables as Calvatore Sciaretti, Giuseppe Agostini, Fausto Castellani and Alferdo Graziani.

GRAY HAIR MADE LUSTROUS, NATURAL'

Radiant Youthful Color Comes Back Quickly. Nature Does It.

"Here's something that will make you ten years younger in ten days," said a well-known druggist in town as he handed a bottle of Hay's Hair Health to a woman who was prematurely gray.

You can't get away from it—gray hair does make one look old. Science has come to the rescue and makes it possible to do as the druggist says—restore gray hair and look ten years younger.

Hay's Hair Health does it—you simply apply this dainty, refined toilet preparation to your hair and it causes the oxygen in the air to so act upon each gray or faded strand that it actually comes back to the dark, lustrous color of youth. It doesn't stain, for it isn't a dye—simply causes nature to restore the natural color you so much desire. The good old-fashioned ingredients contained in Hay's Hair Health strengthen, revitalize and beautify the hair.

It makes the color so even, and leaves a gloss so natural, that no one will know you are using anything on your hair. Any person who has thin, gray or scraggy hair and wishes to restore it to its fullness of color and luxuriance, should go at once to his druggist and get a 25c, 50c or $1.00 bottle of Hay's Hair Health. The Philo Hay Specialties Company, manufacturers, of Newark, N. J., authorize them to refund full price to any dissatisfied purchaser.—ADV.

STELLA DE METTE WILL SING WITH SAN CARLO STARS

St. Louis Prima Donna Is Cast as Lola in "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Arrangements have just been perfected by which Miss Stella de Mette, the St. Louis girl who won her way, some years ago, to the distinction of an engagement as one of the leading mezzo-sopranos of the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York, now will be heard during the season of the San Carlo Opera Company at the Odeon, opening Monday evening, Nov. 9.

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, Miss de Mette will appear as Lola in the San Carlo company's production of "Cavalleria Rusticana," a part in which she has scored memorable successes in this country and abroad. She has sung Lola many times in Italy, also at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City, and with Florencio Constantino in South America, and, while it is not one of her biggest roles, she improves its opportunities to the utmost. Miss de Mette is one of the San Carlo company's favorite mezzo-sopranos this season.

In the cast of "Cavalleria" she will be heard in company with Mme. Ester Adaberto as Santuzza, Guiseppe Agostini as Turridu, Angelo Antola as Alfio and Alice Sedelmayer as Lucia. The opera is to be given on "Italian Night," linked in a double bill with "Pagliacci." Miss de Mette has been heard here in concert, but never before in grand opera.

BURTON HOLMES NOW TO SHOW WAR ZONE SCENES

"Germany and Austria" and "The Allied Powers" Will Close His Travelogue Season.

The two final Burton Holmes travelogues in the regular season at the Odeon will be devoted to the nations now involved in bloody conflict.

In the first of these, next Tuesday night, Mr. Holmes will discuss "Germany and Austria," from Berlin to the Tyrol, his tour having been made just before the outbreak of the war. While he takes a neutral stand, he feels that a new Germany and a new Austria will be born of the battles now being fought, much being gained and much worth while being lost. Old landmarks will be gone or will bear new meanings. His picture records are particularly striking.

One week from next Tuesday night Mr. Holmes closes his present St. Louis season with a companion travelogue on "The Allied Powers."

PAVLOWA COMES DEC. 14.

Anna Pavlowa, the famous Russian danseuse, with her own company and symphony orchestra, will give two performances at the Odeon on Monday afternoon and evening, Dec. 14. She will present six new ballets, with specially designed scenery and costumes; also a modern ballroom soiree, danced by Mlle. Pavlowa and M. Ivan Clustine, followed by the entire company, dancing, in evening dress, in a scene said to be an exact reproduction of the ballroom of one of the leaders of New York's smart set.

NEWMAN TRAVEL-TALK SERIES.

The five travel-talks to be given on successive Thursday evenings by E. M. Newman at the Odeon, beginning Nov. 19, have as their themes "Egypt," "The Holy Land," in two parts; "The Riviera to Paris" and "Berlin." In the two last named the Paris and Berlin of war times will be pictured and described, the former under the early gathering of the war cloud, the latter as the "war center" after hostilities opened.

FORBES-ROBERTSON REPETOIRE.

The Forbes-Robertson repertoire for his farewell engagement in St. Louis, opening at the Shubert Theater on Monday evening of next week, is: Monday night and Saturday matinee, "Hamlet;" Tuesday and Wednesday nights, first St. Louis production of "The Light That Failed;" Wednesday afternoon and Saturday night, "Passing of the Third Floor Back;" Thursday and Friday nights, George Bernard Shaw's satirical comedy, "Caesar and Cleopatra." Miss Laura Cowie will appear in all the leading feminine roles.

Winthrop Ames has engaged Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon to play the leading roles in "The Children of the Earth," the prize play by Alice Brown, which he soon will produce in New York.

The Lieblers now are organizing the American company which will support Phyllis Neilson-Terry, the English actress, during her New York engagement, which opens early next month. They have selected Henry E. Dixey to play Malvolio and Eben Plympton for the role of Sir Toby Belch in "Twelfth Night," which will introduce Miss Terry as Viola to her American public.

George M. Cohan now is writing a farce for the starring of his chum, Willie Collier, in whose behalf he temporarily renounces his determination to devote himself only to more serious dramatic work.

"Ireland a Nation" is the title of a big film drama by Walter MacNamara, author of "Traffic in Souls," which has just scored a smashing success at the Forty-forth Street Theater in New York City. It opens with the Irish Parliament in session for a consideration of the famous Act of Union and then brings Irish history down to the passage of the home rule bill. A mixed quartet sings Irish songs during the performance.

William Faversham and Mlle. Gabrielle Dorziat have scored a great success in "The Hawk," adapted from the gripping French drama, "L'Epervier," in which they now are appearing at the Shubert Theater in New York to crowded houses.

"Blood Will Tell"

The Heroes of the War.

"Blood will tell," is an axiom that in all the ages has never been gainsaid. Every man who does a brave, heroic act carries within his veins a quality of blood that urges and sustains him. No matter whether he inherits it from a long line of famous ancestors or from the sound and healthy constitution of his immediate parents, whose only distinction is honorable toil and a simple, virtuous life.

It matters little where or how you obtain it, but it matters all the world that by some means you possess good blood. Good blood is first, last and always the making of manly men and womanly women. It is the source of all courage, virtue and happiness.

A new man can be made out of one that's "used up," bilious and dyspeptic. It's done by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It starts the torpid liver into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses, repairs and strengthens the system, and restores health and vigor. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, and builds up flesh and strength. It's the only Blood and Liver Remedy that's guaranteed, in every case, to benefit or cure. If it doesn't do all that's claimed for it, the money is promptly refunded. But it keeps its promises—that's the reason it can be sold in this way.

It is not a secret remedy, for its ingredients are printed on wrapper.

You only pay for the good you get.

"Discovery" strengthens Weak Lungs, relieves Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs and kindred affections.

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Advisor, bound in cloth, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of wrapping and mailing only. Address: Doctor Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.—ADV.

This Wife and Mother Wishes To Tell You FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By all Means Write to Her and Learn how She did it.

For over 20 years Jas. Anderson of 10 Pearl Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over twelve years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.

Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished by simple home treatment which she now desires every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, to know all about, for she feels that others can do just as she did.

The treatment can be given secretly if desired and without cost, she will gladly and willingly tell what it is. Therefore every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks however, and that is that you do not send money for she has nothing to sell. Simply address your letter with all confidence, to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope.

100,000 BALLOTS TO BE REPRINTED TO ALLOW FUSION

State Supreme Court Orders Work Done, Saying Two-Party Candidates Cannot Use Stickers.

FIVE NAMES REPEATED

Several County Office Seekers Will Be Voted for by Both Democrats and Progressives.

An order of the State Supreme Court yesterday directed County Clerk William Selbel of Clayton to print ballots for the election Tuesday on which the names of five candidates will appear on both the Democratic and Progressive lists.

Selbel said after his attorneys notified him of the order, that about 100,000 ballots will have to be reprinted, as his reading of the court order does not sanction the use of stickers to be pasted on the ballots that are defective.

The decision of the Court declares an anti-fusion act of the 1913 Legislature to be invalid because it received but 71 votes, when 72 was the required constitutional majority. The act forbade the printing of names on more than one party ticket.

The fusion candidates who will now have their names printed on both the Democratic and Progressive ballots are: A. H. Werremeyer, Progressive, candidate for County Collector; William H. Tegethoff, Democrat, candidate for Representative, First District; G. L. Frazier. Democrat, candidate for Representative Second District; William P. Morgan, Democrat, candidate for Judge of County Court, First District, and William Dierker, Democrat, candidate for constable, Carondelet Township.

Dierker entered suit in the lower court but did not carry the case to the Supreme Court and his name was not included in the order. Selbel said today, however, that he would apply the court ruling to Dierker's case if it applied to the others.

JUDGE GARY PRAISES NEWSPAPER MEN'S WORK

Head of U S. Steel Corporation Says He Has Always Found Them Truthful and Fair.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 31.—A tribute to the honesty and fairness of the American newspaper man was paid last night by Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, at a dinner given in his honor by the Birmingham newspaper club.

"I have been obliged to come into contact with the newspaper fraternity for the last 15 years," said Judge Gary, "and from my experience I can say that if business men treat newspaper men right they are always truthful and fair. My experience has been that if you will treat the newspaper men fair—will be frank and honest and give them the truth and the opportunity to publish the truth, they will do it honestly. If you are untruthful and unfair, then you may expect to take the consequences."

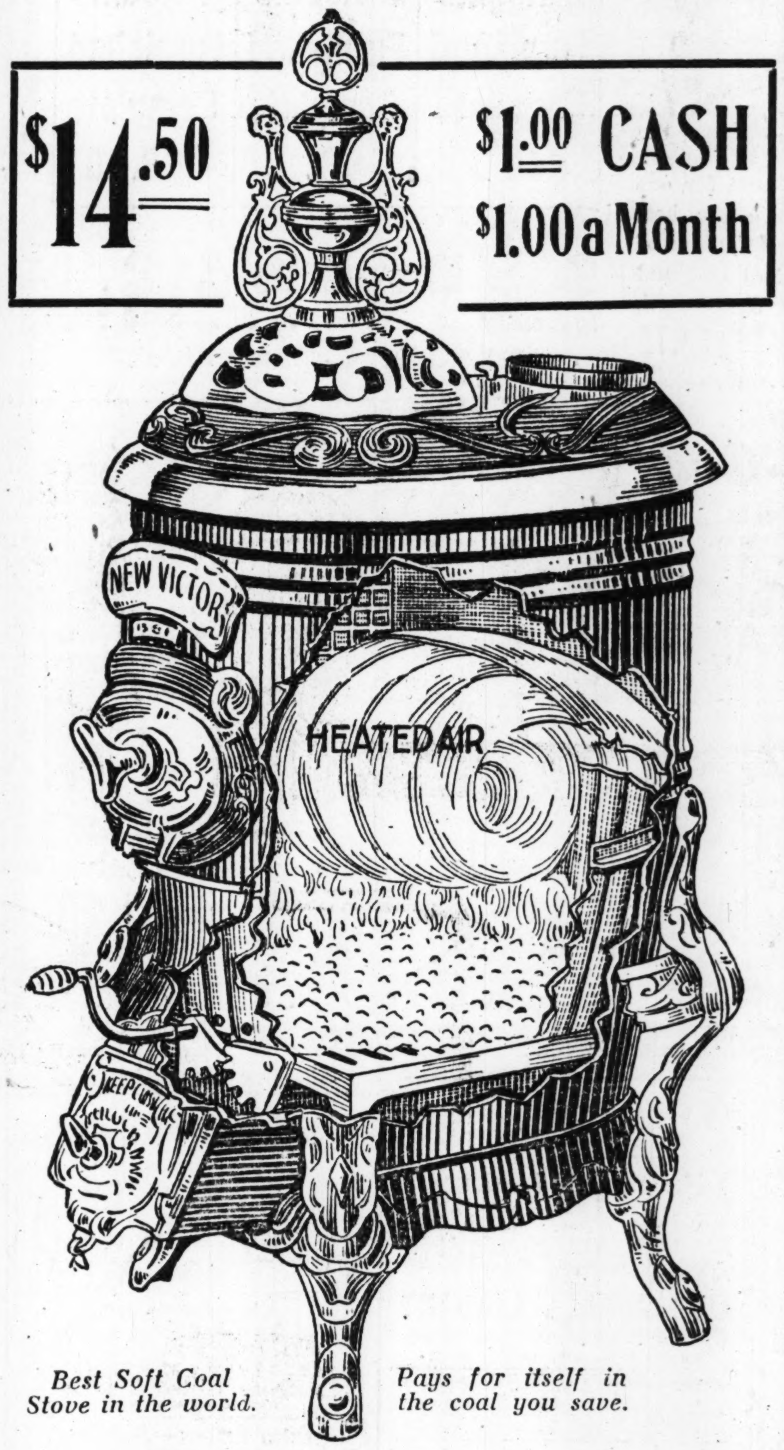
New Victor Overdraft Heater

A New Idea in Heating Stove Construction

$14.50 $1.00 CASH $1.00 a Month



Best Soft Coal Stove in the world.

Pays for itself in the coal you save.

Burns Hard or Soft Coal, Coke, Wood or Slack

THIS new Victor Overdraft Heater is constructed on an entirely new principle—will burn any kind of fuel—and will get more actual heat out of every pound of fuel than any other stove on the market.

Burns the Smoke and Consumes the Gas

OTHER stoves allow half the fuel to escape up the chimney in the form of smoke or gas—the overdraft principle on which this stove is built utilizes as fuel all the gases—makes this stove practically smokeless—and explains why it consumes only half the usual amount of fuel.

Heats the Floor as Well as the Room

THIS is the only soft coal stove that heats the floor of the room—the inverted conical base radiates the heat down as well as outward—making it even better than a baseburner, which only sends the heat to the floor under the stove.

Will Hold Its Fire 24 to 36 Hours

WITH this stove the rate of combustion can be perfectly regulated by its drafts—the fuel can be made to burn fast or slow—and the fire can be kept going for 24 to 36 hours without touching the stove or adding fuel.

Don't think of buying a heater anywhere until you have seen this wonderful Victor Overdraft Heater at $14.50.

Armageddon

A Socratic Debate

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

GLAUCON: Ah, Socrates. We were hoping to meet you. Now that Turkey has also entered the war, we scarce know what we are to expect, and feel the need of your more mature opinion.

Socrates: That is at once sweet and flattering of you, Glaucon. If you are in need of what I think of the situation, I in turn am in need of an audience by means of which I can bring out some things as yet indefinite in my mind. I will say to begin that while we have sometimes joked about Armageddon, as we did, for instance, when Rooseveltius ran for a third term, we have perhaps never dreamed that we should ever come so near standing there as we do today. Ten countries are engaged in the war now, among them most of the powerful and enlightened nations of the earth. We are warned, and no doubt with reason, that the war is as yet young, and that we shall see it involve as many countries again. If that is to be true, it is difficult to see how anyone can keep out of it, saving, perhaps, those minor countries which have nothing at stake. Let us say that all the nations of Europe, at any rate, are drawn into the war. Would it not presumably become the business of both sides to line the rest of the world up on one side or the other as fast as possible?

Glaucon: No doubt of it.

Socrates: Very well. I sometimes think that it would not be possible to involve our own country, but I am not so sure. The ease with which one nation after another slips into the conflict keeps me in almost continual astonishment. It is difficult for me to see what some of those countries have to gain by fighting, or what political philosophy could have moved them to do as they did. Take the Turks, for instance. What remains of Turkey in Europe is precarious at best. It only remains by sanction of the powers of Europe, and narrowly escaped being swept away in the war with the Balkans. I have not yet seen any explanation of Turkey's participation in the war that explains what she can hope to gain, and I think the general impression is that her action has disposed of Turkey in Europe forever.

Thrasymachus: I think so.

Socrates: I dare say. I have seen it intimated that Turkey has no thought of immediate territorial advantage in Europe, but proposes to start a holy war in which Mohammedans everywhere will rise against Christians and ultimately win the world for Mohammed. While I do not take that very seriously, I confess that I could hardly be surprised by anything that might happen since Germany, England and France went to war. If countries like those cannot restrain themselves, having no very good reason to fight, what must we think of the motive afforded by a religion differing from our own in a part of the world where civilization has not reached any great heights?

Polemarchus: I should call it irresistible.

Socrates: Unfortunately, the Christian religion is not setting a very good example to other religions, either.

Glaucon: No, it is not.

Socrates: Any Mohammedan or Buddhist, however advanced, might very well say, "The Christians, who have so many ideals, are all fighting, so it cannot be anything that we should not do, or anything that is unseemly of any of the great religions."

Thrasymachus: Not that a Mohammedan or a Buddhist would speak like that.

Socrates: Of course not. Only for the sake of argument, my dear Thrasymachus. The Moslems would, of course, speak of us as being dogs; or that is, I suppose they would. It is so reported of them always, though I know no Moslems and do not know if they do in truth always spit and say "Dogs!" when they speak of us Christians. The point is that if they should go to war because they want to see their religion prevail, we can scarcely speak of them as being fanatics or anything of that sort, having seen our own Christian nations go to war for even less reason that that.

Glaucon: No. As a matter of fact, I cannot see why they would not have the better of us. They at least would be fighting for something, where the Christian countries of Europe are not fighting for anything, so far as I can make out. Certainly France and Germany are not fighting for anything, the casus belli between Germany and England is incredible, and beyond fighting to see who can whip there does not seem to be anything definite in the purposes of any of the combatants. We are told that we [illegible] no appreciation of those delicate political balances which precipitate war in Europe, but that is all bosh. We do see them, and what is more, we know them for what they are—the very shadows of militarism and nothing else. That same delicacy would walk like a specter upon our Canada border if we were both fairly sleeping on our arms waiting for a chance at each other.

Socrates: Well said, my dear Glaucon. You are a philosopher, that is all. Only a philosopher talks like that. But to return to Armageddon itself. If all Europe and parts of Asia and Africa engage in the war, not to speak of the colonies of combatants everywhere, where would the war end and how long would it last?

Polemarchus: God knows.

Socrates: You may well say so, Polemarchus. Keeping out of it ourselves, as I hope we may be able to do, we should behold a spectacle beside which the wildest conception of Armageddon would look like a football game.

Thrasymachus: Truly.

Socrates: So be it. Now let us all walk around on this planet and enjoy it a little longer before its maker gets disgusted with us all and kicks it over the moon.

"Skeleton" in Clothes Couldn't Dupe Newsie, Houston Says

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.

SLENDER persons formed the subject of conversation at a social recently when David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, smiled and unfolded the following yarn about a certain doctor.

The doctor, it seems, was very thin—so thin, in fact, that he almost had to use a microscope to see himself in a looking glass. One afternoon a small newsboy ventured into the office. On opening the door to the outer room he was suddenly confronted with a grinning skeleton. A wild, terrified yell, and a second later the boy was in the middle of the street panting for breath.

"That's all right, little boy!" soothingly said the doctor, who hastened to the door on hearing the yell. "Come in here and I'll buy one of your papers."

"No you don't!" was the positive rejoinder of the boy. "You can't fool me even if you have got your clothes on!"

Telltale Earmarks of Husband's Housekeeping

ONE of the guests at a dinner party in the capital recently was telling how beautifully he could keep house while his wife was away, when Judge Walter Sanborn of the United States Circuit Court spread his features in a broad smile. He hastily explained he was not laughing at the guest—merely at the recollection of the case of Smith. Here's the story:

Sometime since, while on a shopping tour, Mrs. Smith met her friend, Mrs. Brown, and during the talk that followed the former said she had been spending two weeks with a sister in a distant town.

"While I was away," continued Mrs. Smith, "my husband looked after the house and insisted on cooking his own meals."

"You don't really mean it!" exclaimed Mrs. Brown, wonderingly. "How did he make out?"

"He says he did splendidly," answered Mrs. Smith, with something akin to a sigh, "but I noticed that during my absence the parrot learned to cuss."

Stimson's Farmer Friend Shows Talent in Use of a Mudhole

CONVERSATION at a recent social seance turned to the great wisdom and business acumen displayed by some farmers, when F. J. Stimson recently named First United States Ambassador to Argentina, recalled the following:

Not long since, the Ambassador said, a man from the city called on a friend in the pumpkin zone, and while being shown the farm they came across a large mudhole in the middle of the road.

"What's the matter?" smiled the farmer as the city man paused and looked at the hole in wonder. "Didn't ye never see anything like that afore?"

"I am certainly surprised to see it here," responded the city man. "Why in the world don't you have it filled in?"

"'Cause I ain't choppin' off a good thing," was the prompt rejoinder of the farmer. "I have made almost enough money hauling auterbiles out ' that mudhole ter pay the mortgage on the farm."

Jelly Not at All Dangerous to "Boss" Barnes' Little Friend

AT a political meeting the other day the talk topic turned in time to nourishing food. William Barnes Jr. of New York, the one-time Republican leader, at once recalled the following:

"Some time ago Green called on his neighbor, White, and while the two were having a gabfe in the living room, the baby rambled in with his chubby fist clasped full of bread and jelly.

"'Say, old man,' remarked Green glancing the youngster, 'do you think so much bread an jelly is good for that baby?'

"'Why not?' responded White. 'There is anything in bread that will hurt a baby, is ther

Our Birthday!

Twenty-two years ago this business was housed in a little single store on Benton street with hardly enough room to show one line of goods properly, but it had a purpose, that of serving, as well as brains, experience and energy possibly could, the person wanting simply a spool of thread and the person wanting a piece of silk or any other thing of the highest class. Today, through growth and development, this idea has taken concrete form in a building covering the entire block of Washington to St. Charles, between Eighth and Ninth streets, with seven stories and basement and with every modern convenience for the shopper and every thought and attention given to the contentment and elevation of its employes. Today, twenty-two years after the first sale was made in the little store, this is acknowledged a store great among the great ones and is acknowledged more than this. For people have come to know it as a store where rare and uncomparable bargains are to be had at the lowest possible prices.

5000 Beautiful Souvenirs

One of these valuable souvenirs will be given away free Monday to each customer making a purchase of one dollar or more. Present your sales check at Main and Second Floor Stamp Booths and receive a beautiful sale souvenir.

The person getting OUR MARKED COIN will immediately look and see the year it was coined. Suppose it be 1850, they must look in the window for the corresponding number. Each coin entitles holder to a prize, so watch your number. This cake will be displayed in one of our Washington Av. windows.

STREET RAILWAY CANNOT BE FORCED TO EXTEND LINES

Commission Can Only Instruct Company to Apply to City for Permission to Lay Tracks.

ROUTE CHANGES OPPOSED

Civic Organization Representatives Say Merchants Block Proposed Car Track Extensions.

Chairman Atkinson of the Missouri Public Service Commission in a statement at the hearing on street railway service at the Planters Hotel yesterday made clear to the advocates of improved conditions that the commission is powerless to force the United Railways to put in additional loops or to make extensions of its lines.

Atkinson told the representatives of several civic organizations that the commission can only instruct the company to apply to the Municipal Assembly for permission to lay tracks and that the new loops in the downtown districts and extensions of lines recommended by Chief Engineer Harrop of the commision will depend solely on the granting of authority by the city for the new work if the commission decides to recommend it.

Merchants Oppose Changes.

Representatives of the organizations had expressed the hope that the commission had the power to force needed extensions, and said after the hearing that they feared the extensions would not be built if authority must be obtained from the city. They said that neighboring interests usually defeated such proposed extensions or changes of routing because of a failure to agree on routes, and that efforts in the past to get authority for an extension of the Fourth street line west on Lafayette avenue from Grand avenue failed because some merchants on South Grand avenue did not want the car line taken from them.

Harrop's report recommended tracks on Tenth, Eleventh and St. Charles street and Lucas avenue to provide additional loops, as well as a loop over Lindell avenue and Grand avenue from Channing and Olive street. Extensions of the Hamilton, Jefferson, Taylor, Grand, Seventh and Fourth lines were recommended.

The commission adjourned at noon yesterday to a date to be announced later, when additional witnesses on street-car conditions will be heard.

Objects to Harrop's Report.

Ephraim Caplan, attorney for the West End Business Men's Association, placed several witnesses on the stand yesterday to object to parts of Harrop's report. L. S. Haslam, an attorney and member of the Committee on Streets of the Civic League, was the principal witness. He opposed the laying of tracks on Lindell avenue and on Tenth and Eleventh streets. He urged the Hodiamont cars should be routed north on Twelfth street from Locust to Washington avenue and thence west to Thirteenth street, and that the tracks on Locust street between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets should be taken up.

He also urged a change in the Olive-Maryland line, by which Maryland cars would be routed south on Euclid avenue from Maryland to Laclede avenue, and make use of the Laclede loop in Forest Park. He said the system of running the cars backward for a block on Maryland avenue, as now in effect, is dangerous and should be stopped.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

HOW CORPORATION DROVE GIRL TO TRY TWICE TO END LIFE

Metropolitan Railways Co. of New York Has Successfully Fought Against Paying Helpless Young Woman $5000 for Loss of Leg and Eye.

HAD HER ATTORNEY EXPELLED FROM BAR

Proven That Bribery and Perjury Kept Harriet Nugent From Collecting on Judgment, and Left Her to Starve.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The New York World will print the following tomorrow:

Twice within the past month Harriet Nugent, 21 years old, has attempted to end her life—once by taking poison, once by deliberately starving herself to death.

Behind this simple recital of fact lies one of the most tragic, and, at the same time one of the most shameful stories which has ever shocked the moral sense of an American community.

It is the story of how a great business corporation, by means of bribery and perjury, robbed an innocent young girl after she had been terribly injured through the criminal carelessness of one of its agents. Not content with robbing its victim this great corporation wreaked a savage revenge upon the lawyer who had dared to champion the cause of the injured girl, and, by means of false evidence bought and paid for by its legal counsel, drove its antagonist from the ranks of an honorable profession, ruined his career, estranged him from the woman to whom his troth was plighted and brought his father and mother in sorrow to the grave.

Verdict for $5000.

Harriet Nugent, who was recently picked up starving in the streets of Brooklyn, secured a verdict for $5000 against the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. 18 years ago. Not a cent of it has ever been paid.

The verdict has been sustained by the highest court of the State, the money is in the hands of a receiver who was ordered by the Court to set it aside for the specific discharge of the judgment against the Metropolitan Street Railway Co., and notwithstanding all this, Harriet Nugent, whose original verdict, together with interest for 18 years amounts to $11,000, finds herself in such an extremity of suffering and privation that she seeks death as a welcome relief from her hopeless misery.

What can be said of this case which does not picture a hideous blot upon our vaunted civilization? What explanation can be found which does not cast a sinister light upon our judicial system? What account of the circumstances, however guarded an expression, or moderate in tone, but shall stir the indignation of every true man and woman in the community.

On May 5, 1896, little Harriet Nugent, 3 years of age, was playing with another little girl on Madison street, New York City. A horse car approached, but the driver's attention was fixed upon something that interested him on the sidewalk. He drove his horse over the little child, and one of the car wheels passed over her left leg at the knee.

Leg Was Taken Off.

So serious was the injury that the leg had to be amputated, and another result of the terrible shock she received was that Harriet Nugent lost the sight of her right eye.

The mother brought suit for damages against the Metropolitan Street Railway, and in January, 1897, a jury in the Supreme Court, New York County, rendered a verdict for $5000 in favor of the injured child. Against this verdict the Metropolitan Street Railway appealed, but on May 23, 1897, the appellate division of the Supreme Court handed down a decision affirming the original verdict. The decision was written by Justice Alton B. Parker.

Again the railroad appealed, but pending the hearing of the case the Metropolitan people decided on a very different course of action. Through the agency of Louis E. Julian and Henry A. Robinson, the former being chief claim agent of the Metropolitan and the latter (since disbarred for unprofessional practices) its chief attorney, the witnesses upon whose testimony Harriet Nugent had secured her verdict were bribed or intimidated, and several of them went to the offices of the railway company and signed affidavits to the effect that they had given false evidence at the first trial on the persuasion of Harriet Nugent's attorney, Benjamin Oppenheim.

As an incident of the Metropolitan's conspiracy, one of the witnesses, Sadie McDonnell, was handed over to Joseph Porchia, who, with money supplied by the Metropolitan Railway Co., took her down to the Bingham Hotel, Philadelphia, passed her off as his wife and kept her there until the time was ripe for her to come to New York in order to swear away the honor of Benjamin Oppenheim.

With its purchased and perjured evidence all in good order, the Metropolitan Street Railway went before Justice Charles H. Traux and asked for an order setting aside all previous decisions in favor of Harriet Nugent. The matter was referred to Wilbur F. McBride, an attorney, as referee. It has been publicly charged and the charge has not been denied that although McBride's proper fee in this case should have been $330, the Metropolitan paid him $2500.

On Sept. 27, 1899, McBride submitted a report recommending that Harriet Nugent's verdict for $5000 against the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. should be set aside because subornation of perjury had been proved against her attorney.

Justice Traux, however, rejected his referees findings and wrote an opinion in favor of Harriet Nugent. This was the third time the law had declared that the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. must pay Harriet Nugent $5000. The Metropolitan at once carried the case to the Appellate division of the State Supreme Court, where it won, the court ruling that the Referee had been in a better position than Justice Traux to pass on the facts.

The practical effect of this decision was to destroy any chance that Harriet Nugent might have had of securing from the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. any compensation for having lost one leg and the sight of one eye through the gross negligence of one of its servants.

Oppenheim Was Disbarred.

There the matter might have rested if the Metropolitan had been satisfied with its triumph in swindling a lame child out of $5000. But it yearned for one last trophy of victory, for a scalp which could be nailed up as a warning to all who might be tempted to place an obstacle in the path of its cupidity. Oppenheim, who had stood by Harriet Nugent through thick and thin, must be ruined. The necessary steps were taken, the perjured witness was produced and on March 22, 1901, Benjamin Oppenheim was disbarred. As no man disbarred in one state may practice law in another, this meant, so far as anyone could foresee at the time, a final blow to the young lawyer's career.

The foul and abominable conspiracy by means of which the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. had defrauded Harriet Nugent and ruined Benjamin Oppenheim might have been forgotten completely save by the victims (and a few of the company's head men, who would love to recall at Christmas, say, or at a Thanksgiving, a neat and profitable piece of rascality) had not fate brought the whole matter up again nine years later in connection with an entirely different matter.

In 1909 the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. found itself in the limelight during the course of some investigations into the work of the District Attorney's office. It became necessary for the company to get rid of a number of incriminating documents, and these were given to a man named Bagg, with instructions to burn them.

Papers Were Not Burned.

Bagg, however, was a philosopher, and, reflecting that anything which was worth burning was worth keeping, he took the papers home with him and

DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS" IS BEST IF HEADACHY, CONSTIPATED, BILIOUS.

If you're headachy, constipated, bilious or stomach is disordered and you want to enjoy the nicest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced, take a tablespoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" tonight and in the morning all the poison, bile and clogged-up waste will gently move out of the system without griping and you will feel splendid.

Every member of the family should use this fruit laxative as occasion demands. It is just as effective for grandpa as it is for the baby. It simply cannot injure. Even cross, sick, feverish children just love its pleasant taste and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing."

For thirty years "California Syrup of Figs" has been recommended by physicians as the ideal stomach, liver and bowel cleanser. Millions of families who are well informed use nothing else, but recently there has come a flood of spurious fig syrups, so we warn the public to ask plainly at drug stores for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," and see that it is prepared by "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Hand back any "counterfeit" with contempt.—ADV.

CASCARETS TONIGHT! IF YOU ARE BILIOUS, HEADACHY AND CONSTIPATED.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy stomach.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely dosing yourself every few days with salts, pills, castor oil and other harsh irritants? Cascarets immediately cleanse and sweeten the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the system.

A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box keeps your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and you feel bully for months. Don't forget the children.

Have You the Hair of a Musician?

Bald or thin-haired musicians are unknown. This same may be said of actors. The reason is that constant appearance before the public makes constant care of appearance a habit. And constant care of hair insures a heavy, attractive growth. In cleasing the hair it is not advisable to use a makeshift but always use a preparation made for shampooing only. You can enjoy the best that is known for about three cents a shampoo by getting a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—ADV.

put them away in his trunk. When Bagg, unable to pay his board bill, changed his lodgings, he left his trunk behind. The landlady seized the trunk, and after examining its contents handed the secret papers over to Franklin Pierce, who was the attorney for the Citizens' Committee which was concerned in the case of the District Attorney's office.

Among these papers were discovered the actual vouchers for the money paid by the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. for the false evidence by means of which it had swindled Harriet Nugent and driven Benjamin Oppenheim from his profession.

With these documents in his hands Oppenheim saw his way clear to obtain a public vindication of his character and also to revive Harriet Nugent's claim against the railway company.

The inquiry into Oppenheim's case was conducted by former Justice Henry A. Gildersleeve, acting as official referee for the appellate division of the Supreme Court. Confronted with the original vouchers, the former witnesses against Oppenheim, were compelled to disclose all the details of the transaction, and on Dec. 24, 1912, Referee Gildersleeve reported that the Metropolitan Street Railway Co.'s witnesses had been bribed by the company to give perjured testimony, that Harriet Nugent was entitled to the full amount of her original judgment of $5000 against the railway, with interest for 15 years, and that Oppenheim, being entirely innocent of the charges upon which he had been disbarred, should be reinstated.

Lawyer Restored to Practice.

On Feb. 7, 1913, the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court signed an order restoring Oppenheim as a member of the bar and a few weeks later Justice John Ford of the Supreme Court revived the original judgment of Harriet Nugent against the Metropolitan Street Railway Co.

This was the fourth time that a court of New York State had directed the Metropolitan people to pay Harriet Nugent $5000.

On April 3, 1913, Benjamin Oppenheim and Benjamin E. Messler, representing Harriet Nugent, applied to Judge E. H. Lacombe for an order instructing the receiver of the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. to pay to Harriet Nugent the amount of her judgment, with interest.

In support of this application counsel argued that the money had been made available for this payment by an order of court dated June 28, 1912, signed by Judge Lacombe himself, who had also granted permission to Harriet Nugent to file the judgment of her claims, pending their confirmation by the Supreme Court, and that as this confirmation had been received the order to pay the money would merely give execution to a judgment already finally recorded.

It was further pointed out that the debt owing to Harriet Nugent was not based upon a business transaction in which the creditor took an ordinary commercial risk, but represented payment in legally determined recompense for terrible injuries inflicted on the petitioner; that the debt has arisen many years ago and would have been paid many years ago had not the debtor, by means of the most vile and corrupt methods, succeeded in defying the decrees of the State's courts, and finally, that the effect of a refusal to grant the order would be to allow the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. to be the beneficiary of its own proved criminal acts.

In the face of these arguments, Judge E. H. Lacombe refused to grant the order, on the ground that if he did so he would be inflicting an injustice upon the business creditors of the railway company.

The spectacle with which the public is now confronted is that of the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. still in possession of the money which has been awarded by the courts to Harriet Nugent four times during the past 15 years, whilst the victim of its avarice, of its perjury and of its corruption awaits, maimed, heartbroken and starving, another opportunity to make an attempt upon her own life.

Have the citizens of New York nothing to say to Harriet Nugent?

COTTON FARMERS URGED TO RAISE BEANS AND PEAS

Public Health Service Says Change of Diet Would Help Eradicate Pellagra.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—In its efforts to have southern farmers diversify their crops, the Government through the public health service announces that substitution of beans and peas for cotton would help eradicate pellagra.

"If you would avoid having pellagra you must eat an abundance of beans, milk, eggs and lean meat as a part of the regular diet," says the service in a statement issued through Assistant Secretary Newton. "By using these foods regularly not only may pellegra be cured, when the disease is not too far advanced , but prevented. . This actually happened in at least one institution where in 1913 75 cases of pellegra occurred. As a result of change of diet not a single case is known to have developed this year.

"It appears therefore that pellagra is but another example of a class of diseases, like scurvy, which can be prevented by an abundance of food of a proper character; and this fact suggests the advisability of farmers in the South cultivating beans and peas and raising dairy cattle instead of cotton at a time when the market for the latter abroad has been all but destroyed by foreign wars.'

Catches Fish With an Oar.

EAST TROY, Wis., Oct. 31.—Fred Goetsch of Mukwonago has established a reputation as a fisherman, yet he never thinks of using a hook and line. All he needs is a boat and oars. He rows out in the lake and watches for fish. When one comes along he whacks it over the head with an oar. A few days ago he came in with a five-pound bass, which he "caught" in the mill pond.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Ellwood streets, Dayton, O., inclosing a self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Worried Man writes: "Let me say that my condition puzzles and worries me. In the last year I seem to have been growing old rapidly, though only 38. My food and sleep do not recuperate my strength and energy, and lately I have dizzy spells, trembling, headaches, loss of appetite, memory and hopelessness. Despondency and worry over my condition are ever present."

Answer: Cheer up, get well and then conserve your vitality by proper, temperate living. Obtain three grain cadomene tablets in sealed tubes with full directions, use them and an agreeable, pleasing restoration should ensue to your entire satisfaction.

Mr. [illegible] C. B. asks: "Do you think it is possible to reduce my weight from 240 pounds to about 190 pounds?"

Answer: It is impossible to say just how much one can reduce until after trying, but 5-grain arbolene tablets should be used according to directions with each sealed tube, obtainable at most any drug store. If the flesh is unnatural you should easily reduce as desired.

J. R. O. asks: "I am thin, angular, weak and tired. What can I take to improve my health, strengthen my nerves and increase my weight about 20 pounds?"

Answer: Take regularly with your meals three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, sold in sealed packages, by druggists, with complete directions. These tablets improve the blood, increase nutrition, and strengthen the nervous system if used regularly for several months.

C. L. asks: "I have tried to cure dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair and baldness with numerous tonics, etc., but in vain. What do you recommend?"

Answer: I have been recommending plain yellow minyol for the past seven years and scores of my patients are delighted with the quick, pleasant action of this remedy in stopping itching, falling hair, dandruff, etc. It gives the hair health, luster, and vigor as nothing else does. Obtain in 4-oz. jars with full directions.

H. M. B. writes: "Can you please prescribe medicine which will relieve me of such distressing symptoms of kidney and bladder as the following: Pains in small of back, soreness in region of bladder, puffing of limbs, etc.?"

Answer: Those seeking relief from kidney and bladder disorders should begin taking balmwort tablets, a very successful formula sold in sealed tubes with full directions.

Mrs. N. B. B. asks: "I suffer from headache and constipation periodically and my blood seems too thick, causing languor and tired feeling. I will thank you to prescribe for me."

Answer: Three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) are most effective in relieving constipation, thinning the blood and removing the symptoms of languor, etc. I advise you to begin taking as per directions with each sealed package.—ADVERTISEMENT.

3 NEW PAINTINGS TO BE SHOWN AT ART MUSEUM TODAY

Two of the Pictures Have Been Purchased and Two Others Are Sought.

ONE IS WORK OF SYMONS

Curator Places Artist Among Strongest Portrayers of Nature in America.

Two recently-acquired paintings will be on exhibition today in the City Art Museum in Forest Park. Two other paintings, one of which will be on exhibition today, are being considered for acquisition by the museum.

Gardner Symons' painting, "Through Snowclad Hills and Valley," which has been one of the talked-of pictures of the fall exhibition, has been purchased with the city tax fund. Symons is one of the strongest exponents of the American school of expressive nature portrayal, according to F. E. A. Curley, curator of the museum.

A picture by Childe Hassam, called "Diamond Cove, Island of Shoals," has been purchased with the income of the W. K. Bixby American art acquisition fund, and has been added to the Bixby fund collection. It was hung yesterday in Bixby room, and will be seen in St. Louis today for the first time.

Charles W. Hawthorne's "Adoration," which Curley describes as "one of the unusual productions of the year in American art," is also being considered for purchase by the museum.

Elliot W. Daingerfield's "An Arcadian Huntress," is on exhibition at the museum, and tentative plans have been made for its acquisition.

The big exhibition of American paintings has been rehung for today, after the return of a number of them from the annual show at the Chicago Art Institute. These pictures are to be taken down tomorrow for shipment to other exhibitions or to be returned to their owners.

ROBBER BINDS AND GAGS WOMAN, TAKES $10 BILL

Thief Forces Way Into House, Then Ransacks Place Till Money Is Found.

Mrs. Ella Backs, 44 years old, of 1004 Market street, told the police a stranger entered her home at 10 a. m. yesterday, searched the house, obtained a $10 bill, then gagged her and tied her hands to the bedpost. She was liberated 15 minutes later by her 18-year-old son, William, when he returned from work.

Mrs. Backs said the robber was about 40 years old. He knocked on her door and, when she opened it, pushed in, drew a revolver and threatened her life if she screamed. She had four 25-cent pieces tied in a handkerchief, and a $10 bill in her hand. These, she said, she hid in her dress. The man ransacked the house, opening a folding bed in his search. He found a $10 bill in a water pitcher.

FARM FOR DELINQUENT WOMEN IS PROPOSED

Protective League to Meet Wednesday to Frame Appeal to the Legislature.

The Women's Protective League will meet Wednesday morning at the Planter's Hotel to adopt plans to petition the Legislature for an appropriation for a farm for delinquent women.

The league, which was active in the movement which resulted in the abolition of the segregated district last spring, believes more good can be accomplished in helping fallen women by allowing them to live on a farm under State supervision than by sending them to the workhouse in default of payment of fines imposed in police courts.

Large Brass Bedstead Given Free to Purchasers of Household Outfits.

As an encouragement to Cupid in his November work of bringing about marriages, the St. Louis House Furnishing Co., 902-4-6 Franklin avenue, will give away a large brass bedstead with each outfit purchased at the store. These outfits are especially grouped and designed for newly weds and for couples who are now doing light housekeeping in furnished rooms. The free brass bedstead offer is expected to change the method of living of many persons who now have only one room to call "Home, Sweet Home." The three-room outfit that the St. Louis House Furnishing Co. has on sale is as complete in every detail as the purchase price can make it. This price is $148.75, and the purchase may be made on easy terms. The easy terms that the firm has established is given by the managers as one of the chief reasons that, despite any talk of hard times, the concern's delivery system is kept busy all of the time and the sales progression with the growth of the city.

Socialist Candidates to Speak.

William M. Brandt and John P. Herrmann, Socialist candidates for Congress for the Tenth and Twelfth districts, respectively, will address a mass meeting at Labor Hall, 966 Chouteau avenue, tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock. Stephen Muck will speak in German.

50 MORE SAVED FROM BRITISH HOSPITAL SHIP

All Women Aboard Reported Safe, but Extent of Disaster Is Still Uncertain.

WHITBY, England, Oct. 31.—Fifty more men were saved this morning from the wreck of the British hospital ship Rohilla, which ran on the rocks of the Yorkshire coast near here early yesterday.

Bearing physicians, nurses and hospital supplies, the Rohilla was on her way to a Belgian or a French port to receive the wounded when she was driven ashore. It is understood that all women were saved.

The total number on the ship is not definitely known, but some estimates place it at 200. There are said to be still about 60 persons in peril. Several men this morning in response to signals from the shore, decided to take the risk of swimming. A few reached land, but others were drowned. Bodies are washing up on the beach.

GRAY HAIR TURNS ITS NATURAL DARK COLOR AFTER APPLYING SAGE TEA

When Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Beautifully that Nobody Can Tell; Takes Off Dandruff.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's" which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.—ADV.

RAYMOND ROBINS

ONCE again Illinois can have, and should have, a truly great man in the United States Senate—one who has devoted his life to the good of the masses of the people; one who has been heard all over this state and nation in earnest appeal for the betterment of the conditions of the common people; one who is known internationally for his championship of the masses; one who has never had a dollar from public taxation; one whose ambitions have never been for self, but always for the public good—Raymond Robins—strong, capable, unselfish, public-spirited, a good orator, a right reasoner, a sound man; wise in counsel, temperate in action; in his sympathies more like Lincoln than any man of our time, and as certainly honest.

Forget party, forget personal preferment, forget personal considerations and give the state a vote for Raymond Robins for United States Senator. Let Illinois be once more represented in the United States Senate by a man who will take place and rank with the best men who have ever represented Illinois there. Go early and vote for Robins. Help restore the good name and great fame of Illinois.

We have had a Lincoln; we have had a Grant; we have had a Logan—we need a Robins. He will be as surely for the public good and as little for personal gain as was Lincoln. With the greatest stretch of your imagination and conscience could you say as much for either of the other two candidates?

In this campaign Raymond Robins' integrity, his ability, his right-mindedness, have never been questioned. He stands before you with an untarnished record. His chief aim in life has always been to serve his fellow man. His acceptance of this nomination was prompted by a desire to do the most good for his country. Give Robins your vote.

Roosevelt on Illinois' Senatorial Fight

Chicago Coliseum Address, Oct. 19, 1914, Charges Sullivan and Sherman "Stand Together in the Essentials"

"Mr. Sullivan, the Democratic candidate for senator, has had his whole career shaped by his part in the Ogden gas ordinance which practically the solid press of the city at the time denounced. The passage of this ordinance was not an incident in the career of Mr. Sullivan. It was the foundation for his political and commercial career, and shortly after its passage he appeared as an officer of the corporation."

"The foundation for Mr. Sherman's whole political career was laid when in the legislature he was one of the most prominent supporters of the so-called Allen law. The Allen law was passed in the interest of Yerkes and Lorimer to confer upon city councils the right to grant fifty-year franchises."

"In all the essentials of their actions Mr. Sherman and Mr. Sullivan stand together. The essence of a bi-partisan machine is that on certain questions hostile to the interests of the public the members of the two machines vote against the interests of the public, and, furthermore, that in various crises the members of the one machine come to the help of the members of the other machine."

"I may make my appeal in Illinois not merely to the Progressives, but to all honest Republicans and honest Democrats to repudiate both the Sullivan and Sherman machines. This they can do only by electing to the United States senate as able and upright and genuine a popular representative as Illinois has ever sent to that body—namely, Raymond Robins."

"Perjured boodlers * * that denunciation will last as long as they live."—Chicago Tribune.

"Jobbery, corruption and gang influence marked all these measures."—Times-Herald.

The Chicago Record editorially (June 5, 1897) listed those who voted for the Allen Bill—including Lawrence Y. Sherman and said:

"Let every citizen keep these names in mind. They stand for what is worst in the history of the legislation passed by the XL general assembly. The legislators who voted for the Yerkes-Allen Bill have lost all claim to consideration as men fit to hold office.

"If ever the time comes that one of these men asks for the votes of the people again his record on the Allen Bill will be on hand to defeat him."

"The leading candidate for the speakership is Judge Sherman, one of the eight re-elected republicans who voted for the Allen Law and who has persisted in calling it a good law even after the voters have condemned it * * * he has the support of the traction companies which in Chicago buy up aldermen to get franchises and jurors to escape verdicts for damages and in Springfield buy up legislators to get friendly speakers and bad laws."—Tribune Editorial, January 3, 1899.

Why Take Sherman?

"What reason can the Republican leaders give for making Lawrence Y. Sherman Speaker of the Illinois House of Representatives? The Republican party is not lacking in men of a better type. Why should it select for honor one who is recognized throughout the State as the champion of private as opposed to public interest?"—Record Herald Editorial, January 3, 1899.

"Every corruptionist in the democratic party in that state will support Sullivan, and so will all whom the corruptionists can influence. There will be no division among the reactionaries, the veneered republicans and the representatives of the predatory interests,—they all want Sullivan in the senate "to steady the boat," as he puts it. There should be no division in the ranks of those who oppose the special interests." W. J. BRYAN.

"In my opinion Mr. Sullivan * * * is not the man best qualified in any way whatsoever to represent the great state of Illinois in the United States Senate."—Mayor Harrison at Coliseum, Aug. 25. From Tribune, Aug. 26, 1914.

"Roger Sullivan is not a good Democrat. He never was and he never will be. He bolted the ticket in 1896 and helped to defeat William Jennings Bryan for the presidency. He bolted the Democratic ticket in Chicago in 1907 and helped to elect Fred A. Busse mayor of Chicago. He has been a traitor time and again. He is not deserving of the votes of good Democrats."—Governor Dunne to Chicago voters in August, 1914.

Sullivan or Robins?—Asks La Follette

"The state that elected Lorimer senator may elect Sullivan, but it would inspire every progressive Republican and every progressive Democrat with hope to fight on if it should elect Raymond Robins to the United States Senate.

"Politicians rely upon the party name to carry the election for a candidate whose steady record should damn him before all men. They need a lesson everywhere."

'MESDAMES MUMS' TO RECEIVE TODAY AT SHAW'S GARDEN

Will Keep Open House From 2 to 5 P. M. and Every Day for Several Weeks.

2500 PLANTS IN LINE

Thirty-Five Debutant Chrysanthemums Will Make Initial Bow to Public.

"Mmes. Mums" will give a reception to the St. Louis flower-loving public in the south wing of the new conservatory in the Missouri Botanical Gardens from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. today and will then keep open house every day for three or four weeks. The length of the stay in St. Louis all depends upon the weather.

In the receiving line will be 2500 chrysanthemum plants, bearing from one to 5000 blossoms, and 35 debutant chrysanthemums, who will make their bow to the public. "Golden Age," "Miss Nellie Pockett," "Chrysolora" and "Col. Appleton" will head the reception line and will be followed by 1000 other yellow varieties. Then will follow those gowned in snowy white—"Honesty," "Early Snow," "Rob Roy," the bonny Scotch lass, and a host of other beauties. Next will come those wearing robes of rich bronze and deep, warm reds. Those gowned in pink, lavender and the deeper mauves for the center of the second division, while standing back of them will be the 35 debutante "mums," gowned in white, pink, lavender, champaign, bronze and wine.

History to Be Related.

The botanists and floriculturists of the Missouri Botanical Garden will act as interpreters and tell those desiring to know "who is who" in chrysanthemumdom. They will give the chrysanthemum family tree, pointing out the insignificant looking "Indicum," from which all chrysanthemums originated. The specimen shown has been grown in a pyramidal form, and is covered with a countless number of small yellow flowers and buds.

Much attention and study has been given to the color arrangement of the Chrysanthemum Show this year. The yellow varieties are grouped at the entrance, the intense colors, "golden age," "Nellie Pockett," running the scale to the cream color, which blends into the white. Then after the white follows the opal, champaigne and light bronze colors, blending into the deep bronzes and the wines and maroons. The strong colors are placed at either end of the conservatory. This arrangement produces color waves which are pleasing to the eye. The pinks and lavenders are arranged in the center of the second section.

There are seven types shown—the single, pompon, anemone, incurve, reflex, hairy and Japanese, and slight variations of these types. One striking variation is the quill petal anemone. The single types are much on the form of the common field daisy, with yellow center and rays. The pompon is almost spherical in form and the petals numerous and compact. The anemone type is similar to the single except that there may be more than one row of petals and the center forms a cushion. In the incurve type the petals curve toward the center. In the reflex type the petals curve backward.

Names of New Varieties.

The petals of the Fairy type are covered with tiny hairs, and may be either reflex or incurve. The petals of the Japanese type are broader, the outer petals taking on the reflex characteristic, while the center one are inclined to incurve in some varieties, while in others they are flat.

There will be 35 new varieties shown. While they will not be labeled individually, they will be grouped and labeled as the "New varieties." Among the new varieties shown are the "Howard Gould," a large deep yellow, reflex type; "William Meredith," large flowered, deep bronze, reflex type; "Mrs. E. King," large flowered, yellow, reflex type; "Golden King," a superb golden yellow, large flowered, incurve type; "Poughkeepsie," large flowered, deep cream, reflex type; "Takoma," large flowered, bronze, reflex type; "Elsie Léton," deep pink, incurve type; "Pink Gem," rose pink, large flowered, incurve type; "George Hemming," large flowered, deep wine, Japanese type; "W. Iggleton," yellow, incurve type; "Tasson," large flowered, white, single type.

DR. USHER TO DELIVER SOUTH AMERICA LECTURE

"Pan-Germanism" Author Will Discuss New Values of Great Continent.

Dr. Roland G. Usher will lecture tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 at Washington University in the Graham Memorial Chapel, on "The Rediscovery of South America." This lecture will be the first of a series which will be given at the University on Monday afternoons during November. They are open to the public.

Dr. Usher will deal briefly with the early history of South America, its exploitation for the precious metals by the Spaniards in the sixteenth century, the conclusion of Europeans during the seventeenth century that it was valueless, the reason why this attitude continued until well into the hteenth century, and why the at- ion of Europe and subsequently e United States has been turned more to this continent.

VOTERS OF MISSOURI

NEXT TUESDAY, NOVEMBER THIRD, you will find on your Constitutional Ballot, down next to the bottom of the third column, the following:

"Ninth Proposition:"

"Referendum Ordered by the Petition of the People."

"Senate Bill No. 117, enacted by the Forty-seventh General Assembly, Etc., Etc."

This in plain terms is known as the "Full Crew Law."

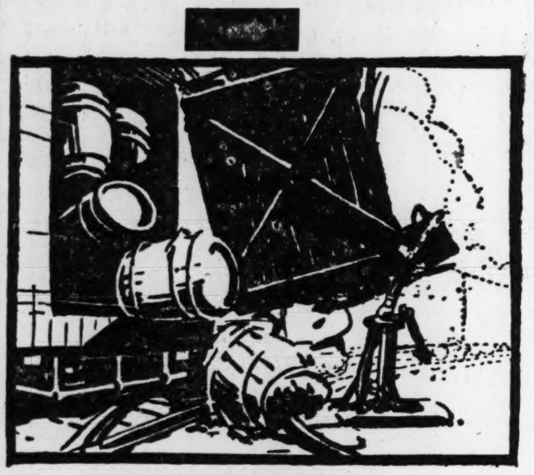
A law that means saving lives, preventing cripples, and destruction of happy homes.

It means fewer public charges in our charitable institutions. It means the saving of millions in the destruction of property.

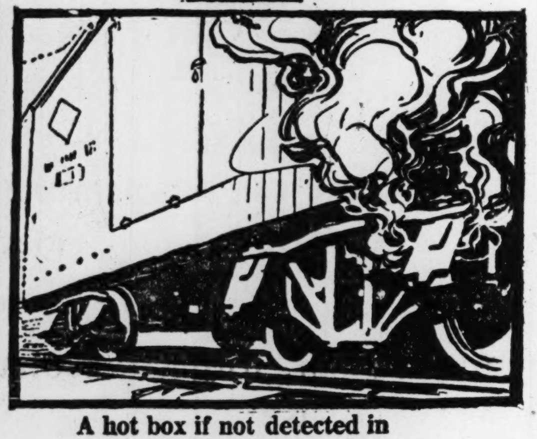
It will give the public better railroad service and make traveling safer.

EVERY SEVEN MINUTES a Railroad Trainman is Killed or Crippled!

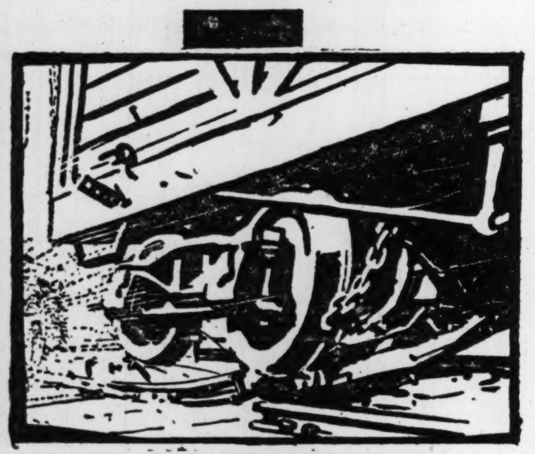
Lack of Inspection
Will Cause Accidents



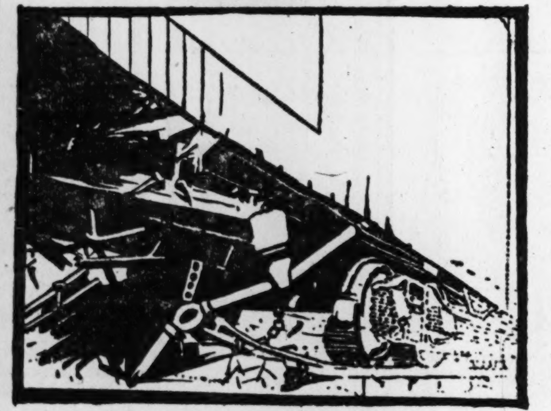
Car doors becoming loose are potent with danger



A hot box if not detected in time may be very serious



A dragging brake beam will tear up the ties and track, wrecking the train



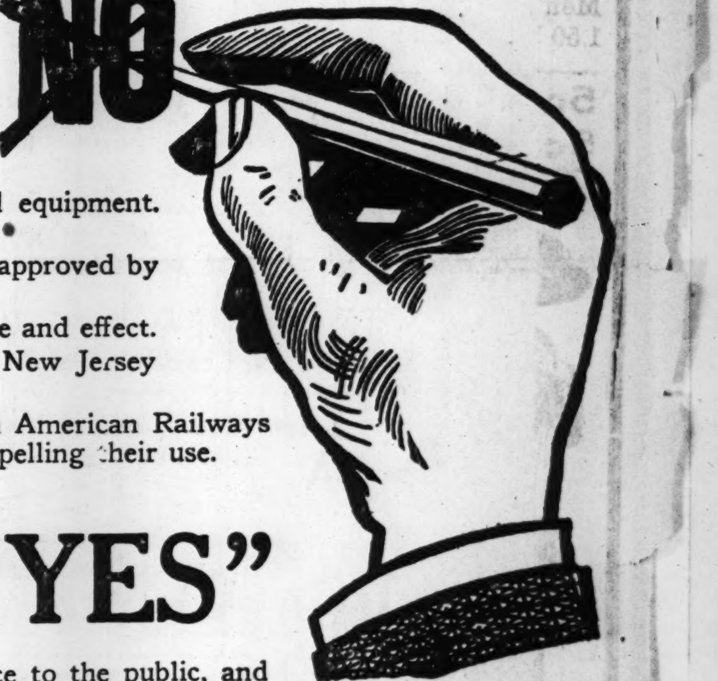
Broken rods frequently cause very serious wrecks

One out of every 11 men employed in train service is killed or permanently injured, making more than 50,000 annually.

Railway employes are taxed to bury the dead, relieve the hunger of widows and orphans, and enormous sums thus spent are removed from the uses of ordinary commerce.

YES Referendum Proposition No. 9

~~NO~~



You Can Help Save These Lives and Limbs

Freight train crews are now just the same size as 20 years ago, when trains were only 17 or 18 cars long. Now they run up to 100 cars — more than a mile long — and make double the speed. Safety cannot be had if trains are UNDERMANNED.

The "Full Crew Law" provides one more man on freight trains of OVER 40 CARS LONG.

This extra man permits proper inspection of defective cars, detecting faults in early stages, thereby preventing accidents, which cause loss of life and limb, and the destruction of freight and equipment. Delayed trains prevented, means a saving to the public on perishable merchandise and live stock, etc.

The "Full Crew Law" was passed by the last Legislature by an overwhelming majority and approved by the Governor, and is now being submitted to your vote under the Referendum.

This law is not an experiment in any sense of the word. In nine great states it is in full force and effect.

New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Arizona, Indiana, Arkansas, Washington, California and New Jersey have a "Full Crew Law."

The use of such safety appliances as the Safety Car Coupler and the Air Brake was secured on American Railways only after years of appeal on the part of the employes and the public and the adoption of laws compelling their use.

Now, you can help secure further safety if you

Scratch "NO" and Vote "YES"

By preventing accidents and saving the losses incurred thereby, railroads can give better service to the public, and should be able to reduce freight rates.

Freight rates are controlled by State and National Governments and they are now as high as the Railways can make them, and in none of the States now having a "Full Crew Law" in effect have freight rates been advanced.

In all the States having a "Full Crew Law" conditions are better and the ratio of employes killed and injured is becoming less each year.

The additional expense of the "Full Crew Law" to the railways in Missouri will be only about 10 cents per car for each 100 miles the car travels.

Just look at the illustrations on the left and see how easy it is for these things, if unnoticed, to cause accidents. Another man on top of long trains of OVER 40 CARS will detect causes of accidents in time to prevent wrecks.

The "Full Crew Law" is a good law for YOU, because:

It saves lives. It prevents wounded men.

It reduces the destruction of property. It means productive citizens.

It means fewer dependents on charity.

It keeps wages in circulation.

It means more well men to buy and consume your product.

It means more expeditious delivery of live stock shipped to market, reducing the loss on shrinkage.

It means quicker delivery of merchandise to and from your town.

The "Full Crew Law" is a GOOD LAW for the RAILROAD COMPANIES, because:

It saves the lives and limbs of their experienced and skilled men.

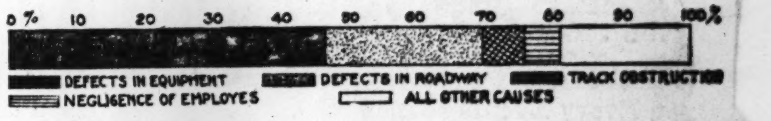
It prevents the destruction of equipment and the loss of freight, necessitating the payment of enormous freight claims.

It gives the public better service, because of fewer delayed trains.

It means more money to spend for equipment instead of damage claims.

It keeps cars out of the repair shops, because one more man on the trains will do much to detect and repair broken parts, before they cause serious trouble.

CAUSES OF ACCIDENTS ☛



From the above chart, prepared from the sworn reports made by the Railroads to the United States Interstate Commerce Commission, it can readily be seen that in the United States the greater part of railway accidents are caused from defects in equipment, and it requires no argument to convince that if equipment were better inspected and if freight trains were not undermanned there would be fewer accidents.

Defects of equipment should not be charged against "Negligence of Employes" and particular attention is called to the above chart, which shows that the Interstate Commerce Commission reports only 5.15 per cent of accidents to "Negligence of Employes." Help to secure the proper manning of freight trains and the space in the above chart representing defects in equipment and defects in roadway will dwindle down to almost nothing.

The "Full Crew Law" is a good law for YOU, the FARMER, the STOCK SHIPPER, the BUSINESS MAN, the RAILROAD EMPLOYE, and the RAILROAD COMPANY, and it is fitting and proper that a law as praiseworthy as the "Full Crew Law" should be the first to be submitted to the people under the Referendum.

There is just one question for you to decide, Mr. Voter.

Are you in favor of CONSERVATION OF HUMAN LIVES or CONSERVATION OF DIVIDENDS?

That is what you will vote upon.

Be careful and vote on the RIGHT-HAND SIDE of the column, as it will be easy to make a mistake owing to the complicated ballot.

Scratch "NO" so that you may vote "YES" on

Nervous Periodical Headaches

Succumb to Anti-Kamnia Tablets

This trouble commonly called "sick headache" is said to be due to sickly conditions of the system. Often it is stated that a poor condition of the blood is a cause of these headaches, or that it is a nervous condition, and in certain cases, no doubt this is true.

Where treatment is demanded, it is more for the pain than anything else, and Dr. A. F. Schellschmidt of Louisville has found Anti-kamnia Tablets to give prompt and satisfactory relief. "Rest should be insisted upon," he says, "and the patient should go to bed, darken the room and all the attendants and family should be as quiet as possible. An emetic will sometimes shorten the attack. The bowels should be kept open with "Actoids;" a hot bath and a thorough rub-down with a coarse towel often give grateful relief. Two Anti-kamnia Tablets when the first signs appear, will usually prevent the attack. During an attack, one tablet every hour or two will shorten the attack and relieve the usual nausea and vomiting." These tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They are also unexcelled for nervous headaches, neuralgia and all pains.—ADV

Y. W. C. A. BIENNIAL CAMPAIGN TO RAISE FUNDS IS LAUNCHED

Those at Banquet Also Pledge Themselves to Get at Least One Member Each.

$60,000 IS NECESSARY

Work Has Grown Until Demands on the Association Have More Than Doubled.

The biennial finance and membership campaign of the Y. W. C. A., 1411 Locust street, was launched at a banquet at Moolah Temple Friday evening. The banquet hall was crowded with workers who pledged themselves to get at least one member and to aid in raising the $60,000 fund necessary to carry on the work of the association during the next two years.

Since the Y. W. C. A. has occupied its own building—a little over two years—the work has grown and the scope of the association has broadened so rapidly and the demands and needs made upon the Y. W. C. A. have more than doubled. The Y. W. C. A. has become one of the most important factors in the lives of many of the women in St. Louis, socially, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually.

"Few people understand the work of the association," said Miss Mary E. S. Colt, general secretary. "It is the aim of the association to work for the betterment of all women in every phase of life. We seek to better her condition financially by aiding her to find employment and to fit her for more lucrative employment through our educational departments. Through our Physical Educational Department, the gymnasium and swimming pool, we endeavor to aid her to health and physical development that she may be better prepared to do her work. Through our clubs and classes and general entertainments we supply her social opportunities of the wholesome kind.

"Thousands of girls and women pass through our doors every day and enjoy the privileges afforded by the association. To meet the needs it required $183,000 last year. Of this amount $162,000 was the receipts from the association and the girls."

Today will be Y. W. C. A. Sunday in all of the churches in St. Louis. Many of the ministers will devote the entire morning service to the association and its work.

Downtown headquarters for the Y. W. C. A. finance and membership campaign will be opened in the Kinloch Building, Tenth and Locust streets, tomorrow. The teams will report at headquarters daily throughout the campaign.

At a noonday luncheon tomorrow the women's teams will be the guests of the Campaign Committee at the Y. W. C. A. and detail their complete arrangement. Tomorrow evening the girls' or association teams will be the guests of the Campaign Committee at a dinner. The campaign will be under the direction of Miss Harriet Taylor of the National Y. W. C. A. Board, New York City. She will be assisted by two other secretaries for the national board—Miss Helen Davis and Miss Blanche Gaery, and the local officers, board and association members.

STOMACH BAD? BELCHING GAS AND SOUR FOOD?—TAKE PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN.

If you feel bloated after eating and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you need Pape's Diapepsin to stop food fermentation and Indigestion.

It neutralizes excessive acid, stomach poison; absorbs that misery-making gas and stops fermentation which sours your entire meal and causes Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Billousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer in five minutes that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that relief is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort, all of any kind of food you eat.—ADV.

WAR HAS NOT HURT EXPOSITION; ALL NATIONS TAKE PART

Countries Now Engaged in Conflict in Europe Will Be Represented.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Since Sept. 24, when Secretary of State Bryan issued a formal announcement that no foreign country had withdrawn its promise to participate in the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, many large consignments have reached San Francisco, and a number of chartered steamers will soon leave with great loads of exhibits for this city.

The main exhibit section is complete. The installation of the works of famous sculptors is 75 per cent completed. The landscaping of the Exposition grounds and courts is 82 per cent completed.

Work has progressed far upon the "Zone," the amusement section. It will represent an outlay of $10,000,000, and more than 7000 persons will be there employed during the exposition.

In the vast section devoted to the pavilions of the nations and the buildings of the American States a large number of the huge edifices are finished and others rapidly nearing completion.

German Building Being Erected.

The German Kali Syndicate Building, constructed in part by the German Government, is more than half finished and will be rushed to completion. The Exposition headquarters in Berlin, established by important German industries, received applications for exhibit space from leading German firms two months after the outbreak of the war.

The Danish pavilion, now under construction, is a reproduction of the famous Kronberg Castle at Elsinore, one of the fortresses which guard the approach to Copenhagen.

Work on the Italian pavilion, which in reality is a section of a typical Italian city and comprises seven different structures, is more than 15 per cent completed.

A shipment of roses and bulbs is now ready in Belgium for shipment.

France sent word after the declaration of war that there would be no change in her plans, and entries have been received from France in the livestock, horticultural and other departments.

Turkey Has Pavilion.

Turkey's pavilion is a reproduction of a famous Turkish mosque. Among her exhibits will be 100 Arabian horses and Angora goats and blooded sheep. The Persian exhibit has been assembled at Teheran and is awaiting shipment. It includes a priceless collection of rugs.

The site of the Japanese Government pavilion covers 147,000 square feet. The central structure is a reproduction of the famous Temple of Kinka Kuji at Kioto, more than 1000 years old. The buildings are surrounded by beautiful Japanese gardens, the material for which, as well as for the buildings, are shipped from Japan, together with the native Japanese artisans and workmen. The imperial household has loaned the imperial art collection, gathered by the late Emperor Meiji.

The Chinese pavilion—148 tons of material—were brought from China. It represents an expenditure of $300,000 of the $750,000 appropriated.

Exhibits From the Philippines.

In the Philippine Building will be an extensive display of hemp, woods, maguey, sugar and tobacco.

Increased exhibit space has been applied for by the Cuban Commission. The exhibit will include royal palms 60 to 70 feet in height, and growing pineapples and banana plants in fruit.

From Central and South America will be shown, in the Palace of Horticulture, orchids in great variety of color and form; from Hawaii are coming tree ferns and banana plants; France and England are sending rare varieties of hothouse plants, and Japan will send a collection of lilies.

Argentina's appropriation is $1,300,000. Commissioner-General Anasagasti says: "In our exhibits we expect to be second to no country."

Australia has appropriated $400,000 for its exhibit. Her pavilion is 30 per cent completed, and New Zealand's 25 per cent.

The Siamese exhibit will consist largely of a demonstration of the artistic development of the people.

The Dutch East Indies are planning to join with the mother country in making an effective exhibit.

Cochin-China, Indo-China and other Oriental lands will send delegates to participate in a brilliant pageant formed by the people of all the lands within the wide sweep of the Pacific Ocean.

River Commission Fall Session.

The Mississippi River Commission will hold its fall session on board the steamer Mississippi here, Nov. 12. The commission will make an inspection trip from St. Louis to New Orleans and give public hearings at St. Louis and along the route on improvement of the Mississippi River.

The class in advertising conducted by the St. Louis Advertising Men's League will open next Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Central Y. M. C. A. The class is a part of the program of the ad men's league for cleaner and better advertising for St. Louis.

Guide for Voters on Eleven Amendments and Four Referred Laws

ELEVEN constitutional amendments, and four acts of the last Legislature suspended by referendum petition, will be voted upon by the people of Missouri at the election, Nov. 3. A majority of the votes cast on the amendments will be necessary to carry them. Unless a majority of the votes cast on each proposition is adverse the suspended acts of the Legislature will become effective. For the information of voters, the Post-Dispatch publishes herewith a brief summary of each amendment and each suspended law and indicates its opinion on the most important amendments and propositions, those affecting St. Louis or the whole State.

AMENDMENT NO. 1.

This amendment, submitted on the theory that it will prohibit the use of the initiative to resubmit Single Tax proposition, practically prohibits any change in the present tax system. It makes the use of the initiative so difficult that it would be practically valueless. It provides that no proposition submitted by the initiative or referendum and defeated, can be resubmitted within five years. The amendment forever prohibits its own repeal.

VOTE NO.

AMENDMENT NO. 2.

Gives Kansas City power to issue bonds for acquiring public utilities—the bonds to be issued against the utility properties.

AMENDMENT NO. 3.

Provides for a tax of 10 cents on the $100 valuation for improvement of public roads.

VOTE YES.

AMENDMENT NO. 4.

Authorizes an annual salary of $1000 a year for members of the Legislature, instead of $5 a day for the 70 days' session of the General Assembly.

AMENDMENT NO 5.

Provides that any city having a population of more than 100,000 may authorize an increase in taxation for building subways.

VOTE YES.

AMENDMENT NO. 6.

Authorizes the voters of road districts to increase taxation not to exceed 65 cents on the $100 valuation for road improvements.

VOTE YES.

AMENDMENT NO. 7.

Gives the Legislature power to grant pensions or allowances to the deserving blind to enable them to make themselves self-supporting.

VOTE YES.

AMENDMENT NO 8.

Authorizes cities of more than 100,000 inhabitants to adopt simpler methods for amending their charters. Does not apply to St. Louis.

PROPOSITION NO. 9.

This is known as full crew law, passed by the last Legislature, and submitted to the people by referendum petition. Requires railroads to increase the crews on certain kinds of trains.

PROPOSITION NO. 10.

This is a law passed by the last Legislature, known as the county unit bill, which makes the county the unit in local option elections. Submitted to the people by referendum petition.

PROPOSITION NO. 11.

This is a law enacted by the last Legislature giving St. Louis home rule in the appointment by the Mayor, instead of by the Governor, of Excise Commissioners. Submitted by referendum.

VOTE YES.

PROPOSITION NO. 12.

This is a law passed by the last Legislature giving St. Louis home rule in the appointment by the Mayor, instead of by the Governor, of police commissioners. Submitted by referendum.

VOTE YES.

PROPOSITION NO. 13.

Constitutional amendment, providing for woman suffrage. If adopted this amendment will give women the same rights of suffrage as men.

VOTE YES.

PROPOSITION NO. 14.

This is a constitutional amendment empowering the State Legislature at its option to issue $50,000,000 in bonds for building roads.

PROPOSITION NO. 15.

A proposed constitutional amendment authorizing issuing of bonds in road districts, upon petition of taxpayers, for road improvement purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 PROBABLY FAULTY, CIVIC LEAGUE SAYS

A new ground of objection to the proposed constitutional amendment No. 1, which practically kills the initiative and referendum in Missouri, has been found in the probability that if it is passed it will be unconstitutional, according to the Civic League. Attorneys have advised that organization that the amendment places such restrictions on both the Legislature and the people that it might be readily held invalid by the Supreme Court. Furthermore, exception is taken to the ballot title given by the Secretary of State which describes the amendment as aimed against the single tax. As a matter of fact, says the Civic League, it not only prohibits the single tax but any change whatever in our tax system. It also prohibits the resubmission of any defeated measure for six years.

The Civic League has been conducting an active campaign to get out a big city vote against the amendment to offset the prejudice in its favor aroused by the single-tax fight two years ago. Voters have been urged through pamphlets distributed to organizations and citizens throughout the city to scratch Amendment No. 1.

Roger Baldwin, secretary of the league, yesterday said: "Constitutional Amendment No. 1, if adopted, will make it practically impossible to make any change in our present system of taxation,

Guide for Voters on Eleven Amendments and Four Referred Laws

ELEVEN constitutional amendments, and four acts of the last Legislature suspended by referendum petition, will be voted upon by the people of Missouri at the election, Nov. 3. A majority of the votes cast on the amendments will be necessary to carry them. Unless a majority of the votes cast on each proposition is adverse the suspended acts of the Legislature will become effective. For the information of voters, the Post-Dispatch publishes herewith a brief summary of each amendment and each suspended law and indicates its opinion on the most important amendments and propositions, those affecting St. Louis or the whole State.

AMENDMENT NO. 1.

This amendment, submitted on the theory that it will prohibit the use of the initiative to resubmit Single Tax proposition, practically prohibits any change in the present tax system. It makes the use of the initiative so difficult that it would be practically valueless. It provides that no proposition submitted by the initiative or referendum and defeated, can be resubmitted within five years. The amendment forever prohibits its own repeal.

VOTE NO.

AMENDMENT NO. 2.

Gives Kansas City power to issue bonds for acquiring public utilities—the bonds to be issued against the utility properties.

AMENDMENT NO. 3.

Provides for a tax of 10 cents on the $100 valuation for improvement of public roads.

VOTE YES.

AMENDMENT NO. 4.

Authorizes an annual salary of $1000 a year for members of the Legislature, instead of $5 a day for the 70 days' session of the General Assembly.

AMENDMENT NO 5.

Provides that any city having a population of more than 100,000 may authorize an increase in taxation for building subways.

VOTE YES.

AMENDMENT NO. 6.

Authorizes the voters of road districts to increase taxation not to exceed 65 cents on the $100 valuation for road improvements.

VOTE YES.

AMENDMENT NO. 7.

Gives the Legislature power to grant pensions or allowances to the deserving blind to enable them to make themselves self-supporting.

VOTE YES.

AMENDMENT NO 8.

Authorizes cities of more than 100,000 inhabitants to adopt simpler methods for amending their charters. Does not apply to St. Louis.

PROPOSITION NO. 9.

This is known as full crew law, passed by the last Legislature, and submitted to the people by referendum petition. Requires railroads to increase the crews on certain kinds of trains.

PROPOSITION NO. 10.

This is a law passed by the last Legislature, known as the county unit bill, which makes the county the unit in local option elections. Submitted to the people by referendum petition.

PROPOSITION NO. 11.

This is a law enacted by the last Legislature giving St. Louis home rule in the appointment by the Mayor, instead of by the Governor, of Excise Commissioners. Submitted by referendum.

VOTE YES.

PROPOSITION NO. 12.

This is a law passed by the last Legislature giving St. Louis home rule in the appointment by the Mayor, instead of by the Governor, of police commissioners. Submitted by referendum.

VOTE YES.

PROPOSITION NO. 13.

Constitutional amendment, providing for woman suffrage. If adopted this amendment will give women the same rights of suffrage as men.

VOTE YES.

PROPOSITION NO. 14.

This is a constitutional amendment empowering the State Legislature at its option to issue $50,000,000 in bonds for building roads.

PROPOSITION NO. 15.

A proposed constitutional amendment authorizing issuing of bonds in road districts, upon petition of taxpayers, for road improvement purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 PROBABLY FAULTY, CIVIC LEAGUE SAYS

A new ground of objection to the proposed constitutional amendment No. 1, which practically kills the initiative and referendum in Missouri, has been found in the probability that if it is passed it will be unconstitutional, according to the Civic League. Attorneys have advised that organization that the amendment places such restrictions on both the Legislature and the people that it might be readily held invalid by the Supreme Court. Furthermore, exception is taken to the ballot title given by the Secretary of State which describes the amendment as aimed against the single tax. As a matter of fact, says the Civic League, it not only prohibits the single tax but any change whatever in our tax system. It also prohibits the resubmission of any defeated measure for six years.

The Civic League has been conducting an active campaign to get out a big city vote against the amendment to offset the prejudice in its favor aroused by the single-tax fight two years ago. Voters have been urged through pamphlets distributed to organizations and citizens throughout the city to scratch Amendment No. 1.

Roger Baldwin, secretary of the league, yesterday said: "Constitutional Amendment No. 1, if adopted, will make it practically impossible to make any change in our present system of taxation,

SAGER FINISHING HIS CAMPAIGN FOR SENATE, HERE

Progressive Candidate Reiterates His Party and Republicans Are Far Apart as Poles.

TOUCHES ON THE TARIFF

Declares It a False and Needless Political Issue—Should Be Purely an Economic Question.

Arthur N. Sager, Progressive party candidate for United States Senator, having toured most of the counties of the State is finishing his campaign in St. Louis. Sager spoke to an audience of 500 people at North St. Louis Turner Hall, Twentieth and Salisbury streets, Friday night. He said, in part:

"In this campaign it is the aim of the Republican party to win back those who left its ranks in 1912. Many are the means and expedients adopted.

"A favorite appeal is that there is no difference in principle between the Republicans and the Progressives and that we should get together to defeat our natural and ancient enemies—the Democrats.

"It is not true that the Republican and Progressive parties are without differences. The truth is they are essentially and irrevocably divided. They are as far apart as two poles.

Cites Highest Republican Authority.

"Argument on this point is unnecessary. We have authority—the highest authority in the Republican party, in a blunt and frank statement, that it is the business of the Republican party for years to come to oppose and defeat the Progressive party and its policies.

"The Progressive party is a protection party, but it does not believe that the tariff is a political question. It insists that it is purely an economic question which can never be honestly and fairly settled until it is removed from the influence of political exigency and expediency.

"The tariff is a false and needless issue. It has never contributed either to national prosperity or depression to the extent popularly believed and invariably charged. There is no more hope for the country under the principle of tariff making which hesults in a Payne-Aldrich bill than there is in the one that gives us the Underwood law. In both cases the methods are unjust, illogical, sectional and accidental.

Cut Loose From Old Methods.

"The Progressive party is cut loose from the old method of tariff making and is forever divorced from the program which makes possible such legislation as the Payne-Aldrich bill.

"Where we find the Republican party indifferent or opposed to our program of social justice, the Democratic party, while professing sympathy for the condition of those we would help, deny the remedy because of its blind adherence to the doctrine of 'stateism' and its insistence that the measure of relief we propose is only possible at the hands of the different state governments.

"The result of this policy was once a nation half slave and half free—a policy that was only reversed after the Southland had been drenched by the best blood of the nation.

Again Cites Mr. Taft.

"Mr. Taft announces that our theories of government are pernicious and the Republican party consigns its destiny to the keeping of men who agree with him. The issue is thus clarified and decision made simple. If the principles in which we believe and the reforms which we hope to accomplish are possible of attainment, it must be through the medium of the Progressive party or not at all.

"It may not be today, or yet tomorrow. It may not come until the Republican party has gone out of existence, for it has predicated its existence upon its ability to crush the Progressive party and the principles of government to which it is dedicated. In any event, the little time we have existed has justified the wisdom of our organization, and we know if we were right in bringing the party into existence, we are right now in continuing it. There is no alternative."

GEORGE FRED WILLIAMS HOME, ADMITS ERROR

Minister Says He Was Not Forced to Resign; Made "Last Cry for Freedom."

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—George Fred Williams of Boston, former United States Minister to Greece and Montenegro, whose criticism of the European Powers for their conduct in Albania led to a request for his resignation early in July, arrived in New York today, on board the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam from Rotterdam.

Williams said he was not forced to resign, but he admitted that the statement attributed to him was undiplomatic and he, therefore, tendered his resignation and is now on his way to Washington officially to sever his conection with the diplomatic service.

"I had to make the statement that I am charged with," said Williams. "It was my last cry for freedom and justice for Albania before the nations of Europe began to fly at one another's throats. Albania, surrounded by six powers, was in the [illegible] of usurpers who had no business there and who were setting one [illegible] against another."

FORMER YALE MAN TO WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Other Changes in the Faculty Are Announced; Laboratory Improved.

Prof. W. A. Robinson, formerly of Yale and the Idaho State University, has been appointed to take charge of the courses in government at Washington University. Another change in the faculty this fall is the appointment of Dr. Eugene F. Wightman as instructor in chemistry. Dr. Wightman holds the degree of B. S. from Richmond College and the Ph. D. degree from Johns Hopkins University.

James E. Allison, formerly a member of the St. Louis Public Utility Commission, has been engaged to give a course on the economics of public utilities. The school of social economy is offering a new course of social service for nurses.

In the school of engineering several additions have been made to the laboratory, including a 40-horsepower engine and a five-horsepower induction motor.

Three Held on Counterfeit Charge.

Louis Boltick, Michael Wassovitch and Mike Tamich were held for the Federal grand jury after a hearing before United States Commissioner Mitchell yesterday. They were charged with having in their possession counterfeit $5 gold pieces. Geo. Kosonovich, who was arrested with these men, was discharged, the police having no evidence against him. The four men were arrested Oct. 21.

EAT LESS MEAT IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT OR YOU FEEL BACKACHY AND RHEUMATIC

Too much meat forms uric acid in the blood, which clogs Kidneys; causes Rheumatism and irritates the Bladder.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—ADV.

ILLINOIS FARMER CONFESSES KILLING WIFE, 4 CHILDREN

Scott Stone of Tolona Says He Fired Dynamite in His Home So That He Might Go Away With Woman Whose Name He Doesn't Know.

DECLARES DREAM LED TO HIS ADMISSION

Dictates Story Without Any Emotion and Tells of Receiving Sympathy of Neighbors Because of Supposed Bereavement.

With as utter an absence of emotion as if the subject had been the crops, Scott Stone, a young farmer of Tolono, Ill., who came to Jefferson Barracks as an army recruit two weeks ago, yesterday dictated a confession as to how he used dynamite to kill his family, consisting of his wife and four children, for love of a woman whose surname he did not know, and who repaid the five-fold crime committed for her sake by betraying him to the police.

Stone waived extradition proceedings, and was taken away at 7 o'clock last night to Champaign, Ill., there to stand trial for murder. He was guarded by Deputy Fire Marshals C. J. Roberts enry Sloan, who caused his arriday at Jefferson Barracks.

GERHARD NURSE TELLS WHY SHE KIDNAPED GIRL

Woman Under Arrest in Muskogee Asserts She Had Come to Love Child So That She Would Rather Die Than Be Separated From Her.

PLEADED ON KNEES AGAINST DISCHARGE

Declares Child's Grandmother Had Asked Her to Return Girl to Texas if She Wasn't Treated Right; Describes Her Flight.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MUSKOGEE, Ok., Oct. 31.—Julia Krususky, a nurse who last Monday fled from St. Louis with Virginia Lee Gerhard, 4-year-old daughter of Harry H. Gerhard and who was placed under detention here today, told dramatically to a Post-Dispatch correspondent tonight her own story of why she kidnaped the child. It was a tale of romantic pathos, revealing how a foster mother's passionate love for a child she had grown to adore as her own drove her to rebellion when the father, by legal right, attempted to separate her from the child.

She was thrown into grief by her identification and arrest. "I'd rather die than be parted from Virginia," she wept.

"If I am to go to jail, take the child and never let me see the world again," she exclaimed.

She and the little girl were placed for the night in the custody of Miss Winifred Flaherty, manager of a sanitarium in the outskirts of Muskogee and former Police Matron of this city.

Virginia, unconscious of the storm of emotions of which she was the center, frolicked about in the merriest of moods. She was content as long as "Judie," as she called her nurse, was beside her. "I want to do whatever Judie does," she lisped. "I don't want to back to papa. Judie didn't make me come. I came with Judie because I love her."

With Child Since Infancy.

The nurse related that she was placed in charge of the child when it was only 17 days old, six days after the death of the mother, and that they had never been separated for a moment since, except for a short period in which Gerhard was able to take the baby away and place her in an orphan asylum. She grew to love Virginia with all the strength of her nature.

She told that Gerhard, last April, married Elizabeth Owsley and immediately began steps to get possession of his daughter, whom he had seen but a few times, as she and the nurse were living with the former Mrs. Gerhard's mother, Mrs. Virginia Lee Curtis of Bonham, Tex. She said that Mrs. Curtis, weeping for days, resisted as long as she could, but was at last persuaded to send the nurse and her grandchild to St. Louis.

On their first night there, she continued, Virginia was compelled to sleep alone in a room, although all her life she had slept with two women in her room, and was so frightened that she cried all night. "Let her alone," the baby's stepmother said, according to the nurse, "she has got to get used to it."

Frantic Over Her Discharge.

When Gerhard told Miss Krususky, she said, that he was going to send her away and that "you're through with Virginia and Virginia is through with you," the nurse became frantic over the impending separation. While Gerhard was gone to buy her railroad ticket, she stole from the house withth e child. With her own savings she bought a ticket to Kansas City, and went from there to Tulsa, where an uncle of the child, Eugene Curtis, is a bookkeeper in a bank. She said Curtis aided her to keep the baby in hiding for two days at Sand Springs, a manufacturing suburb of Tulsa, and then sent them on to Muskogee, whence they intended to make their way to the home of Mrs Curtis in Bonham.

Curtis arrived in Muskogee tonight, and conferred with the nurse, advising her to return to St. Louis and restore Virginia to her father. She protested vehemently, but was finally won over to say that she probably would do as Curtis urged her, if she were promised permission to see Virginia at times, and immunity from prosecution on a kidnaping charge. German Armored Automobile Going Into Action

THE armored cars consist for the most part of steel-plated motor cars with machine guns fixed behind the driver. The car, with its complement of about half a dozen men, scouts through the country, and if it should chance to meet any of the enemy's patrols it immediately goes into action against them. In the face of large bodies of the enemy it is, of course, incapable of doing much damage. When entering a village or town where the enemy is thought to be in hiding the car proceeds backward so as to be able to retire immediately should it be necessary to do so. The above picture shows a patrol mounted on motor bicycles surprised by an armored car and destroyed. Owing to their great mobility these cars have almost invariably escaped capture or serious injury, and continue to be an effective weapon.

FORMER TEACHER IN CITY SCHOOLS BURNED TO DEATH

Clayton Woman's Clothes Catch Fire When She Is Trying to Destroy Cobwebs in Shed.

Miss Edith E. Fay, 42 years old, of 310 Forsythe boulevard, Clayton, died at 12:30 p. m. yesterday from burns received about 7:15 a. m., when her clothing caught fire, supposedly when cleaning an outbuilding on the Fay premises with kerosene.

Miss Fay had taught in the St. Louis public schools for more than 15 years. She gave up her position in the Carr Lane School a year ago following a nervous breakdown.

Coroner Bopp, after a personal investigation, decided death was accidental. He had been told by Mrs. A. F. Fay, the mother, and Miss ean Fay, a sister, that Miss Fay took with her a half-gallon jar of kerosene when she left the rear door of the house and went to the outbuilding.

The family's theory is that she poured the kerosene into a hole leading into a septic tank for use as a disinfectant. Then, wishing to burn some cobwebs from the pipe leading into the tank, she struck a match. Fumes from the coal oil became ignited, and the flash which followed ignited her clothes.

Miss Fay was enveloped in flames as she rushed into the yard crying for help. Seth Kinslowe, an iceman who was on his wagon in the alley in the rear of the Fay home, jumped over the fence, rushed into the house and got a blanket, which was wrapped around her.

Dr. M. Leon, who lives next door, was called in and on unwrapping the blanket found Miss Fay's clothing still burning beneath it. Her entire body showed effects of the burns.

The only words Miss Fay said from the time of the accident until her death were: "I didn't mean to do it," which were spoken in the presence of her mother and sister.

Miss Fay's death is the second in St. Louis County in three weeks resulting from burns received when the clothing of the victims caught fire mysteriously. William R. Donaldson Jr., a lawyer, was working Oct. 11 on his automobile in the rear of his home on the Price road, west of Clayton, when his clothing became soaked with gasoline. While walking from the garage to the house, his clothing became ignited, supposedly from his stepping on a match, inflicting burns which caused his death the following day.

PROHIBITION IN STATE IF MEEKER WINS, SAGER SAYS

Republican Nominee for Congress Regarded as Breweries' Candidate, He Asserts.

Speaking at the American Hall, Pestalozzi street and Jefferson avenue, last night, Arthur N. Sager, Progressive candidate for United States Senator, declared that the election of Jacob E. Meeker, Republican, in the Tenth Congressional District would "bring on state-wide prohibition in Missouri."

Sager said he had just returned from a tour of the State, and everywhere he found public sentiment inflamed against the Meeker candidacy. He said he did not know whether Meeker represented the breweries or not, but that the country people believed him to be the breweries' candidate.

"If he is elected, no amount of work, discussion or argument will change the opinion of the people back in the State that the breweries have put a representative in Congress on the Republican ticket. The effect will be to renew the agitation of the prohibition question. His election will be like pouring oil on the flames that are now smoldering.

"It has been my observation, during a rather active public career, that big business has been extremely short-sighted in its attitude toward the public. This is especially true of the liquor interests, for they have invariably aroused antagonism. Their political activities and the activities of the retailers in the small country towns are largely responsible for the sentiment that has swept over the country in the past 10 years."

There are 114 counties in this State. In 1906, 79 were 'wet. Now only 23 are wet' and 91 are 'dry.' This has all occurred since I lived in Missouri, and I know that it is due more to the bad judgment and bad politics of the liquor interests than to any moral change in the people.

"The life and tenure of this business is uncertain. If the breweries persist in waving the red flag before a people already aroused, they will soon be put out of business. The people of this city on one occasion organized and spent their money to prevent prohibition. They didn't do it because they favored the liquor business as such, but they did it to save a big industry to the city and prevent thousands from being thrown out of employment. Another time, they will not be successful if political mistakes such as the nomination of Mr. Meeker are persisted in."

YOUTH CONFESSES $69,000 FORGERY OF CERTIFICATES OF LACLEDE GAS CO. STOCK

One New York Broker Arrested and Wall Street Has Rumor $250,000 in Bogus Security Is Afloat

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Stock certificates of the Laclede Gas Co. of St. Louis, admittedly to the extent of $69,000 but by rumor said to be $250,000, have been forged and negotiated in Wall Street.

The mystery of who forged the stock certificates, the deposit of which on the "Frank A. Weston" account with Ehrich & Co., led to the indictment of George H. Lowden of Hempstead, L. I., a broker member of the Meadowbrook Hunt Club and secretary at various times to Long Island millionaires, on a charge of "uttering" one of them, was cleared today when a well-dressed man about 21 years old came to the District Attorney's office. He asked to see Assistant District Attorney Perkins, who presented the Lowden case to the grand jury.

Offers to Tell of Deal.

"I have come about that Lowden case," the visitor remarked.

Mr. Perkins nearly fell out of his chair when the young man added: "I guess I'm the man who wrote in those forged names."

The visitor, Charles Goodwin, then told how the certificates were stolen and forged to the extent of $69,000. Detectives were sent to look for a man Goodwin named as his accomplice. This person is said to have once been a friend of Lowden.

Goodwin said he had recently been employed by the Norwich Union Fire Insurance Co., but in November, 1911, was in the stock transfer department of the Standard Trust Co., then fiscal agents for the Laclede Gas Co.

He noticed that the stock certificates in the book of the company were signed in blank and bore the official seal, only needing the counter signature of the trust company. He said he took 10 certificates to an uptown apartment, with the rubber stamps which were necessary for the counter signature.

Had Friend Handle Stock.

He wrote in the proper place the name of William C. Cox, an officer of the Standard Trust Co. Another signature was required, so he wrote the first that occurred to him, "Smith." He said he made no effort to imitate the handwriting of either officer of the company. He turned over the certificates to a friend for negotiation.

Goodwin said that in a few days he lost his nerve and went to ask his friend to destroy the certificates. The stock was then selling at 110. The friend, according to Goodwin, consented to destroy them. Nearly two years later he heard an attempt was being made to circulate the stock, but his friend assured him that they had been destroyed.

He thought no more about the matter, Goodwin said, until yesterday morning, when he read about Lowden's indictment and the circumstances surrounding it. He decided, he said, to tell all he knew. Goodwin was locked up and will be arraigned on a charge of forgery. He said he had never seen Lowden.

President of Laclede Gas Co. Hadn't Heard of Forgery.

C. L. Holman, president and general manager of the Laclede Gas Co., when informed of the forged stock certificates by a Post-Dispatch reporter last night, said an investigation by the company would be made at once.

He said the forging of Laclede stock certificates never had been brought to the company's attention before, and that no effort ever had been made to collect dividends on any than the regular amount of stock issued. He said the Standard Trust Co. in 1911 was the Laclede's transfer agent in New York.

BRITISH CRUISER IS SUNK IN CHANNEL BY GERMAN SUBMARINE

German Attempt to Reach French Channel Ports Renewed—Allies Bring Up Land and Sea Forces—Naval Guns Bombarding Invaders' Flank Heard on British Coast.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

LONDON, Nov. 1, 1:17 a. m.—Turkey has formally annexed Egypt, according to a German official statement which has been received from Berlin by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co.

The British government tonight issued a statement which is tantamount to a declaration of war against Turkey. This was the official announcement that the Turkish government summarily shut off communications with the British Embassy at Constantinople Friday, and that the British government must take whatever action is required to protect British interests and territory, and Egypt from attacks made or threatened.

Earlier in the day an effort was made to give Turkey one more chance, but communication with Constantinople was cut off and the British government acted on the situation existing before the break in communication.

Turkey was asked by the Allies, acting jointly, for an explanation of the activities of her fleet, while demands are being made for the dismissal of the German naval officers and men and the dismantlement of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, the transfer of which from the German to the Turkish flag is held to be illegal.

It was impressed on Turkey, with all diplomatic force possible, that if she engages in war now, she must fight Great Britain and France, as well as Russia. It was also made known to her, that, if she and Germany make a losing fight, it means the complete elimination of Turkey in Europe.

Correspondence Ceases, War Is Expected.

The decision was put squarely up to Turkey, and her answer was awaited with the keenest interest, for if Turkey engages, there was thought to be little chance of the war not spreading. Now that correspondence has ceased, war is the alternative.

Greece is known to be ready to enter, and it will take only the slightest pressure by the Allies in Athens for the Greek forces to start operations against Turkey.

Whether the Allies will consider this advisable depends on the course that Italy follows. Many competent observers here feel that the situation gives Italy ample justification for participation. Should Greece enter, it will be difficult to prevent the war from spreading throughout the Balkans.

Russian Fleet Attacks Turks in Black Sea.

An official message has been received at Rome from Constantinople, according to a dispatch to London, announcing that the Russian fleet had attacked the Turkish fleet near Sebastopol, in the Black Sea.

A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Athens said that the Russian Ambassador and his staff have left Constantinople. It is believed in official circles in Athens that the question of peace in the Balkans depend upon the attitude of Bulgaria.

Russia Breaks Turkish Relations; Goeben's Guns Keep Sultan in Line

PETROGRAD, Oct. 31.—The semi-official Russian news agency says that, because of the attack of the German-Turkish warships against the Russian coast on the Black Sea, the Russian Government has enjoined the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople to announce to the Sublime Porte the rupture of diplomatic relations with Turkey, and his departure with all the members of his embassy and consulates.

The protection of the interests of Russian subjects in Turkey has been confided to the Italian Government.

The Turkish Ambassador here professes to know nothing officially of the acts of war committed in the name of his Government by a ship under German command, flying the Ottoman flag. He appealed to the Russian Foreign Office, where he was told that Russia's attitude toward the Turkish Embassy here entirely depended on the attitude of the Turkish Government toward the Russian Ambassador in Constantinople.

The evening papers report that the Germans have practically seized command at Constantinople, and that the Goeben lies in the offing, with her big guns directed at the Sultan's Palace to compel acquiescence to Germany's plan of action.

The bombardment of undefended commercial ports on the Black Sea has not caused alarm here, even in business circles. The public evidenced its feelings last night by a great demonstration. The procession, carrying the flags of the Allied nations and singing national hymns, paraded the principal streets and visited the friendly embassies, among them the British, where Sir George Buchanan spoke a few words to the huge crowd.

Police Guard Turkish Embassy Effectively.

The Turkish Embassy, not a hundred yards away, was ignored, after a speech urging the crowd not to commit imprudent acts had been made by one of the leaders of the procession. The police were in strong force around the Turkish Embassy.

The Russian public is enraged at the conduct of the Germans in Turkish ships, and is disposed to rejoice that Turkey at last has dug her own grave, as it is expressed here.

Although Turkey has made no overt move so far, and does not acknowledge diplomatically any breach of peace toward Russia, a state of war really exists, and the Russian view is that France and England now can proceed to attack the Turkish fleet and coast as an enemy of their ally.

Foreign Minister Sazonoff received the British and French Ambassadors today, and a report is current that Turkey may have a last opportunity to disown the action of its ships. The diplomats are skeptical on this point, and consider that war between Turkey and all the Allies is inevitable and immediate.

Russia Well Prepared for the Turk.

Russia is well prepared to deal with the new situation created by Turkey. The Black Sea fleet has long been in readiness and, in addition to regular troops in Caucasia, volunteer corps have been organized among the Armenians, Georgians and Mohammedans. The Armenians are overjoyed at the prospect of fighting their hereditary enemy, and wealthy Armenian merchants are contributing large sums for the equipment of volunteer forces. Caucasian mountaineers are enrolling, too, with alacrity. Most of them are Mohammedans, but their sympathies are not with Turkey.

Petrograd newspapers express concern at the attitude of Bulgaria, but most of them refuse to admit the possibility of her aiding Turkey against the Empire that liberated her from the Ottoman yoke.

War Declared, Says a Private Message Sent Through Embassy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—War has been officially declared at Constantinople between Turkey and Russia, according to a private message transmitted today through the courtesy of the American embassy. The Ambassador has not advised the Washington government of the declaration of war, but officials thought tonight his message had been delayed in transit, or that he was awaiting formal notification by the Ottoman government.

The private message, which was addressed to a New York business man who had interests in Turkey, was dated 5 p. m. Friday, and reached here a few hours after a lengthy dispatch from Ambassador Morgenthou himself, describing events in Constantinople up to noon yesterday.

The Turkish Minister of Fiance has informed the French Ambassador at Constantinople that the raid of Turkish warships on Russian seaports took place without the knowledge of the Ottoman Government, and presumably under the influence of German officers and crews. This information was conveyed in a dispatch today from Ambassador Morgenthau to the American Government.

Morgenthau added that the Russian Ambassador received instructions at 3 a. m. yesterday to demand his passports and made an effort to see the Grand Vizier, who pleaded illness and did not receive him.

The Russian, French and British Ambassadors, according to the same dispatch, are preparing to leave Constantinople together tonight.

On receiving instructions to leave Constantinople, the Russian Ambassador immediately placed the interests of the Russian Government in the hands of the Italian Ambassador.

Ambassador Morgenthau's dispatch made no mention of any declaraion of war nor of internal conditions in Turkey. He probably will take over the French and British interests.

Ambassador Morgenthau's dispatch was filed at noon yesterday in cipher and was read with interest by White House officials as well as by officers of the Government generally. The fact that no mention was made concerning missionaries led officials to believe that Morgenthau felt confident Americans throughout the Ottoman Empire would be safe.

Sebastopol Bombarded; Turkish Fleet Sinks 2 Russian Ships

AMSTERDAM, via London, Oct. 31. 11 p. m.—A Turkish cruiser has bombarded Sebastopol, according to a dispatch from Constantinople to the Frenkfurter Zeitung.

The following official telegram from Constantinople is published by the Zeitung:

"A small part of the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea on Thursday sank the Russian mine-layer Prut, a vessel of 5000 tons, which had aboard 700 mines, damaged a Russian torpedo boat and seized a coal steamer.

"A torpedo fired from the torpedo boat Hairet-I-Millet sank the Russian destroyer Kubanets. The Mauvenet-I-Millet torpedoed a Russian coast guard ship, which was severely damaged. Three Russian officers were saved by us and imprisoned. The Turkish fleet suffered no loss and the battle was successfully continued."

"A dispatch from Berlin announces that telegrams from Turkey say the Turkish fleet, in a battle with the Russian Black Sea fleet, sank not two, but four torpedo boats and one gunboat.

LONDON, Oct. 31, 11:40 p. m.—The Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. sends the following dispatch:

"The Russian gunboat Kubanets put up a fight against two Turkish torpedo boats which entered Odessa harbor, and attacked merchant ships. The Kubanets finally drove the Turkish boats off.

"The torpedo boats entered the harbor and fired all their guns. Shells struck the Kubanets, tearing away her wooden superstructure, while steamers in the harbor and wareohuses on shore were damaged. The Turks strove to torpedo the Kubanets, but failed.

"The passengers and crew of the steamer Yalta, which was sunk, were saved, and most of the crew of the Kasbeck, which also sunk, got away on rafts.

Turkish Envoy in Berlin Cheered

BERLIN, Oct. 31. by way of The Hague and London, 2:40 p. m.—Announcement of Turkey's participation in the war caused enthusiasm in Berlin. A large crowd gathered in Potsdamer-Platz, and later marched to the Turkish embassy, cheering for the Sultan and the Turkish Minister of War, Envey Pasha. Turkish Ambassador Mahmoud Mukhtar Pasha made a brief speech from the balcony of the embassy, expressing his gratitude for the manifestation, which, he said, was certain proof of the affectionate relations of Germany and Turkey.

Turkish Cable Interrupted

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The Commercial Cable Co. announced today that communication with Turkey in Europe, Turkey in Asia and Turkish Islands was interrupted.

Submarine Lnrking in the Channel Sinks British Cruiser Hermes

LONDON, Oct. 31, 11:10 p. m.—The enterprise of German submarines, which have been lurking along the French coast on the Straits of Dover, seeking to get a shot at British ships engaged in bombarding the German positions in Belgium, was rewarded today, when one of them attacked and sank the light cruiser Hermes as she was returning from Dunkirk. The greater part of the crew was rescued.

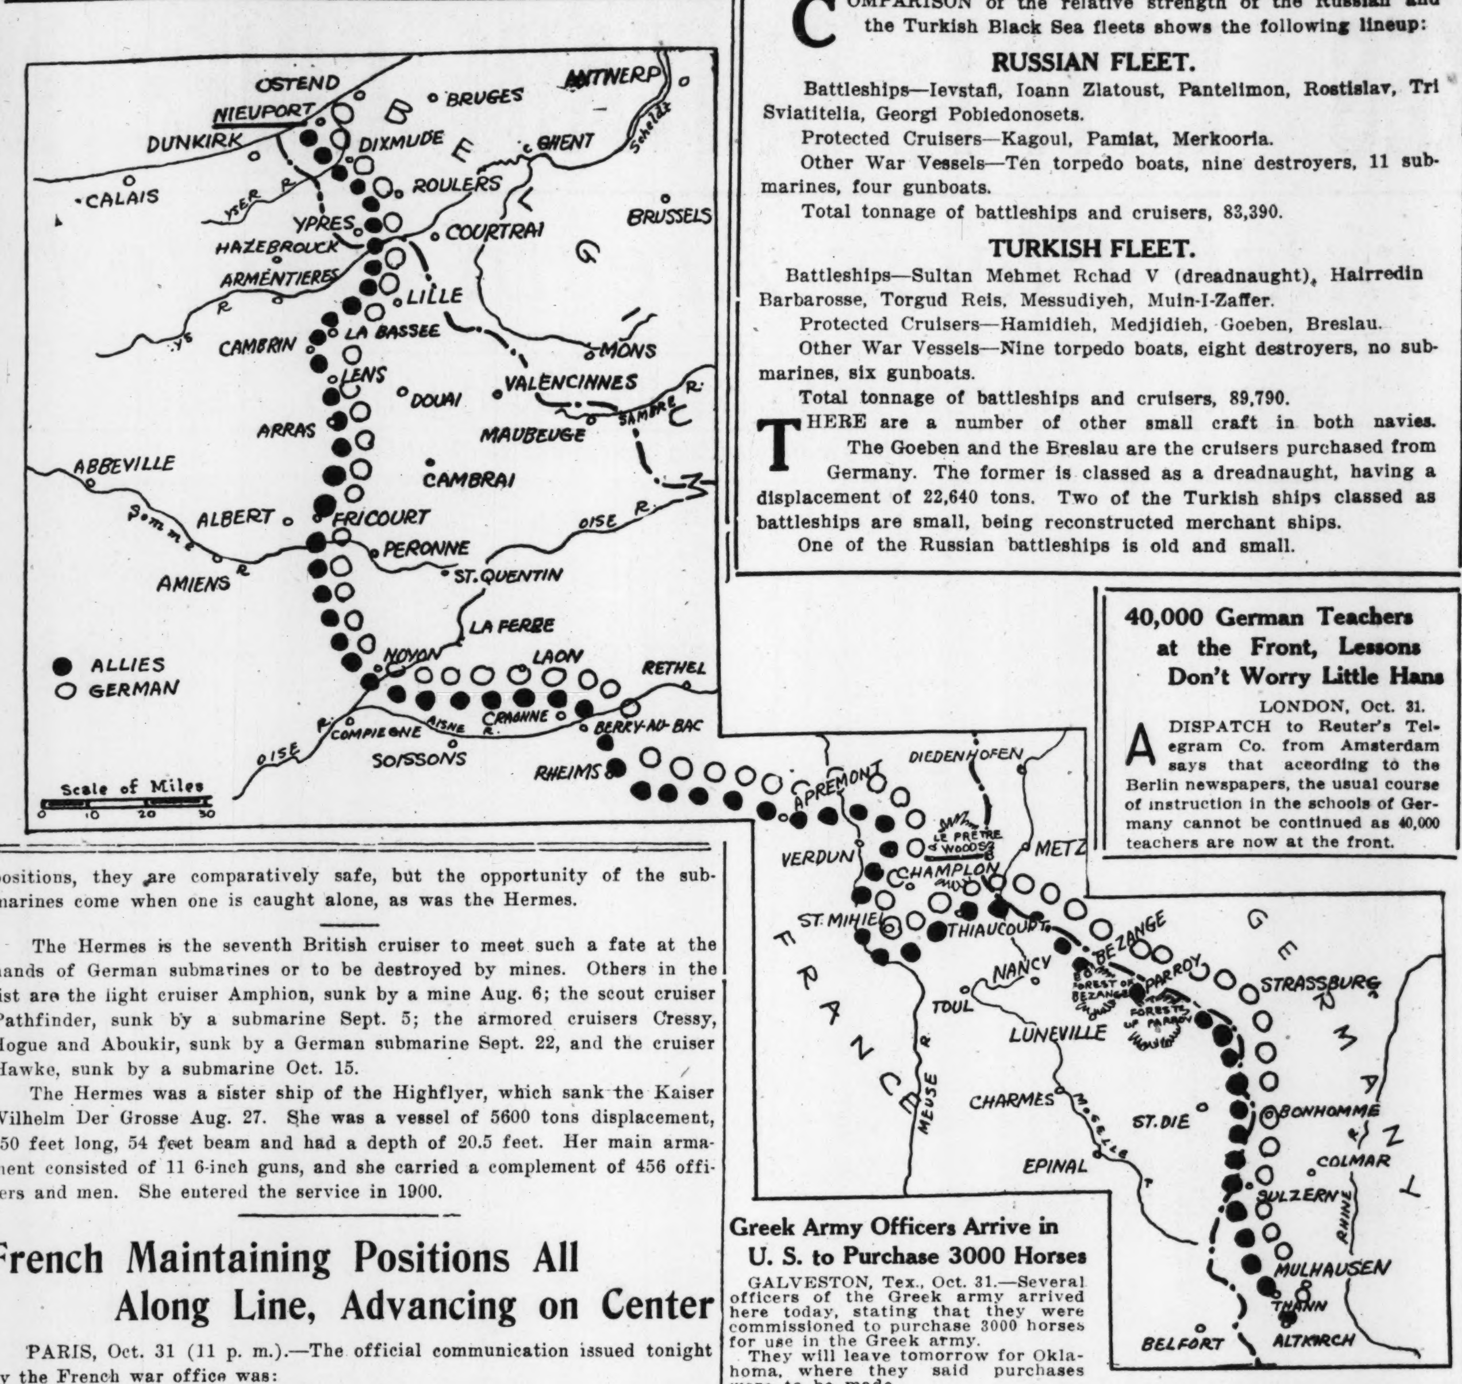
The Hermes was a comparatively old vessel, and from a naval viewpoint was of no great value, but the fact that she was attacked so near home indicates that the German submarines must have a base somewhere on that part of the Belgian coast which is occupied by German troops, from which they can menace ships of the Allies passing between England and France. Only a few days ago one of them sank the French steamer Admiral Ganteaume, which was carrying refugees from Calais.

How many submarines the Germans have in these waters is not known, but several of them have been seen recently. When ships are guarded by torpedo boat destroyers, as are those engaged in bombarding the German positions, they are comparatively safe, but the opportunity of the submarines come when one is caught alone, as was the Hermes.

The Hermes is the seventh British cruiser to meet such a fate at the hands of German submarines or to be destroyed by mines. Others in the list are the light cruiser Amphion, sunk by a mine Aug. 6; the scout cruiser Pathfinder, sunk by a submarine Sept. 5; the armored cruisers Cressy, Hogue and Aboukir, sunk by a German submarine Sept. 22, and the cruiser Hawke, sunk by a submarine Oct. 15.

The Hermes was a sister ship of the Highflyer, which sank the Kaiser Wilhelm Der Grosse Aug. 27. She was a vessel of 5600 tons displacement, 350 feet long, 54 feet beam and had a depth of 20.5 feet. Her main armament consisted of 11 6-inch guns, and she carried a complement of 456 officers and men. She entered the service in 1900.

Position of Hostile Forces in Belgium and France



French Maintaining Positions All Along Line, Advancing on Center

PARIS, Oct. 31 (11 p. m.).—The official communication issued tonight by the French war office was:

"According to the latest advices, there is no incident of any importance to report. In the center we have made progress, as in the region to the north of Souain.

"Everywhere else we are maintaining our positions."

This afternoon's official announcement was as follows:

"The day of yesterday was marked by an attempt at a general offensive movement on the part of the Germans along the entire front from Nieuport to Arras and by violent attacks delivered at other points of the line of battle. From Nieuport to the canal of La Bassee there were alternate movements of advancement and retirement.

"To the south of Nieuport the Germans who had taken possession of Rampikapelle were driven out of this town by a counter attack.

"To the south of Ypres we lost some points of support, Hollebecke and Zandworde, but we progressed to the east of Ypres in the direction of Paschendaele.

"Between La Bassee and Arras all the attacks made by the Germans were repulsed with heavy losses for them.

"In the region of Chaulnes we advanced beyond Lihions and we took possession of Le Quesnoy in the Santerre district.

"In the region of the Aisne also we have made progress on the heights of the right bank down stream from Soissons, but we were compelled to withdraw in the vicinity of Vailly.

"We have advanced in the region of Souain and there has been a violent engagement in the Argonne.

"In the Woevre district we have again won ground in the forest of Le Petre."

German Retreat from Dixmude Is Indicated; Water Checks Advance

LONDON, Nov. 1, 1:27 a. m.—The Flushing correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. says:

"Heavy firing can be heard in Sluis from the direction of Thourout. Everything indicates that the Germans are retreating from Dixmude."

The German attempts to reach the French channel ports were resumed with energy yesterday. The Germans undertook general offensive tactics from the coast at Nieuport to Arras, and while they made progress at some points, they were repulsed at others, and in some cases were compelled to give ground. Near the coast their advance was checked by an extension of the flooded area.

The battle is raging with the fury that marked the opening of the last phase of this campaign, and even on the English coast the boom of the big naval guns which are bombarding the invader's flank could today be distinctly heard.

The Allies have brought up land and sea forces in an endeavor to check this second effort of the Germans to establish themselves on the French coast, from which they hope to menace England.

The German official report issued early today announced that the German troops had occupied Ramscapelle, which is on the railway and canal between Nieuport and Dixmuda, but the French official communication of this afternoon says they were driven out by a counter attack. Doubtless the extension of the flooded area which now reaches beyond this town, made the German position untenable.

Gains Made by Both Sides Small.

One the whole, therefore, it would appear that the situation on this most important battle front remains much as it was when the Germans, through exhaustion a few days ago, ceased their heavy artillery fire for rest. The French report tells of various advances and losses, but these usually, so far as distance is concerned, can be marked in feet or yards, and the advance made a few days ago by the British in Belgium of 1200 yards was considered remarkable.

Throughout the great battle front there has been a repetition of attacks and counter attacks, with at times, a pronounced thinning of the lines, whether they have gained a slight advance or have been thrown back. The Germans made a particularly violent attack east of Soissons on the Aisne, and, according to the German report, drove the French across the river.

Reports that Lille has been reoccupied by the French and that Ostend has been evacuated by the Germans lack confirmation, and are considered premature, but around the former city fighting of a most desperate character has been going on, and the villages surrounding Lille have been taken and retaken time after time.

The east Prussian frontier again is the scene of a big battle. The Germans for five days carried out heavy offensive movements, but according to the Russian reports were repulsed with immense losses.

Relative Strength of Turkish and Russian Black Sea Fleets

COMPARISON of the relative strength of the Russian and the Turkish Black Sea fleets shows the following lineup:

RUSSIAN FLEET.

Battleships—Ievstafi, Ioann Zlatoust, Pantelimon, Rostislav, Tri Sviatitelia, Georgi Pobiedonosets.

Protected Cruisers—Kagoul, Pamiat, Merkooria.

Other War Vessels—Ten torpedo boats, nine destroyers, 11 submarines, four gunboats.

THERE are a number of other small craft in both navies. The Goeben and the Breslau are the cruisers purchased from Germany. The former is classed as a dreadnaught, having a displacement of 22,640 tons. Two of the Turkish ships classed as battleships are small, being reconstructed merchant ships.

40,000 German Teachers at the Front, Lessons Don't Worry Little Hans

A DISPATCH to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Amsterdam says that according to the Berlin newspapers, the usual course of instruction in the schools of Germany cannot be continued as 40,000 teachers are now at the front.

Greek Army Officers Arrive in U. S. to Purchase 3000 Horses

GALVESTON, Tex., Oct. 31.—Several officers of the Greek army arrived here today, stating that they were commissioned to purchase 3000 horses for use in the Greek army.

They will leave tomorrow for Oklahoma, where they said purchases were to be made.

"Russians Slowly Following Our Troops," German Report Admits

BERLIN, Oct. 31, via Amsterdam and London, 7:07 p. m.—A report received here today from German army headquarters says:

"Our army in Belgium yesterday occupied Ramscapelle, two and a half miles east of Nieuport and Prelschoon, and our attacks on Ypres are progressing. Zandvoorde, Chateau Holeneicke and Wambeke have been stormed.

"Further south we also have gained ground to the east of Soissons. The enemy has been attacked, and during the day chased from several strongly fortified positions to the north of Vailly (about 10 miles east of Soissons), which was stormed during the afternoon, the enemy retreating across the River Aisne and suffering severe losses. We captured 1000 prisoners and two machine guns.

"In the Argonnes and to the west of Verdun and to the north of Toul several French attacks were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy.

"The battle in the northeastern war theater till now has not yet been decided. To the west of Warsaw the Russians are slowly following our troops, which are now being regrouped."

Russians Steadily Drive Germans Back on the East Prussian Front

By the Associated Press.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 31.—The following official communication was issued from general headquarters tonight:

"On the East Prussian front the plan for breaking through the center of our fortified position around Bakalszewo projected by the enemy has failed. During five days of unsuccessful attacks the Germans suffered immense losses. In many places the great accumulation of German dead in front of our trenches caused a moderation of our fire.

"Our troops have progressed in several days on the East Prussian front.

"Beyond the Vistula we occupy strongly the towns of Gostynin, Lenczica, Lodz and Ostrovec.

"In Galicia the fighting continues without any essential change in the situation."

The Russians continue to work westward with full pressure and have driven one German column past Lodz.

It is declared here that Poland will be cleared of Germans and Austrians before Turkey can become a factor in Russian strategy.

JAPANESE FLEET WILL SUPPRESS CHINESE REBELS

President of Republic So Advised—Naval Attack on Germans at Kiauchau Begun.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 1, 1:25 a. m.—The following German official statement has been received from Berlin by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co.:

"The tension between the Chinese and Japanese troops is extremely great. Japan has advised the President of China that Japanese warships will suppress the revolutionary movement in Shantung province."

Naval and Land Attack on Germans by Japanese.

By Associated Press.

PEKIN, Oct. 31.—A wireless message, received in German circles here from Tsingtau, declares that a naval bombardment of the German position in Kaiuchau began today, but makes no mention of a land attack. On the other hand, a Japanese report declares that both a naval and a land attack are now being pushed against the German position.

For several weeks the Germans have been maintaining a heavy artillery fire in their attempts to delay the work of entrenching and gun mounting by their antagonists, but this fire eventually proved unavailing. The British forces occupy a position on the front of the attacking line.

German officers in Peking say that Tsingtau could be captured quickly if the Japanese would storm it in force, but Japanese officials here are of the opinion that the forts must be silenced first.

A correspondent with the British forces writes confirming the previous report that the Germans at Tsingtau purposed to destroy all Government buildings in the city when surrender becomes inevitable.

WAR TO PUSH EUROPE ON WAY TO AMERICANIZATION, SAYS HISTORIAN FERRERO

Common People, He Predicts, Will Gain in Liberties to Be Given as Compensation for Sacrifices in Conflict

By GUGLIELMO FERRERO.

THE crisis through which Europe is going will not only change the political map of the Old Contnent but will exercise considerable influence over the internal politics of every European nation.

War always operates within and without the state but, while it is extremely difficult to predict today to what extent each nation involved in the conflict will gain or lose, yet one can easily forecast which classes will derive the greatest benefit from the war.

It will be the classes which are paying the greatest tribute in blood and the political parties that represent them, namely, the popular classes and the democratic parties, that will greatly benefit from the war. The prediction is safe, for the history of Europe, from the French Revolution on, bears witness to it.

The French Revolution succeeded in breaking the chains of the people. Throughout the nineteenth century war, although detested by the liberal and democratic parties, proved to be their most powerful and faithful ally.

War as an Aid to Liberty.

Has not war in Europe always been the glory of the rulers and of the aristocracies, the most valid support of the principle of authority? Yes, undoubtedly, in their intentions and expectations.

But, since the Revolution introduced compulsory military service in France, compelling every nation to adopt it, since wars were no longer being fought by small mercenary armies, paid by a ruler, but by the whole people, called under the colors to fight in the name of a solemn and sacred civic duty, every war was either followed or preceded by political and economical concessions to the lower classes. These concessions were nothing but compensations given to the masses for the sacrifices imposed upon them by war, and this compensation was always larger when the result of the war had been unfavorable.

In 1848, after the battle of Novara and King Charles Albert's abdication, Austria endeavored to persuade the new King of Piedmont, Victor Emmanuel, to repeal the Constitution granted the year previous by his father and dissolve Parliament.

Freedom as Compensation.

The new King refused. The Constitution and the freedom represented the compensation the new King had wisely decided to give to his people in order to lighten the terrible sufferings which that year's war and the one of the previous year had caused them.

The abolition of serfdom in Russia in 1861 was the consequence of the Crimean war. It was after the war of 1860 that the autocratic regime in Austria was substituted by a constitutional Government less rigid and less authoritarian. Universal suffrage in political election was introduced in Germany after the wars of 1866 and 1870 and was intended to compensate the people for the immense sacrifice of blood offered up in those two wars.

In France the democratic Republic is the outcome of the war of 1870 as the Duma in Russia followed the Russian-Japanese war. Universal suffrage in Italy would not have been adopted without the Tripoli war. While thousands of peasants were fighting in Tripolitania, Parliament, though composed of a conservative majority opposed to universal suffrage, did not dare refuse the right to vote to those on whom it called to shed their blood.

Masses to Gain by War.

In the light of these facts it can be easily predicted that this kind of historical law will continue to operate throughout Europe even after the present war.

This war will impose so many sacrifices of blood and money, so many indescribable privations and sufferings, on the lower classes of both the winning and losing nations, that both winners and losers will be compelled, after peace has been concluded, to give to the lower classes some compensation, the losers in a larger measure than the winners.

Most probably the first victim of the war will be the Prussian Constitution. Everybody knows that the political constitution of Prussia is the most feudal, the most replete with class privileges and the most antiquated constitution of the whole of Europe. It is owing to this constitution that the military aristocracy has so far succeeded in retaining the Government of Prussia, and, through it, has exercised a preponderating influence over the whole of Germany; has been able to impose the huge armaments of the nation, and ultimately hurl over Europe the scourge of the present war.

For the last 20 years the Liberal and Democratic parties of Germany have vainly demanded that the constitution be amended and that universal suffrage be adopted for the Landstag election, which would have meant the beginning of a tremendous political revolution not only in Prussia, but throughout Germany.

Germanic People to Gain.

But that which 20 years of speechmaking, agitation and discussions have failed to bring about, will probably be done by war, and its realization will be quicker and more complete in proportion to the measure war shall have been disastrous for Germany. After the war the Prussian monarchy and aristocracy will be compelled to give this satisfaction to the people, to repay for the millions of peasants and workingmen who left for the battlefield never to return.

In Germany the relations between the Socialists and the Government have changed. To the bitter struggle of old there has succeeded a kind of benevolent waiting and voluntary co-operation. The Government allows the Socialist newspapers to be sold at the railway stations and sends its condolences to the families of the Socialist deputies fallen in battle.

On its part the Socialist party exhorts its members to fight valiantly under the colors of the Emperor. Their new relations will be maintained even after war. And who knows that we shall not see a Socialist minister even in Germany as we have already seen one in France and England?

We can also be certain that the power of the monarchs will, after this war, be weakened in both Russia and Austria, regardless of which one of these two powers ultimately wins.

Czar Grants Concessions.

Russia has already solemnly promised to grant freedom to Poland and to the Ruthenians; has already begun abolishing the exceptional regime under which its Hebrew subjects lived. It is these important concessions to the liberal and democratic parties that the absolutist party opposed. But other and no less important concessions will follow.

In France and in England these effects of the war will be less felt, as the two countries already have liberal and democratic institutions; nevertheless, even there we shall see some of the war's effects. If the Triple Entente win, if it carries out the English program of remapping Europe in accordance with the principal of nationality, it is impossible to see how England can refuse to give satisfaction to Ireland.

As to Italy and Spain, it oul cause much surprise if in the cou the next 20 years they should co adopt a republican form of gover especially if France wins.

Americanization of Europ

In other words, this war wil Europe on the road to American weakening all those forces and tions which on the old continen sent tradition and the past, mo cially the monarchical principl doing away with one of the mos tial differences between Euro America.

KOENIGSBERG, East Prussia, Oct. 12.—Ruin, desolation and murder lie in the wake of the Russian army that invaded and overran East Prussia from the beginning of the war until they were smashed by Von Hindenburg in the series of battles that began with Tannenberg and ended with the scattering of Samsanoff's army at the Masurian lakes.

And now the Russians are coming again, coming in spite of the determined resistance of the Germans, who are not sufficiently strong in number to hold back the ever-growing swarms which, two days ago, swung past the German right wing and retook Lyck and Goldap. The inhabitants of East Prussia, especially the southern sections, are all fleeing from the invaders. Their earlier experience has driven fear deep in their hearts.

To investigate the charges of barbarism—of atrocities that were seemingly incredible—I have made a tour of the province of East Prussia. The journey, from the start in Berlin until the return, took me over something like 2000 miles and carried me into more than 40 cities and villages, where I gathered at first hand the evidence of the manner in which the Russians (for the most part Cossacks) make war.

Cossacks Use Torture, Incendiarism, Outrage.

Torture, murder, incendiarism, robbery and attacks on women. These were five characteristics that marked the Cossacks wherever they appeared as the advance guard of the Russian armies in their so-called "March on Berlin." As I had heard charges of outrages against troops made in France and England, and had been able to find, on those occasions, little real basis for the accusations, I entered upon the investigation with a mind disposed to believe that the accounts were overdrawn, and that some parts of the alleged misconduct might have been justified by the rules of war. But I found the actual conditions to be so bad, the play of unchecked passions so terrible, that the account almost defies belief.

And it should be said that, on the other hand, the Germans who later entered Russia in pursuit of the fleeing armies of the Czar were held under such an iron discipline that not one single instance can be gathered of misconduct on their part. Every soldier was held personally responsible to his direct officer, and they in turn were held accountable to their superior, so that there could be no misbehavior without an immediate reckoning.

It may be that the charges against the Germans that were made in Belgium had a salutary effect; but whatever the reason, it is simple justice to say that the German soldiers in Russia never once departed from the iron rules governing the military in their relations with the civilians. I personally saw and spoke to many inhabitants of Russian villages—most of them Jews, with representatives of other religions as well—and they rejoiced in the coming of the Germans and were free in expressing the hope that they would stay.

One other point should be brought out at the beginning and that is that Gen. Rennenkampff, chief commander of the Czar's northern armies, personally opposed the excesses of his troops, and whenever he was present himself, the conduct of the men was better. But the greater part of the atrocities were committed by the wild, lawless marauders, the Cossacks, who have only a tenuous connection with the regular forces and who allow themselves the greatest liberties in their raids in advance of the main bodies.

Aged Pauper Only Man Spared at Santoppf.

The little old village of Santoppen, or what had been Santoppen, spoke mutely of the meaning of war, as I rode into it along a road dotted with graves that marked the bitter fighting that took place all through the land of East Prussia. Here and there were shells of houses, blackened and shaky monuments made by Russian torches.

On the streets of the village, that once sheltered something like a thousand inhabitants, there were to be seen only a few old men and women, with here and there younger men who had been refugees and thus escaped the fury that swept to death every male inhabitant of the village between the ages of 14 and 70, who was there Aug. 29.

Twenty-one persons were shot by the Cossacks, two of them women, and the story of the shooting is as biting a piece of tragedy as my tour brought out.

Church Bell Causes Deaths.

The story was outlined by Gottfried Horn, 82-year-old inmate of the poorhouse, who was permitted to sit on the porch of the asylum and see most of the atrocities committed. His story was confirmed in minute detail by seven others, and supported further by the official military and civil representatives.

"A village workman, remember, from Heinrichsdorf, close by us here," said Horn, "was shot while he worked in the fields by the Russians, Aug. 28. The widow came to Santoppen to have Pastor Werner hold his funeral and paid extra money to have the church bell toll the death knell. The Cossacks had been among us for two days. They had been away for a few hours, and when they rode back they heard the church bell ring. They said it was meant for an alarm.

"The father told them it was not—that there were no German troops near, and that the body of Rambock even then lay in the church.

"But they listened not. They pulled the pastor from his church and held him, while three of them went with Farmer Weiss, who was pushed ahead by bayonets to every house in the village where there was a man. They found 13. Then they stood these up against the wall of the gasthaus and them down one after the other.

Used Men as Targets.

ey did not fire together. They ed to try their marksmanship killed them one at a time. I was nly man left in the village. There were Pastor Werner and Prof. Walweit, the teacher, and Farmer Weiss, Harnessmaker Stockdrehr, Faner Kase, Carpenter Rittel and his young son, Workman Neuwald and many more of my friends. They were all killed.

"The 13 stood with their backs to the wall, and as they were shot they fell forward on their faces. Then the Cossacks found the 80-year-old sister and the 27-year-old niece of Prof. Kalweit, and shot them, too. After that they rode through the town to the farms on the outside and shot down six more who were at work in the potato fields."

Frau Maria Stressau, sister of the pastor, was one of six to bear witness to the story as told by the old man. From the witnesses it was learned that the 13 bodies were left in the highway overnight, and that the next morning the Cossacks dug a shallow grave in the little garden of the village tavern and buried them, not noticing that there were only 10, although they had shot 13.

The other three had not been killed outright owing to the method of firing, but mortally wounded, and they crawled from the pile of the dead under the cover of the night and were carried into the outhouse of the inn, only to die later. But their bodies were hidden and they were given decent church burial, as indeed were the other victims after the Cossacks had fled before the oncoming Germans.

Women Were Mistreated.

Santoppen, after the massacre, was put to the torch, but not before the Cossacks had mistreated 10 women. Elizabeth Rittel, 58 years old, was attacked eight times in the presence of her husband and son, who afterward were shot. A 90-year-old storekeeper named Jofkowsky was compelled to hand over what money he had, and was asked the whereabouts of his two granddaughters. He gave up his money, but three times refused to tell where the girls were hidden. At the last refusal he was shot down in his shop, and the place set on fire. The girls were found and overpowered.

At Christiankohmen, a hamlet near Aarkomen, in a severe engagement, the Russians were defeated and fled. Their covering force was of Cossacks, who swept through the village of 250 persons and gathered up 13 men and boys. They drove them before them with knouts (the Cossack rides only with the whip; he uses no spurs), and at the edge of the village by the side of a ditch they broke the legs and arms of their prisoners with the butts of the carbine, and then shot them. The bodies were thrown into the ditch and heavy stones were rolled over them.

The governmental physician reports that autopsies showed that two of the victims had been buried alive and that all had their eyes thrust out by lances and their tongues cut off. It was so.

The story was vouched for by seven witnesses. No pretenses were made by the Cossacks that they had justification. The only remark in this connection was credited to an officer, who is quoted as saying that since the great Kaiser wanted war, he should have it in real form.

Cossacks Uncontrolled.

It seems to be pretty well established that the control of the regulars over the Cossacks in the Russian army is very slight. On two occasions villages were warned by officers of the regulars that the inhabitants would better conceal themselves as the Cossocks were coming and it would be impossible to protect the people. Sometimes the line officers themselves seemed to be in fear of the half-wild cavalrymen.

With the earlier troops of Cossacks who ravaged East Prussia there were to be found organized camp follows, who took off the hands of the raiders the plunder they gathered. I was told in Russia that scores upon scores of freight cars had passed the boundaries, loaded down with booty obtained in the first sweep made through Germany.

At Abschwangen, 10 miles from Koenigsberg, 58 were killed—all civilians, as indeed was the case in all the instances I am reporting. The reason given was that the Cossakcs had been fired upon. They had not, except by uhlan patrols that had advanced from the fortress of Koenigsberg to mix it a little with the foe.

Twenty-one men and women left in the village swore to the correspondents in my party that there was not a weapon in the village, and that the Cossacks knew this, but were determined to make an example of the inhabitants, so that the uhlans would not repeat their jaunts.

Laborer Judel, 70 years old, had his 6-year-old granddaughter on his arm when he got the call. He stepped to the door and the Cossacks shot. Two bullets went through the arm he had about the little girl, and went straight through her body. The child was killed. The old man was sorely wounded, but recovered.

Johanna Eggert, wife of the harnessmaker, was shot down at her door, where she stood with her husband. He was wounded, but still lives.

In addition to the 58 killed, 10 civilians were hurried off into captivity. From each village came the same report that from five to 20 men and boys had been taken away by the cavalrymen, some of whom have not been heard of since, while others have been found dead.

Such a case occurred at Alt Kesruth, a small place near Ortelsburg, famous as the scene of the heaviest defeat of the Russians. A householder named Wrege, 65 years old, was carried away with his two sons, one 23, the other 17. They were found the next day on the meadows, two miles away from the hamlet. The father and elder son were already dead, struck through and through by Cossacks' lances that had pierced the eyes, the face, the neck and the bodies.

Tortured Like Beasts.

The young lad, with 30 lance thrusts through him, lived just long enough to say that they had been used as guides by regular troops and had been released after being led to the road by order of a cavalry officer. As they passed through a patch of woods, the Cossacks who had taken them prisoners originally captured them again, and standing them together, tilted at them with their lances. A Russian surgeon who rode by was compelled to desist from binding their wounds by the Cossacks.

Five witnesses heard the story of young Wrege, and they knew, too, the story of Frau Glass' husband, whose fate was almost the same as that of the Wreges, except that in this case the body showed bayonet thrusts, not lance marks.

Edward Heinrich, 58 years old, who was spared because they chose to shoot his son instead, told how the 14-year-old boy had met his death. Young Heinrich and seven other young fellows, some only 14 years old, were driven in a group under a whip to a grassy bank beside a little river. Heinrich, with his wife and two daughters, followed, and begged for the lad's life, only to get the butt of a pistol on his head and see his wife and daughters abused. Then they were held and compelled to look on while the eight were shot. The eight were told they could turn their backs or take the fire facing. They chose to face it.

"My poor boy," said the father, "tried to keep his eyes from his mother's, but in spite of him, they turned to her. He stood with arms stretched out, weeping and hoping that at the last some miracle would occur to save him. I saw him hold his hand to his mouth to keep back the sobs that shook his body. Just as the command to fire was given, he threw his other hand over his eyes. I like to think he did it to keep us from seeing the pain his eyes were showing. The order was given that the bodies must lie by the water all night. The next morning I went to the Cossack officer to ask permission to get my son's body. He was so drunk he could not speak."

In addition to these eight, 28 more were killed in the village itself and 22 along the roads leading to the village, the last number being fugitives who had hoped to be able to go on into Koenigsberg.

Frau Erna Reimann, 25 years old, a bride of three weeks, lost her husband, father and father-in-law within ten minutes, at the hands of the Cossacks.

Her husband, 32 years old, had defective eyes so he could not join the army. He was at work in the fields near Abschwengen when the Cossacks began their revel. He heard the shots and ran to his house to protect his wife. The Cossacks rode to the door and ordered him to come forth. As he appeared at the door he was shot down. Fearing mutilation, the widow and her father-in-law, as the troops rode off, carried the body into the garden and dug a grave. Two Cossacks came by while they were doing this, and emptied their carbines into the body of the 65-year-old man. He fell across the body of his son, dead.

The woman covered the bodies as best she could, and then ran to her home, where her father, Leopold Holtzstein, aged 72, lived. Soon he was called to the door, but she would not let him go alone. She hoped that she might be able to save him my holding him in her arms. The death shot came, passing through the hand she had thrown about her father's neck. He died instantly.

Dazed by Her Disasters.

The woman told her story in a curious, impersonal, objective manner. Her heart seemed to be dead within her.

Her eyes looked straight ahead or dropped to her hands, which she pulled in a slow way. Her voice never lost the monotone that began and ended her tale. Now and then her lips parted in a queer, twisted smile, as if she were laughing at the idea that her story, though repeated in the four quarters of world, would help her any or could bring back one of the three that she had seen murdered. As I left her, she stood staring at her wedding ring.

In almost every village which the Cossacks visited, they applied the torch. Each Cossack carries in his equipment little strips of thin celluloid-like material that blazes like oil. Cossack prisoners in German hands each have these strips, and they were found scattered about the burned villages by the correspondents.

Stories Not Rehearsed.

The stage was not set for the investigation. The towns visited were chosen from those in the thick of the East Prussian invasion, and we were permitted to talk to any witnesses we chose. Frequently detours would be made and villages visited that were not included in the plan, and from these came even more gruesome accounts than from those on the regular list.

The German Government made no conditions in connection with the tour, except that a truthful report of the findings be made. The party included representatives from the press of neutral countries. Besides myself, there were men from the Associated Press, the United Press and the New York Staats-Zeitung, three Italian journalists, two from Holland and one from Norway.

The country traversed was marked by idle fields and dead factories, and scarcely a tree was left standing. They had been cut down by both armies.

Twice the party crossed into Russia, and there we had an opportunity of studying contrasts. Frequently the Russian villages would be burned and damaged by gun-fire, but that was true only when they had been in the fire zone. In not one case, in six Russian villages, did I find a case of wanton destruction.

In several of the villages the inhabitants were still going about their daily pursuits as if they were not in the hands of foreign foes. And the Jews among the border towns on the Russian side did not hesitate to make known their hope that the Germans would stay and never let the Russians return. It seems that in their flight through their own country the Cossacks did not hesitate to plunder their own countrymen. Truly their spears seemed to know no brothers.

A Mazeppa-Like Ride.

At Grieslenein, near Allenstein, a village that is indicated today only through the half-burned church and the pastor's house, the Cossacks did a thorough job. Not another building is left standing. The pastor's sister, an elderly woman named Rockel, told how he and a friend, 65 years old, had been tortured and killed.

Rockel had fled with the villagers when the Cossacks approached. He was about to be married, and did not want to lose the half-dozen cows that he hoped to make his living from. So, with Zonewitz, he went back to the hamlet. The Cossacks seized the two, saying they were spies. Each was bound by the hands with long thongs to the saddles of the troopers and then they set off at a gallop. They rode for two miles with the captives bumping along on the stony road behind. Then the two were struck through with lances. When the bodies were found, the eyes were gone and the noses had been cut off.

At Hohenstein, one of the larger towns of the eastern section of the province, there were only regular Russian troops, and these behaved well, according to the report given by Burgomaster David. In fact, when only regular troops were the invaders, the conduct was generally good. This statement is made on the authority of Count von Schlieffen, general-commander of the Twentieth German Army Corps, in an interview I had with him.

Aged Killed in Bed.

At Soldau, an important town near the border, the Russians behaved well during the occupancy, but when they retreated the Cossacks went into the Kranken Haus (infirmary) and killed in their beds five old men and two women. A 14-year-old girl, sick in bed, was killed by lance thrusts through her head. In the vicinity of this town there was a total of 11 killed and of these six were women.

At Bischopsburg, Aug. 24, an 80-year-old man, quite deaf, was killed as he was weeding potatoes. He was shot from behind by a crowd of laughing, singing Cossacks. One said later he had been told the old man had two sons in the German army. Two others were killed by the same group.

As they left the Cossacks made five of the burghers go with them as hostages that they should not be fired upon. One was a small merchant named Wielk. Two days later he crawled back to die in the town hospital. He told how the five had been put in the center of a ring of Cossacks, who swung their carbines at the legs and arms of the prisoners, which snapped like sticks under the blows. Then they were lanced as they lay on the ground. Wielk had managed to keep life in him and nerve enough to crawl three miles back to his home. The others were found at the place he described and brought back for burial.

At Gardauen, Sept. 8, 20 civilians, including one woman, were shot down. This act is charged against the regular Russian soldiers, for each of the witnesses is certain that there were no Cossacks there. At this place a mother and married daughter were overpowered and attacked in the presence of their husbands, and were later shot. The troops ransacked the Landrath's house and destroyed everything they could move. Then they cut the throat of a pig and dressed him in the Landrath's clothes and laid him in a bed they made up in the front porch.

It is a curious play of the Cossack psychology that frequently, when they have been guilty of the uttermost barbarism, they bury their victims and impiously erect crosses over the graves.

Shot for Using Phone.

The way from Darkehme to the Russian front is thick with mounds. From the town 20 men were taken along as prisoners by the Cossacks. Five of the captives were afterward found dead. Among the prisoners were boys 13 years old. Darkehme is notable as being the first point in the journey where a regular court martial appears to have been held. A merchant named Kaufmann was arrested accused of having used the telephone, which citizens had been forbidden to do. He admitted it, and proved that he had telephoned to a friend several streets away, asking him to come over for a cup of coffee. Kaufmann was shot by a regular execution squad.

I heard from many sources stories of little children, especially boys, having both hands cut off, so that they would be unfit for military duty. I saw no evidence of such cruelty. But, freed from this and some other unsupported charges against them, the Cossacks have seared a trail of blood and lust and pillage across East Prussia that can never be wiped out.

COPPER ABSOLUTE CONTRABAND, BY NEW BRITISH RULE

Protest Had Been Made by U. S. Against Detention of a Copper-Laden Ship.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Copper shipments hereafter will be considered absolute contraband of war by the British Government, according to the revised contraband list cabled to the State Department today by Ambassador Page in London. The previous list classed copper as conditional contraband. The only other important change is the placing of illuminating oil, heretofore unmentioned, on the conditional list.

The question of contraband shipments came before the State Department before the new British list was made public. Formal protest was lodged with the British Government against the detention of the American steamer Kroonland, copper laden, en route to Greece, held at Gibraltar. Ambassador Page also was instructed to request the release of the Italian steamers San Giovanni and Regina d'Italia, also detained at Gibraltar, while en route to Italian ports with American copper. The United States took the position that the shipments were to neutral countries and not subject to seizure. Some officials were inclined to view the publication of the new British contraband list as not affecting these shipments because they were made before it was announced. They held that the copper cargoes only could be treated as conditional contraband under the previous list. British officials here are understood to share this view.

The new British contraband list follows:

Absolute contraband—Arms of all kinds, all projectiles, explosives and equipment for use in war, including artillery and components; military clothing, animals for war use, harness, armor plates, hematite iron ore, hematite pig iron, iron pyrites, nickel ore, nickel, ferrochrome and chrome ore, copper unwrought, pig, sheet or pipe lead, aluminum, ferrosilica, barbed wire and implements for fixing and cutting the same, warships, aeroplanes, airships, balloons and air craft of all kinds and their component parts and accessories; motor vehicles, motor tires and rubber, mineral oils and motor spirits, except lubricating oils, implements and apparatus designed exclusively for the manufacture or repair of munitions of war.

Conditional contraband— Foodstuffs, feeding stuffs for animals, clothing, fabrics for clothing and boots and shoes suitable for use in war; gold and silver in coin or bullion; paper money, vehicles suitable for use in war and their component parts; boats of all kinds and their component parts; railway materials, materials for telegraphs, wireless telegraphs and telephones; fuel other than mineral oil lubricants; powder and explosives, not specially prepared for use in war; sulphur, glycerine, horse shoes, harness and saddlery; hides of all kinds, leather, undressed or dressed, suitable for saddlery, harness or military boots; field glasses, telescopes, chronometers and all kinds of nautical instruments.

KING ALBERT APPEALS TO AMERICANS TO HELP FEED THE BELGIANS THIS WINTER

Food Costing From $2,500,000 to $5,000,000 a Month Needed to Avoid Starvation, Says American Relief Commission

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Albert, King of the Belgians, has asked the American people, through the American commission, for relief in Belgium to help feed his starving people during the coming winter.

The King's message, written under fire in the battle before Dunkirk, follows:

"I am informed that American officials and citizens in Belgium and England are working to save my people from the horrors of the famine which now threatens them. It is a great comfort to me in this hour of sorrow and misfortune to feel that a great-hearted, disinterested people is directing its efforts to relieving the distress of the unoffending civilian population of my country.

"Despite all that can be done the suffering in the coming winter will be terrible, but the burden we must bear will be lightened if my people can be spared the pangs of hunger with its frightful consequences of disease and violence.

"I confidently hope that the appeal of the American Commission will meet with a generous response. The whole-hearted friendship of America shown my people at this time always will be a precious memory. "ALBERT"

Commission's Appeal.

The American Commission for Relief in Belgium is an official body recognized by the various Governments for the transmission of foodstuffs into Belgium. It is the only channel through which food can be introduced into Belgium, and by its association with a committee in Belgium has the only efficient agency for the distribution of food within the country. H. C. Hoover, chairman of the commission, which has headquarters in London, makes the following appeal to all American newspapers

"We have received reports from members of this commission who were sent into Belgium. They have the assistance of the National Committee of Relief and its branches throughout Belgium, together with the help of the American Ministers and Consuls and local officials. Their reports show that there are still some 7,000,000 people in Belgium. In many centers the people are receiving an allowance of a little more than three ounces of flour per capita daily.

Food for Entire Population.

"This is not a question of charity or relief to the chronically poor—it is a question of feeding an entire population. The situation affects the wealthy and well-to-do as well as the poor. It touches every home in Belgium. Our experts calculate that, in order to avoid actual starvation, Belgium must have every month a minimum of 60,000 tons of wheat, 15,000 tons of corn, 5000 tons of peas or beans and a limited amount of bacon or lard.

"This will allow rations of 10 ounces per capita daily, which is about half the usual soldier's rations. All this will cost $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 monthly. There is no money in Belgium. The whole credit machinery has ceased. Eighty per cent of the people are unemployed.

Problem Is Immediate.

"A plan may be devised whereby such Belgians as possess property may give obligations to pay when the war ends, but even if we could realize on these obligations we must still have at least $2,500,000 monthly in food or money with which to buy it. That these figures are no exaggeration is proven by the fact that Belgium imports in normal times an average of 230,000 tons of cereals monthly.

"During the past week we have received and expended in emergency food $600,000, and yet this is only four days' supply. The problem is immediate. The Belgians are helping themselves, but they can do little. The British and French are under such strain that they also can do little. Besides, these nations, together with the Dutch, have a million refugees on their hands. Americans must feed Belgium this winter. There never was such a call on American charity, and there never was a famine emergency so great.

Every Dollar for Food.

"This committee and its distributing agency, the Belgium Committee, is composed entirely of volunteers and every dollar represents actual food without any organization expenses. It is our earnest hope that all funds raised for Belgian relief in the United States will be translated into actual food and shipped through the commission.

"Will you, therefore, in the interests of humanity open a subscription among your readers ear-marked 'for the sole purpose of purchasing and transporting food.' Every dollar so raised will be used to purchase food in the United States. Information as to what centers and what relief agencies in the United States will undertake the purchase and dispatch will be cabled later.

"H. C. HOOVER, Chairman."

Horse Which Won Prize Killed on French Battlefield

PARIS, Oct. 31.—James Hennessy's chestnut horse, Lord Loria, which had captured many prize turf events and brought its owner a fortune in purses, was killed while serving at the front as an officer's mount. The horse had been ridden by the jockey, Alex Carter, who was recently killed in action while serving as a Captain of French dragoons. The army, in requisitioning the horse, paid his owner $800.

The most recent turf achievement of the horse was the winning of the grand steeplechase De Paris, valued at $30,000, at the Auteuil course, on June 21 last.

Cobb Says Neither Side Can Show Atrocities in Belgium

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Irvin S. Cobb, humorist and war correspondent, returned home today, loudly denouncing the general run of atrocity stories.

"I camped out in Germany and Belgium with a photographer and an affidavit maker," he said "waiting and begging for somebody to lead me to an atrocity, but nobody could make good. Neither side can prove any. There has been grim work in plenty, lots of civilians shot on suspicion and houses burned, but these stories of mutilations are bunk, at least so far as I could find."

Italian Cabinet, Divided in Attitude on War, Resigns

ROME, Oct. 31.—The members of the Italian Cabinet presented their resignations to the King tonight. The King reserved decision and invited the presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies and leading statesmen to confer with him on the situation.

It is generally believed that Premier Salandra will be entrusted with the task of forming a new Cabinet within a few days.

The Cabinet crisis is the result of the division of opinion as to what part Italy should play in the European war.

IMMUNITY SOUGHT FOR KIDNAPER OF VIRGINIA GERHARD

Uncle of Nurse Advises Her to Return Child to Father if He Will Drop Case.

4-YEAR-OLD GIRL HAPPY

Says She Wants to Go Wherever Nurse Does; Wanted to Leave With Her.

expected here tonight, has not arrived, so far as could be learned.

For three days the nurse and Virginia appeared openly on the streets of Muskogee, as freely as if there had not been a hue and cry after them all over the Southwest. They went to picture shows and stores and wherever they liked. But on the first day of their arrival the landlady of the boarding house where they stopped telephoned to Police Chief Depew that she believed the fugitives in the St. Louis kidnaping case were at her home.

Depew had received a number of similar messages before, which had turned out to be unfounded, and paid little attention. It chanced today that he was passing the house, and decided to look in. The nurse denied her identity at first, but broke down and admitted that she was the woman who had run away with the Gerhard child. She had been at the point of leaving the house to take a train for Bonham.

Nurse's Own Story.

The nurse's own story was related as follows:

"When Virginia was 11 days old her mother died. The family was living in Austin, Tex. For six days the baby hovered between life and death. Mr. Gerhard employed me as a nurse for the baby when it was 17 days old. I nursed her back to health and grew to love her more than my very life. The father moved to St. Louis nine months after the death of his wife and told me to take Virginia to one of the relatives.

"I went to the home of Mrs. Lee Curtis, the baby's grandmother, in Bonham, Tex. For four years I watched over the growing child. Once in a long while the father, when in Texas, would come and see her. Everything was left absolutely to me and every moment of my time has been given to Virginia.

"Last April Mr. Gerhard remarried. A few months later Mr. Gerhard wired Mrs. Curtis to send the child to him by me. The grandmother wrote in reply that if he wanted the baby he should come and see it and take it back with him. Telegrams began to come more frequently and were more insistent. Mrs. Curtis broke down and cried for days and days at a time. Finally Mr. Gerhard sent money for a round trip ticket to St. Louis and Mrs. Curtis kissed the baby good-by and tearfully instructed me to stay with Virginia and care for her.

"'If Harry is not good to the little angel, get away with her, anywhere, and I will care for you,' Mrs. Curtis told me. 'If you can't get her away, let me know. I will come to St. Louis at once.'

"I did not get a round-trip ticket. I arrived in St. Louis with the baby a week ago yesterday. We went to Mr. Gerhard's home. A special room had been fitted up for Virginia. Friday night she was put to bed and left alone. After sleeping in a room with two women for almost four years, the child was frightened to death.

Says Child Cried All Night.

"'Leave her alone,' said Virginia's new stepmother. 'She has got to get used to it.'

"Virginia cried all night, so Saturday night I was permitted to sleep in the same room with her.

"On Sunday Mr. Gerhard told me that he was through with me. He had promised me, when he left Virginia with me in Texas four years ago, that he would always find something for me to do.

"I reminded him of his promise. It was of no use. 'All right,' I said, 'I will get work here in the city some way. Anyhow, I can see Virginia once in a while.'

"'You are through with Virginia, and Virginia is through with you,' he told me. 'You get out of town at once; go any place you want to, just get out of St. Louis and stay out.'

"I begged him on my knees until he turned and left me lying on the floor, crying. Then Virginia put her arm around me and said: 'Don't mind what daddy says, Judie; he doesn't know I wouldn't let you go.'

"Next morning Mr. Gerhard went to town to get me a ticket. I had not the least idea where he was going to send me. I got ready and Virginia screamed and cried. Mrs. Gerhard attempted to quiet her and then left the room.

Slips Away With Child.

"The baby loved me as she would a mother and it would have broken her heart as well as my own. I had enough money saved up to keep both of us for a month. Mrs. Gerhard seemed such a nice woman, and for her sake I hesitated. A few moments later I slipped out of the house with Virginia and a very small package of personal belongings. An hour later I was speeding toward Kansas City on the Rock Island train with Virginia.

"I did not know what to do. I knew Eugene Curtis, an uncle of Virginia, was a bookkeeper in the Exchange National Bank at Tulsa, Ok. I hurried to him.

"He was greatly surprised and at once wired to Mrs. Lee Curtis in Bonham. He told me to go to Muskogee and get a room. He said he would come to Muskogee Saturday afternoon with some money to enable me to pay my expenses and told me not to look for work. I do not know what he intended to have me do, but I suppose we were to go to Bonham.

"Mrs. Curtis will go to court for possession of Virginia and she will employ attorneys to defend me. However, if Virginia is to be taken away and subject to Mr. Gerhard's treatment, I have no desire to live longer.

Threatened to End Life.

"I had the money that we traveled on, for I saved my wages, expecting some trouble after we went to St. Louis. The night before we left, when Mr. Gerhard told me I had to go, I told him I would rather die than leave Virginia.

"'Your religion does not permit you to take your own life,' he said, and I told him I knew that, but that I would not care if someone should kill me.

"When I cried and refused to quit St. Louis, leaving Virginia in his hands, his wife told him I was a Catholic and advised him to send for a priest and let the priest say what was best to do. She had been in a Catholic hospital and the sisters and the priest had been so kind to her that she felt whatever the priest said would be all right.

"'Yes, we will send for the priest in the morning,' Mrs. Gerhard said.

"But after they went to their own room I heard him say to his wife that in the morning he would buy me a ticket out of town, he did not care where.

"Before I left Bonham, Virginia's grandmother said, 'Julia, don't leave the child. Perhaps her father will treat her kindly, and if he does it will be all right. But if he does not, bring her back home. Don't be afraid for yourself. We will all stand by you.'

"I wanted to dress Virginia in boy's clothes and go into the country somewhere, but Mr. Curtis told me to come to Muskogee, that we would be safe here. I had not read the newspaper stories and did not know Mr. Gerhard had started such a widespread search.

Doesn't Fear Consequences.

"I am not afraid of what will happen to me. All I can do is just to pray. I have done everything in the world that I could for the child, and God will not let me be punished for trying to make her happy.

"Two years ago Mr. Gerhard took Virginia from her grandmother and put her in an orphan asylum, but we got her back right away. Her grandmother and uncles worship her and I—(the nurse's brown eyes filled with tears)—I would lay down my life for the child if it would save her sorrow or trouble.

"We traveled from St. Louis to Kansas City. I did not know what a fuss we had created until I reached Kansas City. There I saw the police searching the trains.

"I waited an hour and bought a ticket over the Frisco to Tulsa, Ok. There I met Mr. Curtis.

"He advised me to take the child to Sand Springs, a suburb of Tulsa. I remained there until Wednesday and came to Muskogee on the insistence of Mr. Curtis.

"I went direct to the Michigan rooming house. There was no attempt at concealment. I have been on the streets and in the moving picture shows every day I have been here. Had we not been arrested I should have gone to Texas tonight with Virginia."

Child's Father Denounces Story Told by Nurse.

Harry H. Gerhard of 814 Clara avenue, president of the C. A. Wood Preserves Co., in the Wright Building, and father of Virginia Lee Gerhard, told a Post-Dispatch reporter last night that Julia Krususky's story was "a tissue of lies from beginning to end."

"I will stake my life," he said, "that Virginia's grandmother, Mrs. Curtis, was absolutely ignorant of what the nurse was about to do. I never placed Virginia in an orphan asylum, and the nurse slept in the same room with the child every night they were in my home. It is absolutely false that I told the nurse she could never see Virginia again. It is true that I told her I was going to get her a ticket to Texas, but she be[illegible] to it, and on the pretext of takin[illegible] the child for a walk, stole her away."

Gerhard said that he wished to thank the newspapers for their assistance in finding his daughter's whereabouts, and the friends who had shown their sympathy for him.

Gerhard had a conference with Circuit Attorney Harvey yesterday, after which it was stated that the case would be laid before the grand jury. Later Gerhard said he had not decided whether he would prosecute the nurse. The penalty for kidnaping ranges from a fine of $500 to 20 years in prison, according to the gravity of the circumstances.

The present Mrs. Gerhard, who was Mrs. Elizabeth D. Owsley, was divorced by a Dr. Owsley about 18 months ago on a charge of desertion. She was employed as a stenographer by the C. A. Wood Preserver Co., and later was a director of the firm. She and Gerhard were married about four months ago at Hannibal, Mo.

THOMPSON, KANSAS PHOTOGRAPHER, IS WOUNDED BY SHELL

"Nose Still Attached to My Face," He Says, on Reaching London From Belgium.

TELLS OF HIS EXPLOITS

Three German Officers, With Whom He Was Dining, Killed When He Was Injured.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1914, by Press Pub. Co.)

LONDON, Oct. 31.—After two weeks with the German army in Belgium, Donald Thompson, the Kansas photographer, some of whose war pictures have appeared in the Post-Dispatch, walked into the Post-Dispatch's London office today, looking as if he had been caught in a Kansas cyclone. His face was almost completely hidden under bandages and his lips were so torn it was difficult for him to narrate his experiences in getting pictures of the fighting on the Belgian coast.

"I know my nose is still attached to my face because I can feel it," Thompson remarked.

Thompson was the first American and the first war correspondent of any nationality to be wounded. He was wounded by a shell from a British warship off Nieuport. The same shell killed three German officers with whom Thompson was dining when it dropped through a roof. Thompson's story of his adventure, told by himself, is as follows:

"I left London on Sunday two weeks ago, and got to Antwerp the next day under arrest, having been made prisoner by a young German officer when I stepped off the train. He took me to German headquarters in the city hall, where the commander was profuse in his apologies because the young Lieutenant had mistaken me for an Englishman, and promptly invited me to lunch.

Germans Try to "Pump" Him.

"All the staff officers tried to pump me for news from London, but when I offered them a copy of the London Times, they said: 'We have a later one than that,' and showed a pile of the Times. No matter where I have been with the German army I could always get bunches of the latest London papers. After lunch I obtained a pass to go through to Ostend by stating that my wife was living there, and I was very desirous of seeing her. Those Germans were so sympathetic about this they offered to take me to Ostend immediately by motor, but, knowing that my wife really was in Kansas, I told them I would stay in Antwerp to take pictures of the German troops and other pleasant features of German rule.

"The commander readily consented and gave me a pass through the lines to Malines, where I had left my trunk on a previous visit, and even gave me a motor cycle, apologizing for the scarcity of automobiles. The motor cycle was of American make, as the Germans smilingly pointed out. I never rode one in my life, but I experimented on the nerves of a few people of Antwerp until I reached the gate of the city. After a while I learned how to stop the machine when I wanted without the use of a stone hedge, and so I went to Fort Walden, where the peasants were still busy burying Belgian and English soldiers.

Work of Destruction Complete.

"In the streets and houses of Duffel I saw more dead men than I could believe possible, and no effort had been made to bury them. From Duffel I rode to Lierre, where the work of destruction was complete, even worse than at Louvain. Brussels was my next stop and, finding things quiet there, I managed to get to Malines. Every village between Malines and Brussels had been leveled to the ground and none of the dead in the fields had been buried. Even from the road the odor from the dead bodies with the sun beating on them was almost unbearable.

"Returning to Antwerp Tuesday night and hearing fighting had begun on the coast I tried to get passes to go in that direction but I met with firm refusal. Then I happened to remember I had a letter to Consul Johnson at Ostend, so I set out immediately for Bruges on the motor cycle. Wherever I stopped I showed my American passport and said I was a special envoy with dispatches to the American Consul at Ostend.

"In this way I finally got to the German lines outside Dixmude Wednesday afternoon. There I bumped into a German Captain and, after some argument, managed to persuade him I had personal permission of the Kaiser to photograph the German troops, so he said all right, rather dubiously. However, he let me go along with his detachment on the way to the coast.

Determined to Reach Calais.

"All day long the German artillery kept up a terrific fire on Dixmude. I heard orders had been given to level every house in that town, and from the church tower in the village I could see the continual flash of shells exploding in Dixmude at the rate of 50 a minute. Through glasses I watched the Belgian soldiers running for cover in the Dixmude streets, but the most thrilling sight was the Red Cross motor ambulance loaded with wounded proceeding through a whirlwind of shrapnel toward the rear of the Belgian line. I expected momentarily to see it blown to bits, but it never was touched.

"Many Belgian prisoners were brought in by the Germans, but I saw few British. In fact, the Germans told me the Belgians were doing all the fighting at this point.

"I spent the night at Bruges and next day I started for the coast again with a cavalry officer who supplied me with a horse. He volunteered to show me the trenches near Nieuport and also kept telling me about the big guns getting ready to go into action. He said the Germans would have two 42-centemeter howitzers and 10 32 guns within a day or so and with their aid it should be easy to open the way to Calais. He also declared that the German army would reach Calais if it took the last man in the German Empire to get them there, but when I left it seemed to me they were a long way from attaining their goal.

Alone in a German Trench.

"Outside Nieuport I climbed down into a trench in the sand dunes and dug a sort of a cave for myself a few feet from the main firing line. Soon we were under heavy fire from the British fleet and also from land batteries. The Germans offered me some canned beef for lunch from the supplies captured in Belgium, but the din of the cannon was such I had little appetite. I saw at closer range than ever I had before the incredible slaughter caused among men in the trenches by shells, and the sight was a sickening one.

"Suddenly the Germans fell back by underground passages from the trenches and I found myself alone. I wandered around these trenches as if lost in the maze at Shaw's Garden at St. Louis and didn't find the right exit until after dark, when there was a lull in the firing. That night and next day I spent at German headquarters in a small village nearby.

"On Friday night, just eight days ago, while a dozen officers and myself were having dinner in a private house used for headquarters, a shell from a British warship dropped through the roof. I remembered nothing more until I found myself rocking about in an ambulance on the way to Bruges. In the hospital there I was told I had been thrown through a window by the force of the explosion and that my face was rather badly torn up. They also said two of my officer companions were instantly killed and another died in the hospital soon afterwards. German Red Cross nurses, dressed in white even to their hats and shoes, dressed my wounds. Soon as I was able to get up I rode to Antwerp on an ammunition cart and after a few days there came on to London.

Desertions and Iron Crosses.

"Two things connected with the German army which most impressed me were the number of desertions from the ranks and the number of iron crosses handed out. The Germans are keeping strict guard of the Dutch frontier to prevent deserters crossing into Holland. Civilian clothes are in great demand by these deserters. I had one suit stolen from me.

Officers of the German army treat any hesitancy to obey orders with relentless severity. At Dixmude I myself saw a Captain draw his revolver and shoot down a private who had refused to obey an order to advance into the firing line. Other soldiers carried out the command with the utmost promptness after that drastic action. As far as the iron cross is concerned everybody seems to have one. The Kaiser must be giving them away with packages of cigarettes. I asked one officer how many coupons you needed to get an iron cross and he seemed quite sore about it.

"The Germans still seem determined to attack England by air and under sea. At the Brussels aviation field I saw steel girders for constructing Zeppelin sheds and on the way to Bruges there were flat cars loaded with huge objects covered with tarpaulins which greatly resembled submarines. There was the greatest secrecy maintained about these shipments, but I was told it was necessary to tear down bridges at several places to make room for their passage."

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

LASHLY SAYS HE WILL SUE JURORS OVER FEES REPORT

Prosecuting Attorney Lashly of St. Louis County said yesterday he would file civil libel suits for damages against each of 12 grand jurors who signed a report, submitted Friday to Circuit Judge Wurdeman, criticising his official acts, although they did not return an indictment against him.

J. M. Lashly, a brother, declared he would seek the aid of the Supreme Court if necessary, to compel Judge Wurdeman to expunge the grand jury's report from the court record. Judge Wurdeman yesterday overruled J. M. Lashly's motion to strike out the report of the grand jury.

The grand jurors, in their report, stated Lashly was guilty of "unlawfully accepting and receiving fees aggregating $45 in divers criminal cases," but added they did not think Lashly did this with criminal knowledge or intent, and that the statute of limitations precluded an indictment on that count.

Lashly admitted he had no right to the $45 fees and yesterday returned the money to the constables with instructions to pay it back to the defendants from whom he had collected it. He explained his acceptance of it on the ground that he depended on the constables to collect only lawful fees and that he did not investigate the circumstances of the payment of these fees.

Other counts in the report alleged that Lashly had failed to make the required quarterly reports of fees collected and salaries and expenses of his office, and that two of his assistants had questioned a witness, summoned by the grand jury, previous to the latter's appearance before the grand jury in the present investigation of Lashly's official acts.

Lashly said he considered the grand jury investigation and report a political move to prevent his re-election Tuesday. He is a Democrat. Lashly's brother, in addressing Judge Wurdeman in court, characterized the grand jury report as "the scandalous utterance of 12 biased men."

Harvey Congratulates Lashly on His Foes

THE following letter from Circuit Attorney Thomas B. Harvey of St. Louis was received by Prosecuting Attorney Arthur V. Lashly of St. Louis County today:

"My Dear Mr. Lashly: I congratulate you upon having the opposition of the ring of grafters of your county. It is a high compliment to your efficiency and fearlessness and should elect you overwhelmingly.

"Fight them to a finish and whip hell out of them. If I can serve you, command me.

"THOMAS B. HARVEY."

SEEKS DIVORCE AS HUSBAND SUES ANOTHER WOMAN

Mrs. Daniel Goodman Says She Was Humiliated by Breach of Promise Case.

WED THROUGH A BUREAU

Asserts That She Found Man She Married Conducted Another Campaign.

WOMAN WHO ASSERTS WIDOW WAS A RIVAL

MRS. ELIZABETH. D. GOODMAN

How Daniel Goodman, general manager of the General Accident, Fire and Life Corporation, with offices in the DeMenil Building, twice came to grief in his sixtieth year through invoking matrimonial bureaus as first aids to Cupid, is the theme of a divorce suit filed against him yesterday by Mrs. Elizabeth D. Goodman, 69 years old, of 3705A St. Louis avenue.

Mrs. Goodman, herself a matrimonial-agency bride, alleged that Goodman inflicted grave humiliation upon her by bringing suit, two months after their marriage, against Mrs. Ophelia Wirt, a wealthy widow in St. Joseph, whom he had also met through a matrimonial bureau, and whom he charged with breach of promise.

The plaintiff declares that she was unaware of her husband's double-love campaign until the newspapers printed accounts of the suit. He demanded $3724.24, which, he said, accounted for his expenses during a nine-months' courtship of the St. Joseph widow, but compromised the case, according to his wife, for $125.

Mrs. Goodman was annoyed, she sets forth, by persons who, on account of her husband5s breach of promise suit, would not believe she was married, and by others who asked her whether she was the woman who had been sued, and whether she had married Goodman to settle the case. The Goodmans were married Dec. 19, 1913, and the bridegroom brought suit against Mrs. Wirt at St. Joseph on Feb. 7, 1914.

The plaintiff charges that Goodman reproached her because she was an enthusiastic advocate of woman's suffrage, and, because, as he declared, she had deceived him as to her financial standing. He urge her to sell her farm in Michigan, the petition states, called her a "yokel," and told her to go back to her former home in Saugatuck, Mich.

The couple separated about three weeks ago and Goodman went to live at 2911 Gamble place. Mrs. Goodman asks the restoration of her maiden name, McClintock.

OHIO CAMPAIGN CENTERS ON 'WET' AND 'DRY' ISSUE

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 31.—Ohio is bringing to a close the most desperately contested campaign this old historic Mother-of-Presidents State has ever known. On Tuesday the voters are to elect a United States Senator, a Governor and other State and county officers. Moreover, they are to determine whether woman suffrage is to be adopted. But, it is on none of these issues that public interest centers, for there is also a State-wide prohibition contest that is the paramount issue and the one absorbing topic.

It is more than a local contest, too, for Ohio is a pivotal State and results here will have an important bearing on the anti-saloon league plans for extending the contest over the Nation.

Breweries and distilleries from every section of the United States are pouring money into the campaign fund of the Ohio "wets"; but this is being perhaps evenly matched by nation-wide contributions to the prohibition cause, from churches, various other organizations and individuals.

Scores of detectives, hired by the "dry" leaders, are seeking tangible evidence of rumored registration frauds.

Spellbinders of the Malcolm Patterson type—Patterson, the former Governor of Tennessee—are raising rafters with anti-alcoholic oratory. On the other side, speakers who shun pretty word painting are pleading the cause of the "wets" from a standpoint of business and personal liberty.

Practically every church building in Ohio is decorated with flaming banners proclaiming in two-foot letters of fiery red:

> This Church Stands Opposed to the Liquor Traffic.

And the fronts of many private residences are festooned with streamers upon which is inscribed:

> THIS HOME IS DRY.

But arrayed against these prohibition pleas is a vast volume of wet literature. Every saloon in Cleveland, Cincinnati and other cities has in its front window a sign like this:

> If Prohibition carries this storeroom and, thousands like it will be
> FOR RENT!
> What effect do you think that will have on other property values?

On these placards, the "For Rent" appears in letters at least a foot high, while the explanatory matter above and below is in type so small that it can be read only at close range. The effect is striking.

Three political parties are in the Ohio field—Democratic, Republican and Progressive. Of these only one party—the Progressive—are openly committed on the liquor question. The Democrats and Republicans are silent, but the Progressives, with ex-Secretary James A. Garfield as their candidate for Governor, are enthusiastic in the cause of prohibition.

SENATOR STONE URGES ELECTION OF SULLIVAN

Denounces Rodenburg and Supports Congressman Baltz in East St. Louis Speech.

Senator Stone, in a Democratic rally speech at the Broadway Theater, in East St. Louis, last night, urged the election of Roger C. Sullivan to the United States Senate, and the re-election of Congressman William N. Baltz. He denounced William A. Rodenburg, Republican candidate opposing Baltz, and Senator Sherman.

"Rodenburg is a good-looking young fellow of average intelligence who makes good speeches," Senator Stone told his audience, "but the only record in Washington of his 12 years' service in Congress is the pay-checks he signed. If you want a good story-teller to entertain the crowd, send Rodenburg back to Congress."

Senator Stone said Sherman was a good speaker, too, but that some of the lousy Senators would have been better pleased if he had made his speeches shorter. "He might at least have cut some of them to two days," Stone said.

PLURALITY FOR STONE OF 60,000, PARTY'S FORECAST

Democrats Also Assert Entire City Ticket Will Be Elected Tuesday.

The re-election of William J. Stone as United States Senator by a plurality of 60,000 to 100,000 was claimed last night by the Democratic State Committee. The Republican State Committee issued a forecast stating that Akins would be elected, but refused to give figures. Privately, Republican leaders concede Akins' defeat by a majority of not less than 60,000. The election will be Tuesday.

Republican City Chairman Schmoll forecast the Republican ticket would win in St. Louis by a majority of 12,000 to 15,000. Democratic City Chairman Meehan predicted the election of the entire Democratic city ticket, including the three Congressmen, by majorities of 3000 to 5000.

The Democrats are confident they will elect Edward A. Feehan for Probate Judge, Glendy B. Arnold and probably Hiram N. Moore, for Circuit Judges, Andrew Sheridan for Recorder of Deeds, and probably one or two other major officials.

Forecast Based on County Reports.

The forecast of the Democratic State Committee was based upon reports received from every county in the State. The report states that James T. Blair, for Supreme Judge, and Howard A. Gass, for Superintendent of Education, will be elected by substantially the same majority as Senator Stone's.

The Democratic State Committee also claimed the election of 16 members of Congress from the State, and a majority of both branches of the Legislature. Generally, throughout the State, the Progressives will hold the strength shown in the leceiton two years ago, according to the Democratic forecast.

hTe three parties, Democratic, Republican and rPogressive, virtually closed their campaigns last night. Headquarters will be kept open until after the election. There is considerable speculation as to how large the Progressive vote will be in St. Louis. The Republicans say it will not exceed 5000, while Progressive leaders say they are having better meetings and more promises of support than in 1912, when Roosevelt received about 23,000 votes in St. Louis

Error in Meeker Circular.

The Progressive vote in the entire State in 1912 was a little more than 100,000. The Republicans have been trying hard to get the Progressives to come back.

Edward Foristel of the Meeker Campaign Committee yesterday explained that the statement in a circular issued in behalf of the Republican congressional nominee was in error with respect to the loss of business sustained by the International Shoe Co. Owing to a typographical error in the first copies of the pamphlets, he said, it was stated that the loss was $13,000,000. It was intended to be put at $1,300,000, he said. The error was corrected and appeared only in a few thousand copies, Foristel said.

Miss Dowell was a witness for the prosecution and testified her parents objected to her proposed marriage to Burris. Burris made a plea of self-defense.

SCROFULA AND ALL HUMORS GIVE WAY

There are many things learned from experience and observation that the older generation should impress upon the younger. Among them is the fact that scrofula and other humors are most successfully treated with Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine is a peculiar combination of remarkably effective blood-purifying and health-giving roots, barks and herbs, and has been tested for forty years. Get it today.

The masters' inspiration can be YOURS, too!

Interpretation is that which puts life and emotion into music. Without interpretation we have the painful mechanism in sound which is so characteristic of the playing of the many so-called player-pianos and of those performers whose musical knowledge does not extend beyond the fingering of the keys correctly. To fully enjoy music you must hear it interpreted properly, or be able to interpret it yourself.

The PIANOLA makes this possible

The Pianola is NOT a mere "player-piano." There is as much room for individuality in playing a Pianola as there is in playing by hand. The person who plays the Pianola well is a delight to listen to. The Pianola is made by the Aeolian Company, and among other vital features exclusive to it and covered by more than 300 United States and foreign patents, are the following:

The Metrostyle

The Metrostyle is a patented device exclusive to the Pianola, consisting of an irregular ink red line authoritatively marked on Pianola rolls. By following this line with the tempo pointer attached to the Pianola action, you are enabled to perfectly reproduce the playing of the great pianist who dictated the Metrostyle interpretation. On the right and left of this announcement there appear personal Metrostyle interpretations of two compositions by the world-renowned Paderewski, one being his own, and one being Mozart's. Without the Metrostyle, it is impossible to learn to play by music roll artistically and with true musical feeling.

The Themodist

The Themodist is an exclusive Pianola action by which the theme or melody of a composition is made to sing clearly above the background of accompaniment. This, as every musician knows, is absolutely vital, but it is possible to obtain this feature in the Pianola alone.

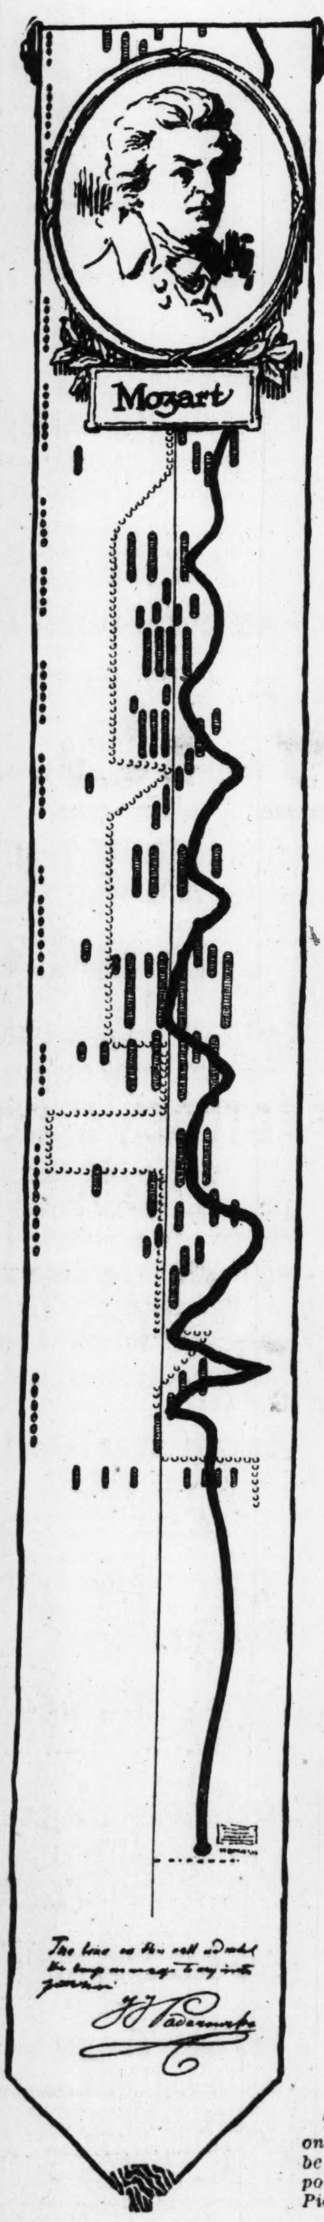
The Graduated Accompaniment

The Graduated Accompaniment is an exclusive feature of the Pianola by which, at will, you may vary the relation between the accompaniment and the theme in volume of tone, or intensity. The musical effects possible through this device are identical with those of hand playing.

The Sustaining Pedal Action

This action enables you to reproduce perfectly the intricate pedaling effects of the great artists.

These are but part of the Pianola's exclusive features. There are scores and scores of mere "player-pianos" on the market, but NONE of them contains these features. There is no good reason why you should even consider a mere imitation when you may obtain the Pianola itself for as little as $550, terms $3 weekly.



Above is Paderewski's personal Metrostyled interpretation of Mozart's Rondo Op. 20. The roll actually gives you the personal instruction of Paderewski himself in the playing of this famous classic!

The Pianola is the only player action to be successfully incorporated within the Grand Piano. Grand Pianolas are priced from $1350 up.

MANY INNOVATIONS IN LAWS TO BE VOTED ON IN 22 STATES

Constitutional Propositions Representing Advanced Thought in Legislation Nearly Overshadow Contests for Office. Oregon to Vote on 29 Amendments—Sufferage Up in Seven States and Prohibition in Six.

Overshadowing the partisan importance of the political contests to be decided in all but one of the forty-eight states on Tuesday are some of the Constitutional innovations to be considered by the voters. In twenty-two states the citizens are asked to vote upon the adoption by their respective states of many features of government, reflecting the advanced thought of political leaders and generally described by their critics as "socialistic."

The propositions range from woman suffrage in seven States, prohibition in six, over a wide field of reform, including the abolition of the death penalty, the initiative and referendum, child labor, public half-holidays, municipal ownership, pensions for the blind, extending the eight-hour law to all employes, the "blue-sky law" regulating corporations, to the prohibition of aliens from holding property and establishing State insurance.

Twenty-nine States will elect Governors and all the others, with the exception of Maine and Arkansas, which selected their State officials in September, will hold an election of some kind. Thirty-three United States Senators are to be elected and 431 out of the 435 members of the House of Representatives, Maine having selected its four in September.

Apparent Winners for Governors.

Present indications point to the election of the following candidates for Governor:

Alabama—Charles Henderson (Dem.).
Arizona—George W. P. Hunt (Dem.).
Arkansas—George W. Hays (Dem.).
California—In doubt.
Connecticut—Lyman T. Tingier (Dem.).
Georgia—Nat E. Harris (Dem.).
Idaho—John M. Hains (Rep.).
Iowa—George P. Clarke (Rep.).
Kansas—Arthur Capper (Rep.).
Massachusetts—David I. Walsh (Dem.)
Michigan—Chase S. Osborn (Rep.).
Minnesota—William E. Lee (Rep.).
Nebraska—R. Bescher Howell (Rep.).
Nevada—Tasker L. Odie (Rep.).
New Hampshire—Rolland H. Spaulding (Rep.).
New York—Martin H. Glynn (Dem.).
North Dakota—Louis B. Hanna (Rep.).
Oklahoma—R. L. Williams (Dem.).
Oregon—James Withycombe (Rep.)
Pennsylvania—Marian G. Brumbaugh (Rep.).
Rhode Island—R. Livingston Beeckman (Rep.).
South Carolina—Richard I. Manning (Dem.).
South Dakota—Frank M. Byrne (Rep.).
Tennessee—Thomas C. Rye (Dem.).
Texas—James E. Ferguson (Dem.).
Vermont—Charles W. Gates (Rep.)
Wisconsin—Manuel L. Phillips (Rep.).
Wyoming—H. S. Ridgely (Rep.).

Of the states now having Democratic Governors it is probable that the Republicans will elect their candidates in Kansas, Michigan, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Oregon and Rhode Island, while the Democrats will elect their candidates in place of a Republican in Tennessee. In California the contest will be close between the three candidates, Hiram Johnson, Progressive incumbent; John B. Curtin, Democrat, and John D. Frederick, Republican, with chances favoring the election of the latter.

Kansas may contribute a surprise by electing Henry J. Allen, Progressive, as the "Sunflower" State is the one spot in the country where the Progressives appear to be holding their own.

Prohibition Issue in Six States.

Prohibition is the main issue of the campaigns in Arizona, California, Colorado, Ohio, Oregon and Washington and the voters of these states will decide on Tuesday next whether their state shall be "wet" or "dry." In Minnesota and South Dakota the voters will pass on local option propositions.

These seven states will vote directly on woman suffrage: Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Dakota, Ohio and South Dakota. The General Assemblys to be elected in Iowa and in New York will vote on a woman suffrage constitutional amendment which must afterwards be submitted to the voters for ratification.

New York is one of the few states in the Union where voters will not be called upon to vote directly on propositions expanding or contracting the functions of government. In New York, however, 15 delegates at large and 153 district delegates will be elected to a constitutional convention, held every 20 years to revise the State Constitution. This convention will meet next summer after the adjournment of the regular session of the Legislature.

In several of the other states the voters will directly decide proposed changes in their governing rules submitted to them. Some of these propositions are unique, others merely propose changes in the method of taxation, administrative practices and the extent and scope of public improvements.

In Arizona nine measures are proposed, the most interesting being to abolish the death penalty, providing old age and mothers' pensions, compelling 80 per cent of the employes of a corporation to be citizens of the United States.

In California the voters are to decide upon prohibition, whether "red light" districts and prize fights shall be permitted and on a universal eight-hour law.

16 Propositions in Colorado.

Sixteen propositions confront the voters of Colorado. Some of them are: State-wide prohibition, requiring three-fourths verdict in jury cases, making newspapers public utilities and limiting the right of a municipality to incur indebtedness.

Iowa voters will pass upon the initiative and referendum and woman suffrage.

Kansas has but two amendments to vote upon; an unusually small number for Kansas. One provides that any public official elective or appointive may be recalled; the other imposes income, franchise and privilege taxes.

In Massachusetts there are two propositions before the voters. One gives laborers employed by cities and towns an annual vacation, the other makes Saturday an official half-holiday for State workmen and mechanics.

In Michigan one of the three amendments to be voted on gives students, members of the Legislature and commercial travelers the right to vote away from home.

Minnesota offers nine amendments for the consideration and decision of the voters, the two most interesting being to create a system of tree bounties to encourage reforestation and the other to create a fund by taxing dogs to reimburse owners of other animals for loss due to dogs.

15 Propositions in Missouri.

Missouri offers 15 propositions, one slightly curtailing the scope of the initiative and referendum, another authorizing the issue of $50,000,000 bonds for road building, one authorizing the State to pension the blind, a full-crew law and a county local option law.

Montana citizens will decide whether the State will legalize women suffrage, prize fighting and the workman's compensation.

Of the six amendments submitted to Nebraska voters, one authorizes verdicts of three-fifths of a jury in all civil and misdemeanor cases, another the taxation of incomes, a third raising the salary of the Governor to $5000, and a fourth provides for a workman's compensation law.

North Dakota voters will pass upon six amendments besides woman suffrage. Two extend the present initiative and referendum law. Another gives the people the right to select locations of public buildings and a third authorizes the establishment of public terminal grain elevators.

Commission May Run State.

The voters of Oklahoma are to decide whether a commission form of government will be installed for the State, whether the State's Appellate Courts shall be greatly simplified, and whether the State tax rate shall be limited to 2½ mills annually and a gross production tax be placed upon oil, gas and other minerals. All are initiated measures that change the Constitution, if adopted, and all were inaugurated and placed before the people by Charles J. West, present Attorney General of Oklahoma and one of the recent candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

In proposing to reduce the State Legislature and form a commission of 15, the West measure provides for a one-House Legislature of 80 members who are prohibited from remaining in session over 60 days biennially. This House of 80 shall select 15 of its members biennially who shall be a commission.

In Ohio the two most important propositions are to make prohibition State-wide and to give women full suffrage.

The Oregon voters will face a big job on election day. Six men are running for Governor and there are 12 tickets, full or partial, to choose from. Then he is asked to pass yes or no upon 29 propositions. Here is one: "To allow dentists graduating from colleges requiring two years' course of six months each year to practice in Oregon." One amendment is to omit requirement that "all taxation shall be equal and uniform," while an initiated measure provides for "equal assessment and taxation of all property." What is the poor voter to do?

Things Voter Must Decide.

Other propositions before the Oregon voter are:

"To limit hours of labor and require certain conditions of rest for females."

"Pay members of the Assembly $5 per day for each actual working day."

"State-wide prohibition after Jan. 1, 1916.

"Abolishing the death penalty."

"Placing an extra tax on owners of property worth over $25,000."

"Abolishing the State Senate and electing State Representatives at large instead of by districts."

In South Dakota the eleven propositions to be voted on range from local option, woman suffrage and extending the initiative and referendum to the public indorsement of candidates nominated in the primaries, and frame the pay for State Legislators.

Washington amendments propose the adoption of the "blue sky" law, State-wide prohibition, providing first aid to injured workmen, abolishing private employment agencies, the establishment of convict labor on the roads; a teachers retirement fund and a universal eight hour bill.

Gov. Major to Cast His Ballot by Mail

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 31.

GOV. MAJOR today predicted that Missouri would give the Democratic State ticket a majority next Tuesday of from 50,000 to 75,000, and said that Senator Stone would run ahead of the ticket.

"I have not campaigned in St. Louis," said the Governor, but I have made speeches in a number of the congressional districts, and I believe that all of them will return to Washington their present Democratic representatives."

The Governor will remain in Jefferson City Tuesday and will mail his certified ballot to Pike County under the new absentee voters law.

One reason why he will do so, he said, is that he wants to encourage a more general use of the privilege among traveling men who are compelled to be away from home.

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 1, 1914.

CRIPPLED PIKERS FIGHT GAMELY TO DRAW WITH DRAKE

Two Field Goals Blocked in Final Quarter Keep Washington From Winning—Score Is 7-7.

By Ralph Bryan.

IN the scrappiest game of football seen on Francis Field since the Washington-Missouri contest of 1910, Coach Edmunds' crippled eleven, yesterday fiercely fought the team from Drake University, Des Moines, Io., to a draw. The final score was 7 to 7, the Pikers scoring in the second period, Drake's tally coming in the third.

The windup of the final quarter was a fitting climax to a game replete with thrills. Washington had lost two golden opportunities to break the draw, but with the score 7 to 7 and but five minutes more to play, Drake was penalized half the distance to the goal on account of rough work, putting the ball in W. U.'s possession within striking distance of the blue line.

Potthoff's Kick Blocked.

Plunges by Potthoff and Milford made first down and two penalties against Drake for offsides gave the Pikers the ball on the 10-yard line, where Drake held. Captain Potthoff dropped back for a try at a field goal, but the myrtle and maroon line failed to hold. The attempt was blocked, and the Pikers' chances apparently gone.

But Berry intercepted a forward pass immediately thereafter and put the ball in the same position, where once again the bulldogs proved to be all that the name implies, and for the second time held Washington. With the Pikers' only chance of winning resting on a possible field goal and with but one and one-half minutes till the final whistle, the Pikeway rooters clamored for "Poge" Lewis, the Brickley of W. U. So Lewis, who was on the sidelines on account of a badly wrenched knee, but in uniform, was sent in. But again the Pikeway line broke and the blue forwards spoiled for good and all Washington's last chance to win from Drake for the first time in history.

Pikers Have Weight Edge.

It was easily evident, after the initial kickoff, that the contest was to be a real one. The crippled condition of the W. U. eleven was offset by their slight advantage in weight and experience over their opponents. Throughout practically the entire first half, Drake played a defensive game in her own territory, seldom having possession of the ball except to kick to safety.

The Pikers opened the game with a march down toward the blue goal, only to see the ball on a fumbled pass when within 10 yards of a touchdown. Here Drake put the ball out of danger by means of a pretty open field run of 35 yards, but lost the pigskin immediately thereafter on an intercepted forward pass. The balance of the opening quarter became a punting duel in which Jerneger had the edge on Potthoff by about 10 yards per exchange.

Capt. Potthoff scored for Washington in the second quarter on straight football. A pretty forward pass brought the ball to Drake's 8-yard mark and on the following down Boise broke through the blue line for the one touchdown, kicking the subsequent goal.

Forward Pass Enables Des Moines Men to Knot Score in Third Period

EDMUNDS switched his line-up at the opening of the second half. Kammerer was supplanted by Hetlage in the backfield, while crippled Bill Berry was sent in at Hetlage's end.

Drake kicked off to Washington, but the Pikers lost it shortly thereafter on a fumble. Line plunges by Jernegen and Warren, for Drake, and the circling of Drake's ends by Potthoff and Milford for Washington, kept the ball seesawing up and down the field, until, towards the close of the third period, the visitors got the ball on downs in midfield. Here, by means of a beautiful 15-yard pass by Blackburn and a spectacular openfield run of 30 yards by Donald, Drake scored. Hewitt tied the score by kicking the following goal.

Potthoff Fumbles Kick.

Washington had a scare at the start of the last quarter when Potthoff fumbled Jernegen's long punt and Drake recovered the ball on W. U.'s 15-yard lien. A desperate rally and the happy intercepting of a pass, however, kept the visitors from scoring and put the ball in safer territory.

The form showed by Edmunds' aggregation, considering their truly battered condition, was a surprise. A marked improvement was shown in the local team's tackling, linework and handling of the forward pass. Not only did the Pikers succeed in making the long pass a factor in their ground gaining, but they exhibited a much improved defense against the open game. The work of Captain Potthoff and Linn Milford again stood out. This pair deserve the credit for the greater per cent of the local's gains, Potthoff with his off-tackle plays and Milford with his wide end runs. Wetzel and Busick are the Piker linemen who proved W. U.'s best defensive men yesterday, spilling the bulldog's plays time and again.

Blackburn, Diltz and Jernegen showed as the visitors' particular stars, the latter's punts averaging close to 45 yards.

Drake Man Banished.

The traditional friendly spirt that is usually manifest in a Washington-Drake game, was slightly marred yesterday when in the last period Blackburn was put out of the game, and his team penalized half the distance to the goal for a crude exhibition of sportsmanship on his part, which consisted of his kicking Kammerer without any cause while the latter was down on his back in a scrimmage.

This is the second time Washington has tied the Drake bulldogs in the last four years.

The lineup:

Colgate Bewildered by Yale's Forward Passes; Blue Eleven Wins, 49—7

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 31.—Colgate lost to Yale today, 49 to 7.

The rugby passing game completely baffled the visitors. In the third period Yale played its entire second team, and it was then that Colgate scored. Yale played its regular team again in the fourth period.

The game abounded in spectacular runs by Legore, Ainsworth and Scovil of Yale and West and Swarthout of Colgate.

DUNCKEL IS STAR OF M. S. U. WIN OVER AGGIES, 13-3

Tiger Fullback Scores Two Touchdowns for Brewer's Light Eleven.

TIGER TEAM IMPROVED

Although Outweighed, Columbia Eleven Fights Fiercely Until Victory Is Cinched.

By Rex Magee.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 31.—Missouri Tigers triumphed over the Kansas Aggies this afternoon by the score of 13 to 3. With a substitute backfield, averaging 148 pounds, the Tigers completely outplayed their heavier rivals and totaled 355 yards by rushing the ball to the Aggies 32.

The game was a contest of speed and fight against weight and long forward passes. Time after time Lake or Miller, Tiger halves, circled ends for long gains. The Missouri interference, heretofore weak, today showed great improvement and made victory possible.

Forward passes were used but only in few cases made gains. The Aggies were more successful with them than the Tigers, netting 70 yards.

Aggies Unable to Gain.

The Aggies, in the final period, failed to gain a yard by rushing the ball, but threatened the Missouri goal after gaining 65 yards by forward passing. The Tiger line displayed great strength and failed to yield anything but scant yards to the heavy Aggy attacks. The Aggies made first downs rarely.

The first score of the game was a field goal from placement by Captain Agnew, 25 yards. Missouri scored in the third and fourth quarters, Dunckel, fullback, going over for both touchdowns by one and two-yard plunges. Lake kicked goal after the second touchdown.

After the Aggy field goal, the Tigers rushed the ball almost the length of the field and threatened the goal many times, but the light backfields lacked the punch to send it over. In the third quarter, Dunckel, who had been in reserve, went over for a touchdown. Dunckel was sent in the final period and made another touchdown.

Tigers Penalized 40 Yards.

Marble and Agnew were the best Aggy players. Missouri lost 40 yards in penalties, Kansas Aggies 20. The lineup:

Missouri 13.	Positions.	Kan. Aggies 3.
Hendron	Left end	Bernard
Lansing	Center	Wright
Preston	Right guard	Coxen
Clay (Capt.)	Right tackle	Scanlon
Speelman	Right end	Skinner
Collins	Quarterback	Haymaker
Miller	Left halfback	Enns
Lake	Right halfback (Capt.)	Agnew
Woody	Fullback	Haucke

Referee—Masker (Northwestern). Umpire—Quigley (St. Mary's). Head linesman—Hoopes (Westport High). Time of periods—15m.

Missouri scoring: Touchdowns—Dunckel 2. Goals from touchdown—Lake 1.

Aggies' scoring: Goal from field—Agnew 1.

Substitutions: Missouri — Dunckel for Woody; Rutledge for Lake; Drumm for Preston; Van Dyne for Drumm; Lake for Miller; Graham for Lansing. Aggies—Hartwig for Haucke; Haucke for Agnew; Wilder for Bernard; Briney for Marble; Agnew for Haucke.

BLOCKED KICK YIELDS VICTORY FOR MIDDIES

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 31.—Navy met a tartar here today in the Agricultural and Mechanical College of North Carolina and only gained a 2-point victory, 16 to 14. Victory was due to a blocked punt which fell behind the A. and M. goal line and was recovered by the visitors for a safety. The North Carolinians kept fighting all the time. Their mastery of new football, with many variations of the forward pass was their greatest asset.

Athletics' Veteran Pitchers Who Have Been Fired by Connie Mack

ALBERT (CHIEF) BENDER

ED. PLANK

Mack Tells Why He Has Released Plank and Bender

One Man Sought Terms From Federal League While the Other Is Through in A. L.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—Pitchers Bender, Coombs and Plank will not be with the Athletics next year. This was admitted by Manager Connie Mack, in a statement given out this morning by the leader of the former world's champions. Connie Mack was shown a copy of the story in which Hughey Jennings was credited with making the announcement that Mack had asked for waivers on his trio of stars. In reply, he said:

"Before releasing a player unconditionally all the clubs in the American League must ask waivers on said player or players.

"While I had no intention of retaining the three players named for the season of 1915, I would not have asked for waivers on the players at this time but for the fact that one of the three had told me that he was talking business with the Federal League. He told me that he had been offered big money and did not suppose that we wanted to meet the other offer. I suggested to this player that perhaps some of the other clubs in the league would meet the demand. I want it strictly understood that I am for the American League in victory or defeat.

"When a waiver is asked on a player it is supposed to be treated in confidence by owners and club managers, but this much could not be expected of Jennings, who devotes six months of the year to baseball and the other six months to his vaudeville act."

Plank Says C. Mack Has Not Treated Him Fairly; Has Fed Offer

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—Eddie Plank was reached over the phone at Gettysburg and asked if he knew anything of his release. He said:

"It was a complete surprise to me, and I knew nothing about it until a friend of mine called me this morning from Philadelphia and told me he had read it in the paper. I thought that Connie would have told me something about it, particularly since I told him a few days ago that I had received a strong offer from the Federal League.

"I was man enough to do that, and Connie might at least have done the same towards me. I gave the best I had to the Athletics and would like to be able to say the club treated me as well in return. I feel that I have at least a couple of years more good pitching left in my old wing, and the fact that the Athletics want to release me will not make the Federals believe that I am all in. If the Feds think that way, I don't have to worry, for I have got mine stowed away in farms and the bank, and I don't have to play ball any more unless I want to. Even now, I am not sure that I shall play ball with the Federals, but if I do you can bet that I shall get a fat salary."

OSTEOPATHS EASY VICTIMS FOR FAST C. B. C. TEAM, 54-0

Coach Ward's Men Hold a Parade for Benefit of Kirksville Bone Specialists.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., Oct. 31.—The Christian Brothers' College of St. Louis so far outclassed the Kirksville Osteopaths at Kirksville this afternoon that the outcome never was in doubt, the purple and gold crew downing the bone specialists, 54 to 0. It didn't take Ward's squad long to get warmed up and put one over the goal line early in the first quarter, which as the game continued was quite a regularity as the faster the play, the better the Cote Brilliante eleven showed.

The C. B. C. tribe showed to advantage their new ideas in the use of the forward pass after they were sure they had the locals' number. Some of the plays were startling departures from the usual formations, Ward's crew presenting so many different attacks that their opponents never knew what to look for and seemed bewildered with each play.

Time was taken out by both teams frequently, especially by the Osteopaths, as the team was in very poor condition owing to a lack of training.

Some Imported Players.

Several of the prayers who performed in the battle are not even regular scholars, as two of them were imported for the sole purpose of trying to down the St. Louisans, their poor condition was even noticeble from the side lines and the collegians showed them no quarter at any time, which accounts for the large number of men in the fray.

The first and third quarter saw the teams fighting on fairly even terms, with the Cote Brilliante squad having a slight advantage. At no time was the Christian Brothers' goal in danger of being crossed, the closest that the locals came was to reach the 15-yard line and then only through a fumble of a kick.

Capt. Shea and Sacksteder ran a dead heat in the number of touchdowns, each of them ripping off a trio while Ahlstrom and Devereux also chalked up a touchdown apiece. Sacksteder's wonderful open-field running was one of the features that stood out the most, while Shea, Gallagher, Devereux, Ahlstrom and Rodgers ripped holes through the line, both on the offense and defense. W. Essman, as usual, played up to his standard, being in nearly every play and breaking up the interference with regularity. Only a few times was he not among those that hit the turf.

Devereux Kicks 6 Goals.

Out of eight tries for goals after touchdowns Devereux failed but twice, and both of these were on easy chances, while he kicked three goals from the far end of the field, which were worth the price of admission, in his only attempt at a field goal, from the 35-yard line, he also failed, the ball hitting the cross-bar.

C. B. C. (54)	Position.	Kirksville (0)
Hironimus Devereux	Right end	Mills
Shank, McCarty	Right tackle	Grossman
C. Essman	Right guard	Williams
Gregor	Center	Dilatusch (Capt.)

R. Hart, Gallagher	Quarterback	Morris
Sacksteder	Right halfback	Wilson, Garmroth
Shea, Willett. Shea (Capt.)	Left halfback	Reid
Rodgers	Fullback	Garretson

Touchdowns—Ahlstrom 1; Shea, 3; Sacksteder, 3; Devereux, 1. Goals from touchdown—Devereux, 6. Officials—Referee, McWilliams (Missouri). Umpire, Dolan (Notre Dame). Head linesman, Mills (Missouri). Length of periods, 15 minutes.

CENTRAL'S CLEVER ATTACK SMASHES M'KINLEY, 20 TO 0

Fumbles Prove Costly for South Siders in Important Collision With Red and Black.

POTTHOFF SCORES TWICE

Sil Merstetter Also Is Potent Factor in Winning for Walker's Team.

Exhibiting the best brand of football shown by a scholastic eleven this year, Central High School's likely-looking entry in the struggle for local "prep" gridiron honors trampled over McKinley High's would-be title holders, 20 to 0, at Robison Field yesterday afternoon.

The midcity lads played real "classy" football yesterday. In bucking the South Siders they went up against the most experienced school team in the city. Nine players who lined up with McKinley were veterans of the 1913 season. On the other hand, of the red and black array but two of the gridders had performed on last year's team.

Fumbling really cost McKinley the contest. If it had not been for the slovenliness with which the losers handled the ball, the final outcome may have had altogether a different complexion. The South Siders time after time had the Walkerites in tight quarters only to lose all chances of scoring by a fumble.

Central Entirely Superior.

Allowing for fumbling, Central really outplayed McKinley in every department of the game. The midcity backs picked holes, gave interference, and when in the open put up clever exhibitions. Lawton, Merstetter and Conzilman are excellent running mates at the halves. Potthoff, fullback, is a line plunger of the first degree. Sil Merstetter is probably the most valuable man on the team. He ran the team in heady fashion, while his punting is undoubtedly the best in the city. His kicks averaged about 45 yards.

However the line is where Central showed the greatest advantage. Although the defense occasionally cracked for short intervals, it closed up and held like a wall when McKinley threatened to score.

The McKinley gridders also deserve praise. The backs gave excellent individual performances. The line also held nobly at times, while the entire team, in face of defeat, scrapped gamely to the finish and after the Walkerites had won, they knew that they had been in a fight. Leary and Snyder especially starred for the losers.

The elevens were about evenly matched in weight, but Central may have had a slight advantage. However, the McKinley poundage was evenly distributed, while the Central weight was deposited in two or three heavyweights. Both squads tipped the scales around the 155-pound mark.

Central Scores Early.

Central started the game with a rush, and five minutes after play had started owned a touchdown. S. Merstetter kicked off to Snyder, who fumbled in trying to pass the ball to Leary. A Central lad fell on the ball on the McKinley 15-yard mark. However, McKinley held and kicked to Merstetter in midfield. Sil returned 30 yards. A forward pass of 15 yards, Merstetter to Niles, worked, and Russ scampered the remaining yards to the McKinley goal. S. Merstetter booted the subsequent goal.

Central's second touchdown did not come until the third period, when Walker's backs circled the McKinley ends, smashed the center and hit the tacyles for telling gains. Conzilman and Potthoff carried the ball from their own 35-yard line to the McKinley 3-yard mark, from where the husky little fullback smashed center for the remaining distance. Goal was again kicked by Merstetter.

The final score was entirely the fault of Snyder, the South Side halfback. With the ball in his possession on his own 8-yard mark, he fumbled on a fake kick play, and Nies of Central fell on the ball. Potthoff carried the ball over. Goal was missed.

McKinley Goal Disallowed.

McKinley made its greatest effort after this score. Long gains by the backs carried the ball to the two-yard mark from where Cloud went over the goal line. However the referee had not blown his whistle for play and the ball was brought back. The Central line then held and the McKinley backs were thrown for telling losses. The play here was exceptionally rough and one Centralite was put out of the game because of his conduct. A crowd of 1500 turned out.

Notre Dame Quarterback Three Times Dashes 75 Yards for Touchdowns

NOTRE DAME, Ind., Oct. 31.—Bergman, Notre Dame's midget quarterback, played wonderful football today and his team defeated Haskell Indians, 21 to 7. Three times Bergman, catching Haskell's punts, went through the entire broken field of touchdowns. His runs averaged 70 yards. Wilson played great ball for the Haskell Indians, repeatedly rushing through lines for gains of five and ten yards.

CRIMSON STRATEGY NETS VICTORY OVER YOST'S MACHINE, 7-

Quarterback Logan Drives Wolverines Bac With Well Directed Punts Until Opportun ty Offers for Hardwick to Smash Throug for Touchdown—Hughitt's Failure to Kic Is Costly—Harvard Line Crumbles Befor Maulbetsch.

By Herbert Reed,

The Post-Dispatch's Eastern Football Authority.

BOSTON, Oct. 31.

HARVARD generalship, which from start to finish was without a fla accounted this afternoon for a stirring victory over the far-fam Michigan eleven before a picturesque crowd of 25,000 people in t Stadium by the score of 7 to 0.

In the matter of power, the Wolverines again and again showed a d gerous superiority, the visitors throwing the thunderbolt halfback, Ma betsch, and the fleet Hughitt, behind pretty shift formations, against Crimson line that crumbled from time to time, save when it stood under t shadow of its own goal posts.

Once entrenched, the Harvard eleven was not to be dislodged, although had Hughitt, the Michigan field general, displayed better headwork, the chances are that there might have been an early score and the Crimson might have been compelled to play an uphill battle. The splendid kicking of Francke and Hardwick again and again came to the rescue of the Cambridge men, who in the first line of defense had their hands more than full and helped mightily in driving Michigan down, down to defeat.

Hardwick's Terrific Plunge.

Breaks in the luck and penalties at times put first Harvard, then the Wolverines in positions from which it seemed impossible to extricate themselves. There were splendid marches down the field by both elevens, Harvard's one parade over the chalk marks, beautifully judged in the second period, and made up of prettily assorted plays, finally carried clear across the final line the hard-running Hardwick, who was a host in himself, carrying the leather in the final plunge, a sudden, switching run that took him through the Ann Arbor line so cleanly and at such terrific pace that not the best defensive halfback in the country could have brought him down short of the accomplishment of his purpose.

Michigan turned on a savage running game, showed practically nothing of the open play that has made Maize and Blue elevens famous in many a a big Western battle and was unable to stop the one forward pass that the Crimson mixed up with the pretty running attempted in the touchdown and goal therefrom.

Wolverines Fail to Kick.

The story of the generalship of the game can be told in a few words. Backed by a strong wind, and with the sun almost blinding the Harvard backs, to say nothing of the big advantage gained by Bradlee's fumble that gave the visitors the ball deep in Harvard territory, Michigan apparently forgot the value of the kicking or the passing game and started to use her powerful backs in an advance that failed just short of the goal, partly because of an increa ingly clever Crimson defense, a partly because of the Hughitt's po choice of plays when he was knoc ing at the Crimson gate.

With only four yards to go for touchdown, and fourth down, Hug itt was not satisfied with the th points he would almost surely ha made had he elected to try a fie goal, and chose, instead, a run th was smothered by the Harvard fo wards, and gave the ball to t Crimson on the downs.

More rushing, when the b should have been sent soaring do the field to the Harvard backs, w were shading their eyes with th hands, borne on a freakish wind th made it next to impossible to jud used up the period, and as it turn out, was to tell heavily against t Ann Arbor backs when they seem to be going at their best.

Harvard Grasps Opportunity.

So passed the first period wi Michigan having practically thro away every advantage of situati What then of Harvard? Changi ends of the field for the second pe iod, the Crimson set out with the a vantages a moment ago enjoyed the plucky visitors.

Wolverines Put Up Gamest Fight Ever Seen on Gridiron, Reed Say

SO aided and, above all, playing the brainiest kind of football, Harvard scored and hung up seven points for Michigan to shoot at. The crimson put the visitors in the position at this early stage of having to fight uphill all the way, needing a touchdown and goal even to tie, and an added score to stand a chance of winning.

Right here the game was won and lost. Thereafter Harvard's sound, if conservative generalship, while it produced no more scoring, held the Wolverines safe, despite some of the gamest playing by the Westerners I have ever seen on a field. Both threatened from time to time, the crimson largely with the superior kicking game and some slashing running near the close of the contest; Michigan with its driving attack that never quite reached the mark. When late in the game Michigan kept hammering away down deep into Harvard territory, the advance, it proved, had taken too much out of the men, and this, combined with a stiffening crimson defense, held the visitors off.

Now Harvard, having scored in the second period with sun and wind behind, the crimson set out to repeat in the third period by means of the kicking game when the same natural advantages were enjoyed by the Easterners.

Harvard in Tight Place.

But a freak of fortune, or perhaps it would be better to call it an individual error by a red-jerseyed player, upset the plan and, from having the whip-hand, with every prospect of working gaily down the field, the Harvard eleven found itself suddenly switched to the defensive. Hardwick dropped back to give the leather a long ride on the whirling blast that swept over the bowl end of the stadium.

He hoisted a beautifully spinning ball deep into Michigan land. But some one of his men had indulged in tripping and for that reason the leather was called back and turned over to the Wolverines on Harvard's 25-yard line.

Following a kick over the goal line and another out from Harvard's 20-yard mark, Michigan, fighting up hill, saw another chance to score. Had there been anything in the nature of the far-famed Western open play to help the running of the indefatigable Maulbetsch, the crimson might not have escaped. But although, with McHale and Cochran, the two stalwarts on the right side of the maize and blue line, leading, and Maulbetsch and Hughitt turning into the openings prettily and pounding along clear to the secondary defense, Michigan o more drove its terrific attack do inside the crimson 5-yard line, Westerners could not quite get ho

Yost's Attack Is Bad.

Forward pass of the West? Not the Michigan scheme of things, a parently. One had already be knocked down by the alert Harva backs, but at this stage the Ca bridge secondary defense was pil up almost on the forward line, in t desperate effort to check the thu dering Michigan backs. Now, if eve was the time to use the pass, or eve the threat of it. But no, the Ann A bor field general chose to drive o confident—and as it proved over-c fident—in the power of his run attack, with the result that the b was lost on downs and once aga Harvard was out of danger—on again a Michigan chance gone gli mering.

Now to the winning touchdown a the manner of its making. Michig put on the running attack for t second time at the beginning of t second period. Lyons picked up fo yards and the net shift that made t greatest possible use of the power right side of the line was called i action at once. Maulbetusch dro through in whirlwind style but t penalties in succession for holdi and for offside play—both due over-eagerness—made the dista too far to attempt to continue t running game for a first down so mighty Splawn was called upo kick. The Michigander sailed t leather to Huntington Hardwick his own 23-yard mark and beca stepping briskly back for eight ya that came in very handy just at t stage.

Hughitt Fumbles Kick.

Bradlee took the ball for a into the line and was driven over side line. Francke booted the to Hughitt, who fumbled, but re ered on his own 15-yard line. Harvard man's kick was a bea carrying just 52 yards. Within slipped through and smeared Spla who was then forced to kick. exchange had put Harvard just the center of the field and was nificant of what was to come, come soon. Hardwick and Fra picked up the seven yards betw them, the former off tackle, the ter through the center, the last being so hard that Wallace was h and had to leave the game. Big ard Offers Bouts From Light-weights to Bantams for Tuesday Evening.

ROGRAM A VARIED ONE

By Harry S. Sharpe.

sident Tommy Sullivan of the Fu- re City Athletic Club has billed a omising card for next Wednesday ening, the performers ranging from htweights down to bantams, boxing 115 pounds.

Frank Callahan of New York appears the main event with Jack Hanson Birmingham, Eng., as his opponent. -will be Callahan's first appear- ce in the West, while Hanson was en in the ring of the Future City C. on Oct. 13 against Paddy Kelly. that occasion Hanson made a good pression by his clever boxing, rather ily outpointing Kelly, but failing uncork a knockout punch. If he has he was quite successful in conceal- it, because he landed his right to lly's jaw often enough to have rned the trick a number of times had re been much force to his blows. he has anything in reserve he prob- ly will need it when he faces Cal- han, judging from the latter's hievements.

e's a German Jew.

allahan, whose right name is Sam ipzman, is 20 years old and a Ger- n Jew. He began boxing about five ars ago as a bantamweight, but now said to be at his best at about 126 128 pounds. A little more than two ars ago he boxed Johnny Solsberg ice, each time 10 rounds, and on the st occasion was credited with win- ng, while the second was about even. is was just before Solsberg boxed sensational bout against Johnny ulen.

Next, Callahan took on Jabez White Albany, N. Y., for 10 rounds and fol- wed this with six rounds against Kid" Williams, now the bantamweight ampion. This bout took place in ooklyn, N. Y. Callahan was credited ith winning from White and boxing raw with Williams.

s a featherweight Callahan d "Young" Driscoll 10 rounds times, and Willie Jones the e number of rounds twice. All se bouts are said to have been d ones, and close.

alking on lightweights, Callahan xed Walter Mohr 10 rounds three es and held his own. Later he xed Willie Beecher 10 rounds, and said to have bested him. This bout ok place just before Beecher left w York for the Pacific Coast to x Joe Rivers. "Knockout" Brown as unable to do much with Callahan two bouts of 10 rounds each, and en Callahan hooked up with "Har- m" Tommy Murphy. This bout took ace Sept. 22 last, and was for 10 unds. It was so close that the sport riters disagreed as to which was e winner.

ason Has Worthy Foe.

All this makes Callahan out to be a ighty good boy of his weight, and anson will have to travel faster than did against Kelly to beat the New rker. Conceding that both are clev- boxers, it is probable that neither a very hard hitter, as their records not very well sprinkled with ockouts. They have agreed to make 0 pounds at 3 o'clock on next ednesday afternoon and will box ght rounds. They are in training d neither is said to have any ouble in making the weight.

Joe Demelfi, an 18-year-old young- er from Brooklyn, N. Y., who char- terizes himself as "Young Zulu id," because of his admiration for ike Framier, a Brooklyn middle- eight known as "The Zulu Kid," is atched against Jimmy Murphy, the uth Broadway A. C. bantam, for ght rounds at 112 pounds. Murphy a clever little boxer and Young lu will have to be all his manager aims he is to get away with Jimmy. the latter is right he is hard to nt.

Archie McLeod, the hard-swinging St. uis bantam, who stands with his ght hand out, goes to war with ate Kalb of Chicago. Kalb is a median in the ring and his comical tics always cause a big laugh. He box, though, when he has some- e near his size, and there won't be uch difference between him and cLeod. They will meet at 116 unds.

e Schneider and Earl Burns will the show with a four-round ex- ition at 115 pounds.

Illinois Juggernaut Runs Over Gopher Team, 21 to 6

Minnesota's Hopes for Big-Nine Championship Rudely Shattered by Coach Suppke's Men—Game Won in Final Period.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 31.

MINNESOTA'S western championship hopes are shattered, and Illinois' chances for premier honors stand out brightly as a result of the latter's 21 to 6 victory over the Gophers today in one of the most bitterly contested games ever played on Northrop field.

Old football, new football, strategy and luck all failed to produce a count in the first three periods. In the fourth period Illinois opened up a bewildering array of forward passes and sensational line plunges that ripped gaps in the Gopher defense, three times rushing the ball over the line. Minnesota's score was made when Bierman shot over the line after the ball had been placed within striking distance with a long forward pass. Pogue scored two of Illinois' touchdowns, Clark one and Macomber kicked three goals from touchdowns.

Praise for Coach Zuppke.

Not since the days when Michigan and Minnesota met here has there been such a desperate contest on Northrop Field, in the opinion of football critics, who agreed tonight that Coach Zuppke has perfected a machine well up to championship standards.

Perhaps the most perfect and spectacular play of today's game was a long forward pass hurled from the 35-yard line which placed the ball within a few inches of Minnesota's goal line. Clark then plunged through for Illinois' first touchdown and a deep groan rumbled through the crowded stands as Minnesota saw her championship chances go a-glimmering. Then before the Gophers recovered from the shock, Illinois received a kick-off, rushed the ball to Minnesota's 35-yard line in two downs, and Pogue skirted the right flank for the second touchdown.

Gophers Rally Gamely.

Minnesota showed a wonderful flash of ability in the next three minutes, forcing the ball down the field by line drives and forward passes, making possible its single touchdown.

In the last few minutes of play, Pogue intercepted a long forward pass and zigzagged his way through a thin field for the final touchdown.

For Illinois 10 forward passes were successful. Minnesota was crude in this department of the game, particularly in the first half and only eight of her 27 passes proved successful.

Solon outpunted Macomber, while the generalship honors were slightly in Clark's favor.

Zuppke Sees Title.

After the game was won a number of substitutes were put in by Coach Zuppke.

"We will not stop until we have the conference championship safely tucked away," was the comment Coach Zuppke made after the game.

Sooners Hold Jayhawkers to a 16-16 Draw

Each Team Scores Safety in Bitterly Contested Battle at Lawrence.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 31.—Kansas and Oklahoma played to a 16 to 16 tie here today. Kansas scored first after a few minutes play, when Geyer, the Oklahoma fullback, was downed behind his own goal line after he had fumbled a pass, giving Kansas a safety. Oklahoma attempted a number of forward passes without success.

Forward passes were of more value to the Oklahomans in the second period, a touchdown being scored after a forty-yard pass. Oklahoma made a safey after Kansas had intercepted a kick behind her own goal line and fumbled.

In the final period a Yale shift puzzled the Oklahomans and before they had solved it Kansas had scored a touchdown and tied the score.

C. B. C. High Players Call Off Strike and Beat Alton Team, 20--12

The C. B. C. High School eleven defeated the Alton, Ill., High School team 20—12, on the school campus, yesterday afternoon. In the locals' lineup were three scrubs of the college team—Murphy, Quinn and Patterson. It was mainly through the efforts of this trio that the Easton avenue lads were successful.

They were put in at the suggestion of the visitors. Several of the C. B. C. players had gone on a strike, owing to the disqualifying of a team mate, and rather than go back to Alton without a game, the Illinoisans allowed the scrubs to play.

95-YARD RUN FEATURES PENNSY'S VICTORY, 40—6

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—The University of Pennsylvania football team defeated Swarthmore College on Franklin Field today, 40 to 6. The game was good practice for Pennsylvania, which meets Michigan at Ann Arbor next Saturday. The home eleven played mostly straight football, few forward passes or other open plays being attempted. When the wind was at her back, Pennsylvania constantly kicked, evidently trying to win without taking too great a risk of having her best men injured. The feature of the game was a 95-yard run by Tucker, who caught the ball on a kick-off and evaded the whole Swarthmore team. Swarthmore's touchdown was made on a 66-yard run by Locke, who broke through Pennsylvania's line

Cornhuskers Win From Ames in Last Period, 20-7

Plucky Aggies Weaken Under Continual Hammering by Nebraska Huskies.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 31.—The Ames Agricultural College football team was put out of the running for the Missouri Valley championship here today, when after outplaying the Nebraska team for three quarters, it weakened. Nebraska won by a score of 20 to 7.

Ames scored early in the first quarthe field, a 40-yard forward pass and two line bucks sent the ball over for its only touchdown. Nebraska carried the ball to the Iowans' 40-yard line a few moments later and Captain Halligan kicked a goal from placement.

Ames hammered away at the Nebraska line during the next quarter, but was unable to carry the ball very far into the Nebraska territory. Nebraska carried the ball into Ames' territory late in the third quarter, but Halligan and Doyle were outpunted by Moss, and Nebraska opened the last period with the ball in her own possession on the Nebraska 13-yard line.

Nebraska then carried the ball straight down the field on old style football and one forward pass for a touchdown by Rutherford. The same tactics sent Chamberlain over for another score a few minutes later. Nebraska recovered a fumble near the Ames goal and decided the game when Captain Halligan kicked a field goal in the closing moments of play.

BASEBALL AND SOCCER AT HYNES' PARK TODAY

Two soccer games will open the Hynes Soccer League season at Hynes' Park, 7100 Florissant avenue, this afternoon. The Manhattans will play the Hynes Terriers, while the Walnut Parks will oppose the Triangles. The games will be started at 2:30 o'clock. Last year the Hynes League sent no less than a dozen players to the two big soccer leagues and a number of promising young players are with the four teams this season. As an additional attraction a baseball game in which the Schultz will meet the All-Stars, both strong semipro nines, is also on the card for this afternoon.

Michigan Aggies Easily Win.

LANSING, Mich., Oct. 31.—Akron College was no match for the Michigan Agricultural College, the Aggies winning today's game, 75 to 6. The most brilliant play of the game was a 95-yard run by Smith of M. A. C., from his own goal line in the first period.

SOLDAN BARELY ABLE TO DEFEAT YEATMAN, 19-12

Camp's 108-Yard Run for Touchdown Is Feature of North Siders' Play.

The Soldan High School football eleven met a tartar in Yeatman High and was very fortunate in landing a 19—12 victory at Robison Field, yesterday morning. Whether it was the West Ender's poor play or Yeatman's strength that held the score down to such moderate proportions is hard to determine. However, the gold and brown squad put up a mediocre exhibition at best.

The back-field performed fairly well on the offense, but the whole team showed poorly on the defense. The line failed to withstand the attack of the Yeatman backs during a greater part of the game and never consistently opened holes. On one occasion the North Enders, made five straight first downs while several times they gained their distance thrice, successively.

Nehr and Morrison Star.

Nehr and Morrison did most to stave off defeat. These two players were the only consistent gainers for the Kelly clan and it was through their alertness that the Soldan followers have anything to gloat over.

Soldan got off to a lead in the first period when Capt. Swingley caught a punt in midfield and advanced the ball to the Yeatman two-yard mark. He then went over for a touchdown. Dawson kicked goal.

Soldan was first to score in the second period, when Nehr intercepted a forward pass and ran 30 yards for a touchdown. Goal was missed. Yeatman started going and for a time played the West Enders off of their feet. Kamp made the feature play of the game when he caught a punt on his two-yard mark and ran 108 yards through the Soldan team for a score. Shanley missed goal. A forward pass, good for 20 yards, brought the ball to the five-yard line. Shanley hit the line for the remaining distance. He again missed goal.

No scoring was done in the third period, but in the final quarter, with only two minutes to play, and a one-point lead, the Soldan eleven buckled down to business and rushed the ball to the Yeatman 30-yard mark. A forward pass on a fake kick netted 15 yards. Morrison went over on a dash around end. Goal was missed.

Millers Tackle Columbian A. C. at Federal Park

Winners in First Round of Soccer Schedule Will Furnish Today's Feature.

After today's struggle at Federal League Park the soccer fans will know which of the four teams has the best inside chance for the flag. True, the season ha sonly started, but two games having been played, but the battles this afternoon should indicate a league leader and because of this fact the contests will be watched with considerable interest.

The feature struggle of the afternoon's entertainment will bring together the Ben Millers and the Columbian Athletic Club. Both these teams captured their opening encounters last Sunday afternoon, the Ben Millers defeating the St. Leos and the Columbian Athletic Club downing the Compton Hills.

Manager Enright of the Compton Hills stated last Thursday night that he had signed two new players, and that he fully believes these men will give him the required strength with which to successfully combat all opponents. Both Quinn and Mullin, the new men, are stars and there is reason to suspect that they will bolster up the South Side aggregation.

Manager Klosterman of the St. Leos, immediately after last Sunday's struggle, decided that his team was not of the right makeup to struggle through a hard season of strenuous playing and land on top. He wasted no time in getting some new talent and today Medric Boucher and Jim Brannigan will be seen for the first time in a St. Leo uniform.

DESPERATE RALLY SAVES PRINCETON FROM DEFEAT, 7-7

Williams College Put Up Stubborn Resistence and Tigers Narrowly Escape.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 31.—Princeton and Williams played a 7 to 7 tie today, the Tigers scoring their touchdown and goal with only two minutes to play.

Toolan of Williams was the star of the game. His run of 55 yards from a scrimmage formation being a beauty. His forward pass of 14 yards to Overton on the next play resulted in the Williams' touchdown, Overton running five yards after catching the ball.

Princeton scored her touchdown when Gennert recovered Tompkins' fumble on Williams' 15-yard line. Glick advanced three yards and a penalty helped a little. Driggs rounded the end for five yards, and Glick carried the ball over off tackle. Law kicked the goal and tied the score. The line-up:

Hardwick Drives Through Tackle for a Touchdown

taking his place as the Crimson pivot. Bradlee ripped through the center to Michigan's 30-yard mark and it was evident that the attack was really under way at last.

But, unlike Hughitt, Logan did not underestimate the defense against him, which had begun to pack up. Reimann was also too alert to keep up the runnig attack against him, so Bradlee was called upon to shoot the ball in a pretty if extremely simple forward pass to Smith, who had gone down the field from end and who had been left uncovered by the Michigan secondary defense. Smith gathered in the ball on the Wolverine 18-yard line.

Francke Gains 7 Yards.

Francke pulled in to the middle of the Michigan line twice in succession, carrying half the Michigan forwards on his back. He promptly repeated, taking the ball to within seven yards of the goal line. It was practically certain now that Harvard would score. Bradlee was stopped on the next trip against the Michigan forwards, but they were packing up once more against him so Logan played his surest card, Hardwick off tackle. The big back swung out to the left side of the Michigan line, then turned in at right angle. He bumped off the tackle and when he reached Splawn he was going so hard that the tall fullback could not drag him down. It was a typical Hardwick touchdown. He easily kicked the goal and thereby sealed the doom of the invaders.

Loyhola Easy for Undergrads.

The St. Louis U. Undergrads met little opposition in Loyhola Hall team, yesterday afternoon, and won 19—0, in a curtain raiser to the Freshman-Kemper game on the Billiken campus. The blue and white eleven probably would have run up a larger total had not the periods been cut to nine minutes. The individual lights were F. Muckerman, who tallied 2 touchdowns and Meinhard who scored the other.

Billiken Freshies Win Uphill Game.

The St. Louis U. Freshman football eleven defeated the Kemper M. A. team at the St. Louis U. campus yesterday afternoon. The game was hard fought from beginning to end, the first year men playing an up hill struggle. The cadets outweighed the locals some eight pounds to the man. Fruitt and Kelley were the in-

Fireball King Says St. Louis Team Has Offered Him "More Than $15,000."

Herrmann Has Peace Talk With Weeghman

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.

PEACE between organized baseball and the Federal League was discussed informally here today by August Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission, and Charles Weeghman, president of the Chicago Federals. Mr. Weeghman admitted the baseball war was the subject considered, but said the discussion was so preliminary there was nothing definite for the public. Mr. Herrmann would not talk about the meeting.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Oct. 31.—Walter Johnson, pitcher for the Washington American League club, said here tonight that the St. Louis Federal League club had offered him "more than $15,000 a year" to sign a contract. He intimated that this offer had been made over the long distance telephone from St. Louis today.

Johnson declined to state who tendered the offer or the number of years specified in the Federal League contract.

"I have notified Washington of the Federal offer and will wait for their reply," he said. "However, I think negotiations will close soon, but with whom, I'm not sure."

Hughie Jennings Says He's Willing to Apologize to Athletics' Manager

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 31.—"I do not understand Connie Mack's attitude," said Hugh Jennings, manager of the Detroits, here tonight after being run down after hours of search by newspaper men for an interview on the article this morning. "It is news to me that waivers are supposed to be kept secret. Indeed, the fact about these three wonderful ball players must have leaked out long before the same was gotten from me because of its importance.

"Gossip, of such supreme importance in the baseball world, would have eventually become public property. Undoubtedly I have spoken to friends interested in baseball of the waivers and sought discussion and information as to what would probably happen," continued Jennings. This gave the direct insinuation that a confidence had been violated by one of his friends.

"So far as the pitchers are concerned, I am convinced that Plank and Bender are still considered among the champions in the box, and will rank above the average for several years. Let me state that if Connie Mack is under any conviction that I violated baseball ethics in talking about waivers he sent out, that I desire to make an apology to him and all others, as it was farthest from my thoughts of giving the public information that should have been considered secret."

St. Louis Fed Officials in Important Conference Today; Ball Going West

An important conference of the stockholders of the St. Louis Federal League club will be held this afternoon at the Jefferson Hotel, before the departure of Phil Ball for the Pacific Coast. Whether Ball is going west in quest of ballplayers could not be learned yesterday, but he is going to California, and before he departs he has several important things to say to his colleagues. One will be the policy to pursue in signing Walter Johnson.

INMAN LEADS HOPPE IN FOUR-DAYS' PLAY

TORONTO, Oct. 31.—For the first time in the international billiard championship series, Melbourne Inman, the English champion, tonight pulled out ahead of Willie Hoppe by the narrow margin of three in the four days' series played in this city. The total results of the four days' play are: Inman 2953; Hoppe 2950.

Young Ahearn Outclasses Hicks.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—"Young" Ahearn of Brooklyn completely outclassed Freddy Hicks of Detroit tonight, Hicks taking such a beating that his seconds threw up the sponge at the end of the sixth round of a scheduled 10-round bout. He was saved from a knockout three times by th bell.

Harry Cline Defeats Yamada.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 31.—Harry Cline defeated Koji Yamada, 300 to 132, in a billiard players' league match tonight. Averages and high runs: Cline 27 3-11, 195; Yamada 16 2-10, 50.

Carlisle Easy for Syracuse.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 31.—Syracuse University defeated Carlisle today, 24 to 3. Carlisle's attempts at the open game usually ended disastrously, the Indians' most notable gains being made by Capt. Calac through the Syracuse center.

WISCONSIN HOLDS STAGG'S MACHINE TO A DRAW, 0 TO 0

For First Time in Two Years, Maroons Are Denied a Victory in Important Game.

CAMP RANDALL, MADISON, Wis., Oct. 31.—For the first time in two years the Chicago Maroons today left a gridiron without the laurels of victory. The fighting Wisconsin team, nerved to a combat decisive in its character, played a game worthy of its importance, and, outfighting the Chicagoans, held them to a pointless draw, 0—0. The game was as hard fought as any in the history of the conference.

For Wisconsin, Bellows was the chief winner of glory and his accurate, long punts so far outdistanced those of Desjardien and Russell that the ball was for most of the game on Chicago ground. The loss of Gray, whose twisted leg gave way early in the game, weakened the maroon attack and his great runs were sadly missed, though Russell's fancy dashes and Flood's line drives practically made up for them.

Open Game a Myth.

To the surprise of the spectators, the much-heralded "new football" was hardly in evidence. Straight football predominated and though at least a dozen forward passes were tried by both teams the opposing backs wrecked nearly all of them, three being intercepted by each side. The one double pass attempted by Chicago gained only a yard or two. Both maroons and cardinals tried for field goals in vain—Bellows' dropkicks fell yards short of the line, and Schafer's place kick went between the uprights, but nearer the ground than the crossbar.

A warm day favored the 12,000 spectators and made the going hard for the players, but substitutes were few. Lineup:

Chicago.	Position.	Wisconsin.
Huntington	L. E.	Stavrum
Shull	L. T.	Buck
Stegeman	L. G.	McMaster
Desjardien (C)	C.	Kennedy
White	R. G.	Mucks
Jackson	R. T.	Keeler (C)
Sparks	R. E.	Kelley
Russell	Q. B.	Bellows
Gray	L. H. B.	Cummings
Schafer	R. H. B.	Smith
Flood	F. B.	Kreuse

Umpire, Reid, Michigan; referee, Birch, Ohio Wesleyan; head linesman, Hutchins, Purdue. Time of periods, 15m. Substitutions—Chicago, Coutchie for Gray, Albert for White. Wisconsin—Taylor for Cummings, Hayes for Kreuse.

The Wabadas will leave St. Louis at 8:30 a. m. and will stop at Litchfield to go to church, most of the St. Louis boys being devout Catholics. From Litchfield they will go to Hillsboro over the McKinley line.

Each team has won a game from the other. Today's contest will be the vital one. "Red" Roche will umpire. Play will be called at 2:30 p. m.

Western M. A. Wins in Gallop.

ALTON, Ill., Oct. 31.—Western Military Academy defeated East St. Louis High, 63 to 12. After the first two minutes it was evident that East St. Louis could not gain against the strong Western team. They used nothing but forward passes and kicks the entire game, securing two touchdowns on passes. Western played great football, Barber at half and Kinnear at full were especially good in line plunging.

Yale X-Country Team Beats Tigers.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 31.—Yale won the cross-country run with Princeton today, over the six-mile course, which has been approved for the intercollegiate run on Nov. 21, scoring 24 points to Princeton's 32. Morrison of Princeton was the first man home, beating out Overton of Yale by 100 yards. His time was 35m. 29 2-5s., while Overton's time was 35m. 46s.

Indiana Star Scores 5 Touchdowns.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 31.—Indiana had little trouble today in defeating Miami, 48 to 3. The game was featured by the wonderful open field running of Whitaker, who scored five touchdowns before leaving the game.

EIGHT-CYLINDER CAR BRINGS OUT CURIOUS THRONG

Much-Talked-Of Cadillac With V-Type Motor Performed Novel Stunts for St. Louis Newspaper Men.

The curiosity of the public is to be appeased, for it now has an apparently much wanted opportunity to see the new eight-cylinder Cadillac car. It is in St. Louis and is being shown at the new home of the Cadillac Automobile Co., 3908-18 Olive street.

The new car arrived Friday and hundreds of people saw it Friday afternoon. A party of newspaper men was taken for a drive in the new car and its paces were shown to them under most trying conditions. The eight-cylinder motor took the car up Art Hill in Forest Park at a speed of three miles an hour in high gear, several of the passengers walking beside it. It then went up to 55 miles an hour from the start in less than 100 feet. Incidentally, the whole party came near being arrested for speeding. Those who rode in the car said it went as "smoothly as a sigh," a somewhat novel but expressive simile.

Saturday fully a thousand people went to the salesrooms of the Cadillac company to see the car and Manager I. G. McNeice and his sales and office force were kept busy answering questions and telling the points of the new motor.

Sunday the car will be shown all day, and it will be until the middle of the week, then demonstrations will begin. It is reported that 30 of the new cars have been sold on description to St. Louis people.

Remarkable occurrences are being reported from the cities which are receiving their first allotment of the new eight-cylinder Cadillac cars.

These reports agree in one conclusion, to wit: That never since the advent of the first motor car has there been such an outpouring of people to inspect an automobile.

NEW YORK HAS MONSTER AUTOMOBILE PARADE

Here is a description of an automobile parade in New York City the night of October 28, which indicates what could be done in St. Louis when a demonstration for automobile rights is needed:

"It was a large and patient crowd that stationed itself along the route of march of the automobile parade last night to review the 3000 or more motor cars and 1000 motorcycles in the fast-moving procession. In spite of the carefully arranged program outlined by the parade committee, the long string of cars was frequently interrupted in its continuity by periods of waits, which left the impression with the onlookers that it was an event without beginning or end. But the spirit in the air was that of a gala night in celebration of New York's tercentenary trade anniversary.

"The automobiles formed in line in Harlem, where the participants in the procession awaited the arrival of Gov. Glynn, Mayor Mitchel, and numerous state and city officials. On their arrival, led by a division of motorcycle policemen, the parade proceeded at a rather fast rate of speed down Broadway to Columbus circle, thence east to Fifth avenue and Forty-second street, where the official reviewing stand was located. The first section of the parade, which included Gov. Glynn, his military staff, and other officials, moved so fast that when it arrived at the reviewing stand the rest of the parade was at least three miles behind.

"It was a record parade of the kind in New York, however, the total number of cars in line being larger than ever assembled on any similar occasion. The brilliancy of the illumination of thousands of electric lights up and down the avenues and cross streets, together with the decorations of the buildings and the grotesque decorations of the numerous cars in the procession, made the event a success. Cash prizes amounting to $6000 were awarded to various types and classes of cars in the procession. A section composed of at least 1000 motorcycles, many of them decorated, also afforded an interesting spectacle. Following the parade, a reception which Gov. Glynn attended was given at the Automobile Club of America, in West Fifty-eighth street."

ST. LOUISAN'S INVENTION PREVENTS WHEEL SKID

Harry Miller, a St. Louis mechanic, has invented a "non-skidder," which is intended to prevent the possibility of accident to a car or its occupants by making it impossible for it to slide off the road.

The non-skid attachment consists of two shoes attached to the rear of the car, between the two rear wheels, which are carried safe out of the way until needed. When the car begins to skid the driver touches a button, or if he forgets to do so, the lady in the rear seat can touch one in front of her, and the shoes drop instantly to the surface of the road and the car stops. The shoes are about 18 inches long and three inches wide, made of a very hard metal with a corrugated under surface, and they are firmly set so that they will stop the skid of a car in two or three feet.

The shoes are controlled from a compressed air tank and this tank also supplies air for filling tires and can also be used to turn over the motor, thus becoming a self-starter.

The non-skid acts instantly on 8 to 10 pounds air pressure in dropping and is taken up when the air is released by springs acting automatically. Associated with Miller in the ownership of the patent are C. E. St. Clair and Joseph Graham.

KING EIGHT CYLINDER TO BE READY DEC. 30

An eight-cylinder car for less than $1500 is the surprise sprung on the motor-buying public by the King Motor Car Co of Detroit.

Since 1908 Europe has been selling eight-cylinder cars at prices ranging from $5000 up to $12,000. These cars are remarkably economical, giving from 18 to 20 miles per gallon of gasoline. Recently an American car of this type was announced at a price close to $2000. The King company brings out the first popular-priced American adaptation of the European eight.

The wonderful "eight-cylinder" flexibility, freedom from vibration, longevity, power, economy and luxury that has hiterto been beyond the reach of the average motor car purchaser, is now offered at a price only slightly over that of the King company's four. The new eight has a pure European stream-line body and is built on a chassis of 113-inch wheel base, which length has proved itself the most convenient size for general use. The Ward Leonard electric starting and generating system is included in the price and an engine-power tire pump is part of the regular equipment.

Through the Heinrich Automobile Co. of St. Louis, the King Motor Car Co. is prepared to guarantee deliveries on this new model after Dec. 30. The four-cylinder model will, of course, be continued, as its popularity has steadily increased since its successful announcement last spring.

WHITE HAS NEW LINE AND NEW MANAGER

The St. Louis branch house of the White Motor Co. has a new manager in Charles R. Porter, who succeeds H. M. Rosenberg. Rosenberg has gone to Chicago.

Porter has had wide automobile experience and has specialized on trucks for the past two years. His latest connection was in handling the Garford line, prior to which he was with the A. O. Smith Co. of Milwaukee.

Concurrently with the announcement of its new manager, the White Co. has shipped to St. Louis models of its new lines of White pleasure cars, which are pronounced the handsomest ever turned out by that company.

The new White line consists of two four-cylinder models of 30 and 45 horsepower, respectively, and one six of 60 horsepower. The latter is to be sold on a "made-to-order" basis only. The line includes a great variety of bodies. Besides the usual touring and roadster styles, there are semi-touring, sedan, town car, landaulet-limousine and limousine types. A number of minor changes, intended to improve the appearance of the White line, have been made.

SAFETY LIES IN BRAKES

"When it is fully realized that the entire safety of the occupants of an automobile may depend upon the brakes in critical situations, too much importance cannot be attached to the construction of the braking system," declares L. E. Newell of the Newell Motor Car Co.

"Without adequate surface at the rear drums, full braking cannot be realized. The Haynes designers have been liberal in providing an unusually large area on the Haynes Light Six car, which has a total braking surface of 308 square inches. In addition, both the emergency and service braking surfaces are inside the drums on the rear wheels, where the brake lining is thoroughly protected from all mud and dust. This feature of protection eliminates the wear on the lining that would arise from the grinding action arising when exposed on the outside of the drum, and a far greater reliability may be placed in securing the full effect of the brakes."

UNCLE SAM GOES INTO PRODUCE BUSINESS

With five new Overland delivery cars at his disposal, the postmaster of Cleveland, O., has announced his intention of putting into effect a plan which will be a decided innovation for Uncle Sam's postal department.

The purpose is to make the parcel post an agency for greater service. All farmers living in the vicinity of Cleveland who have butter, eggs and general produce for sale have been invited to forward their names and addresses to the postoffice. These names will be printed free by the Government and the list will be displayed in the Federal building and substations throughout the city and, in addition, will be distributed direct to Clevelanders by mail carriers.

The prospective consumers will communicate with the producers regarding prices, orders will be mailed and goods received within a day or two. Uncle Sam will make the collections when his Overlands make the deliveries.

The cars will not only deliver parcels, but also will be used to bring outgoing parcels to the postoffice from stations in different sections of the city.

ARCHITECTS TO PLAN HIGHWAY BEAUTY

BOSTON, Oct. 31.—President Sturgis of the American Institute of Architects has appointed a committee composed of Elmer C. Jensen, Chicago; Wilbur T. Mills, Columbus, and Benjamin Hubbell, Cleveland, it was announced here today, to act in an advisory capacity to the Lincoln Highway Association, which plans to build a great national highway from coast to coast. The purpose, it was declared, was to secure "uniformly intelligent architectural treatment of all the bridges, markers, stations and monuments which are to define the course of the great thoroughfare."

Sub-committees from the various local chapters of the institute also will be named to look after the artistic features of the road in the territory.

COOPER TOOK A RECORD

Earl Cooper has been enthroned high in the esteem of Fresno race fans since Oct. 3.

When the Frisco Agricultural Association announced that Cooper would drive in their track meet on October 3, motorists gathered from miles around to have a look at this daring driver in action.

The one-mile dirt track did not offer ideal conditions for speedy driving, but as his car flew around the turns, throwing sand into the faces of onlookers, the air was rent with shouts of admiration for his perfect control.

Cooper, in his Stutz, won the 50-mile event in 47 minutes 2-5 seconds without a stop, breaking the track record.

Cooper was the only contestant to finish with a perfect score on tires, his Firestones, the only ones in the race, causing him no trouble whatever.

SEATS MADE GOOD BED

With its many new features, the 1915 Maxwell touring car has won its way into the hearts of thousands of American automobilists, not only because of its beauty and mechanical perfection, but because of the many uses to which it can be put.

Several farmers, owners of Maxwell touring cars, have converted their cars into temporary stationary engines and have cut their ensilage, sawed wood, even pumped water for their stock, by this means.

But the latest feature of the new Maxwell was discovered by some Seattle (Wash.) boys, who drove their car on a fishing trip. They found that the front seat could be entirely removed by taking out the four adjustable bolts and that by moving the back of the seat and arranging the cushions, a comfortable sleeping place could be had. The original idea of the adjustable front seat was to provide for the convenience and comfort of drivers of all heights, but tourists will welcome its possibilities as sleeping quarters as much as the original idea.

TIRE MEN ATTEND BIG CONVENTION AT FACTORY

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 29, 30 and 31, the city of Akron was the property of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. Goodyear salesmen, branch and district managers captured the city, the occasion being the celebration of the conclusion of a highly successful year and a planning of the company's sales campaign for 1915. The Goodyear men arrived in three special trains Thursday morning and were met by a reception committee and band and escorted to their hotel, where, after they had been assigned, they formed for a big parade across the city to the Goodyear plant. The parade contained many novelties. The Californians, for instance, brought with them a live bear, the State emblem. The Chicago District men were made up as minstrels. The men from the South were in costumes suitable to their climate.

After the 500 visitors had been received at the factory the business of the convention began, with trips through the factory so that the visitors might become more familiar with the actual processes by which Goodyear products are made. Thursday evening there was a stag theater party at the Colonial Theater, the entire house having been bought out for the occasion. There were conferences on Friday and Saturday and on Friday evening the crowning feature of the occasion was a banquet to all of the territorial men and managers in the lunch room of the company's general office building. There were inspirational addresses by President F. A. Seiberling, Vice-President C. W. Seiberling, Assistant Treasurer W. E. Palmer, H. S. Quine, Manager of Salesmen W. D. Shilts and C. C. Hoppins of Lord & Thomas, and C. H. Carlisle, manager of the Goodyear's Canadian company. Assistant Secretary A. F. Osterloh was toastmaster.

It was the largest sales convention ever held by an Akron company. Three special trains brought the men to Akron and all departed Saturday night and Sunday full of enthusiasm for the making of 1915 the biggest year in tire history. F. H. Casebeer, St. Louis manager, and several others of the St. Louis force were at the convention.

STYLE IS NECESSARY IN MOTOR CAR DESIGN

Style in motor cars is now a requisite that must be included by every manufacturer. Mechanical correctness is taken as a matter of fact, but the efforts for increased beauty are never ended. "If automobiles were merely a means of transportation and nothing more," stated Geo. C. Brinkman, local National distributor, "then all cars would be alike because the buying public would be interested in mechanical performance only. However, in addition to being the most advanced method of transportation, motor cars are a style carriage, and as such, are a source of satisfaction to their owners. It's a well-known fact that many owners of cars take pride in the beauty of their car to a much greater extent than they do in clothes, or any commodity in which style plays a part. Owners are, to a degree, reflected by their car, and that is why the untiring efforts of automobile builders to produce symmetry, graceful lines and refined appearance.

"One point always in view in building National cars is that they will possess certain distinctive features and yet not embody anything that could be considered 'freakish.'

"One characteristic of the National is the distinctive outline of the radiator and the outline of the National shield has heralded the approach of all National cars for the past seven years. The long, low, racy appearance of National cars always attracts attention and the low center of gravity permits National speed with safety."

FAST HORSES VS. FORDS

A gentleman of the rich agricultural section of West Virginia, J. A. Coffield, of Harrisville, makes this interesting and attractive proposition to the Ford Motor Co.:

"I have eight head of horses from 3 to 8 years old; will sell or trade. One pair of saddle and driving horses, 6 years old, bred by a Kentucky horse; will sell or trade for a Ford car."

Factory records, too, show an interesting state of affairs in Mr. Coffield's neighborhood. It is not only difficult there to buy a new Ford, but also a secondhand Ford. There is a country-wide scarcity of secondhand Fords. The depreciation in a Ford is extraordinarily light. This is due to "Ford service"—everywhere.

1915 MAXWELL IS A BIG SENSATION

At the opening of every automobile season there is great speculation among prospective buyers, as well as old owners, as to which cars will have the most improvements, and which will be the best bargains. The public is critical to the extreme. The American automobile manufacturer must place a perfect car on the market if he would be successful in its sales.

Teh first year the Maxwell Motor Co., now two years old, manufactured and sold in the neighborhood of 20,000 cars. For the coming season of 1915 this same company plans the manufacture of 60,000 cars for their customers.

Last year the Maxwell Motor Co. manufactured several different body designs. There were three different chassis with engines of different horsepower. With the advent of the 1915 season and the increased demand for the smaller and medium-priced car, the Maxwell company has limited its production to one chassis and four body designs. The engine is four cylinder and is rated at 25 horsepower, although it will develop nearer thirty. The same chassis will carry either a touring car, roadster, cabriolet or town car.

Some of its many new features are: Streamline body, adjustable front seat, Simms high-tension magneto, three-quarter elliptic rear springs, spring tension fan, Kingston carburetor, clear vision windshield, gasoline tank located under dash cowl, Crown fenders with all rivets concealed, double sheel radiator, equipped with shock absorbing device and thermo syphon cooling system. The car is equipped with two gas headlights 9½ inches in diameter and prest-o-lite tanks, oil side and tail lights, electric horn, mohair top with envelope, speedometer, spare tire carrier, pump, jack, special wrenches and tools. Complete, the Maxwell five-passenger touring car sells for $695, f. o. b factory.

Because of the growing demand for electrical equipment on cars, the Maxwell company will equip any of its cars with Gray & Davis electric starting and lighting system for $55 extra.

OWNERS PICKED SLOGAN

Motor car slogans came into existence with the first automobile placed on the market and have been coined pretty frequently since. "No Hill Too Steep, No Sand Too Deep," "The Choice of Men Who Know," "Ask the Man Who Owns One," "Car With a Conscience," "Car of the American Family," are all bywords that convey the name of some particular car to most of us.

The latest acquisition to the list of slogans is that put forth by the Chandler Motor Car Co. of Cleveland: "The Car With the Marvelous Motor." During the coming year all efforts of Chandler salesmen and advertising men will be devoted to placing the newest slogan in as many different quarters of the country as possible.

"Chandler owners possess the unique distinction of being responsible for the selection of the new slogan," says J. D. Perry Lewis, local agent for the Chandler. "Our factory sales department first called attention to the great number of letters received from Chandler owners referring to the 'marvelous motor' in their cars. These letters came from widely separated sections of the country and to anyone reading over twenty or thirty of them, the recurrence of the same phrase seemed more than a coincidence.

SAXON HAS DELIVERY CAR

The Saxon Motor Co. has entered the light delivery field with the lowest priced delivery car of standard design ever produced. Of 400 pounds' carrying capacity (in addition to the driver's eight), the Saxon delivery car is priced at $395.

This new delivery car has such features of standard design as a powerful four-cylinder motor, sliding gear transmission, dry plate clutch, shaft drive and standard tread. The top of the body is fitted with storm curtains, which may be lowered so as to protect the load in inclement weather. The loading platform is low, making it convenient for the driver to handle goods.

WILL SELL MAXWELL

Appreciating the big demand for a low-priced car with electric starter and complete electric equipment, the Johnson Automobile Co. has closed a deal for the sale of the Maxwell line in St. Louis and St. Louis County, in addition to the Empire and Ford, which they have handled for some time. A complete stock of Maxwell parts will be put in at once to enable them to give good service to all Maxwell owners in this vicinity.

AUTO NEWS AND GOSSIP

L. E. Allmon, manager of the Missouri Auto Specialty Co., spent several days of last week visiting dealers in automobile supplies and accessories in nearby Illinois districts.

Burglars who forced their way into the storage rooms of the Petty Tire & Rubber Co., at Nineteenth and Locust streets, recently, stole $500 worth of tubes, but carefully avoided taking any casings, indicating they knew that all casings bear serial numbers.

The Weber Motor Car Co. will in a few days move to its new home at 2217-19 Locust street, next to the Halsey building. The company will there be able to make a catchy display of Studebaker cars.

D. D. Brownback of the St. Louis Stearns Automobile Co. spent several days last week at the Stearns factory at Cleveland.

The Newell Motor Car Co., formerly the St. Louis Kissel-Kar Co., has moved into the sales and service room next to its former location, the new location being 308 North Twelfth street. The company now handles the Haynes line. James E. Newell is president and Leslie Newell vice-president.

The Phoenix Auto Supply Co., 3221 Locust street, has just closed a contract for the exclusive agency for St. Louis territory for the Gabriel Rebound Snubber, a widely known shock absorber, and will maintain a service and installation station.

The Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co., 2315 Locust street, is holding an exhibition of inclosed Hudson cars, inclusive of all of the new winter type bodies.

Several new Auburn agencies were closed by A. O. Heisel, president of the Grand Motor Car Co., last week.

Both J. C. Kardell and H. W. Kardell of the Kardell Motor Car Co. are still out in the territory closing agencies.

The Kelly-Springfield tire branch received an unusually large shipment of solid and pneumatic tires Thursday from the factory. Business is very good, hence this exceptional stock of tires was necessary.

UNUSED AXLE WAS BEST ADVERTISEMENT

An axle that has never been used, in fact, never built into a motor car, has proven to be a great advertisement of the cars for which it is built. The story is told by C. W. Payne, Paige distributor at Des Moines, Io.

"There's a rear axle tucked away in my stockroom that has closed more sales of Paige cars and has captured the 'goats' of more competitors than anything I know of," said Payne.

"Several years ago, when I secured the distribution of Paige cars, I bought a supply of parts from the factory, among which was this new rear axle. Since handling the Paige line, I have sold nearly 1000 cars in my territory, but this original axle is still decorating my stockroom, there never having been an axle replacement in any of the cars I have sold or in the cars that were placed in this section before I took over the Paige line, some of which are now at least four years old."

Whenever a prospective purchaser starts an argument on rear axle construction, Mr. Payne leads him gently but firmly into his stockroom and points out to him this axle, giving its history, and has yet to lose a sale to anyone who views this exhibit and appreciates the worth of a dependable rear axle.

CAR WINDOW DISPLAY HELPED SELL SEVEN

The value of display, either in dress, decoration, building, show window or advertising copy, is much discussed. The Lewis Automobile Co. has just finished its remodeling of its building on Washington at Walton avenue, and J. D. Perry Lewis of that company says he is firmly convinced that the attractive display made in the remodeled show windows had much to do with the sale last week of seven automobiles. Four of these were Stevens-Duryeas and three Chandler sixes. The Lewis salesrooms, both as to exterior and inside fittings, compare favorably with those of any automobile concern in St. Louis.

AUTO THIEF GIVEN FOUR-YEAR SENTENCE

Judge Wilbur T. Jones, of the Circuit Court, last week, sentenced Wilbur Stokesbury to a term of four years in the penitentiary for sealing an automobile belonging to W. C. Culver.

Stokesbury has been implicated in the stealing of several cars, and was a member of the organized gang that has been operating in St. Louis for some time.

In November, 1913, he was sentenced to a year in the workhouse for automobile stealing but was paroled last June; within a month after he was out, he stole cars belonging to J. R. Matthews and W. C. Culver, and tires from Wm. Hartmann and G. A. Buder. He was arrested by Detective Sergeants McGauly and Helmholt, who were familiar with his record and who have done some fine work in catching automobile thieves.

Through the activity of the Automobile Club of St. Louis, most of the stolen cars have been recovered and a great many of the offenders have been convicted. Prosecuting Attorney Howard Sidener and his assistants, Thos. J. Stanton and Ray Weinbrenner have done splendid work in the vigorous prosecution of automobile thieves of all classes, including those who steal cars to sell them, or keep them, and those who steal cars for joy riding purposes. As a result of the work of Mr. Sidener and his assistants in the Court of Criminal Correction, almost one hundred per cent of convictions have been obtained, and this has greatly helped to discourage the practice. There are now fewer cars stolen and more are recovered in St. Louis than in any other large city.

Unfinished Free Bridge Has Cost St. Louis $927,159.50 in Interest and Special Elections

THE unfinished free bridge has cost the taxpayers of St. Louis in interest payments on the $3,500,000 bond issue, $712,159.50, for which to date they have had no return.

Each day that the bridge stands idle the city pays $383.50 in interest on the outstanding bonds.

In addition to this unprofitable outlay, the city has conducted three elections and is about to conduct its fourth election, at a total cost of approximately $215,000. One bond issue was submitted at a general election, which added only $5000 to the cost of the election, and the other three submissions were at special elections which cost about $70,000 each.

The total cost in interest and bond issue elections to date is $927,159.50, or one-third the amount of the bond issue that the public must now vote to complete the eastern approaches to the bridge.

The city has set aside, or is about to, $920,833 in a sinking fund with which in 20 years it will have retired the original bridge bond issue of $3,500,000. This fund draws only 2 per cent interest in city depositories. It is set aside quarterly, at a rate of one-twentieth of the $3,500,000 bond issue, or $175,000 each year. The meager interest earning on these deposits have not been enough in five years to lessen substantially the expense of paying interest on outstanding bonds.

BRIDGE BONDS WILL WIN BY 5 TO 1, FORECAST

Prediction of Sweeping Victory Based on Citizens' Canvass of 26 Wards.

The useless daily outlay of $383.50 in interest on the $3,500,000 bonds with which the uncompleted free bridge was built, by a 5-to-1 vote will end next Friday, when the $2,750,000 bond issue election is held, according to the completed canvass of the Citizens' Free Bridge Committee.

The exact figures of the canvass had not been completely compiled by last night, although all but a few precincts in two wards have been finally reported. The ratio of 5 to 1 is indicated by the 26 wards that have been fully tabulated, while only a two-thirds vote is necessary to carry the bonds.

The repeal of the Southern Traction franchise and the agreement of Mayor Kiel's administration to employ union labor exclusively on the unfinished approaches to the bridge have wrought a change of sentiment with thousands who opposed a bond issue at three previous elections.

Charles J. Lammert, president of the Building Trades Council, said yesterday that the bond issue will receive almost the entire vote of the 12,000 members of that organization.

Traction Repeal Wrought Change.

"I have never seen the members of the council so enthusiastic over any proposition," said Lammert. "The bonds have not only been indorsed by the council as a whole, but by every local that has met in the last two weeks.

"The change of sentiment on the part of the members of the Building Trades Council was brought about by the repeal of the Southern Traction franchise and the assurances of Mayor Kiel and other city officials that the bridge will be completed by union labor.

"If the voters of St. Louis decree that the bridge be completed, there is no body of men in St. Louis who will profit by that decision more than the 12,000 members of the Building Trades Council, as these men—many of whom are out of employment—will be given the preference when the work begins. The members of the Council realize this, and that is why they are so enthusiastically in favor of the bonds.

"The leaders of the council have been diligent in advising the members to vote 'Yes,' and have succeeded in convincing them, almost to a man, that it will be greatly to their advantage to do so."

Mayor Proclaims Half Holiday.

Mayor Kiel yesterday issued a proclamation declaring a half holiday Friday, so that all men may spend the afternoon working to get out a heavy vote on the bridge bond issue.

The city hall will close at noon and about 3500 city employes will be released from duties for the work.

In his proclamation Mayor Kiel urges all factories and business establishments to declare a half holiday for the same purpose. The proclamation, in part, follows:

> For a number of years the good name of St. Louis has suffered attacks on account of the fact that the Municipal Bridge has remained uncompleted. With the determination to wipe out this disgrace, the people demanded through initiative petitions that another bridge bond issue be submitted at a special election. The outcome of this election is so vital to the welfare of the city that I hope all firms will observe a half holiday that a full vote may be recorded and a substantial majority returned for the bond issue.

Many firms already have notified the Citizen's Bridge Committee that they will give employes a half holiday. The Laclede Gas Light Co. will close its plant all day, keeping open the general offices only during the morning.

ESCAPED WORKHOUSE MEN ARE CONVICTED

Two Found Guilty of Stealing Cash and Diamond From Saloon Keeper.

Cornelius Murphy and Harry Casey, who escaped from the St. Louis Workhouse April 23 and five days later robbed the saloon of Michael Meehan, at Eighteenth street and St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis, were found guilty of burglary and larceny last night by a jury in Judge Flannigan's division of the City Court.

It was charged they robbed Meehan at the point of a revolver of $104 in cash and a diamond stud. They will be sentenced Monday.

Murphy's mother, known as Capt. Mary Murphy, is the head of the East St. Louis branch of the Volunteers of America, a charitable organization.

Children Have Halloween Party at Famous-Barr Tea Room.

Several hundred St. Louis children were entertained yesterday as they never were entertained before in the tea room of the Famous-Barr department store. The occasion was a Halloween party, given for the little folk of the city by the firm. The tea room was so decorated with fancy and weird "properties" that it resembled the greenroom of a theater or might have been taken for a reproduction of a child's dream after a Christmas dinner. There were black cats, witches, lanterns, pumpkins and all sorts of odd things that make children's eyes open to their full extent. There was a carefully prepared entertainment for the children in which several talented little ones took part. A matinee luncheon was served and all of the visitors received a Halloween souvenir of a box of candy in the shape of a bale of cotton.

SCHMOLL ASKED TO DENY PART OF ODEON SPEECH

Election Board Head Says He Never Told Committeeman of Registered "Dead Men."

Chairman Drabelle of the Election Board wrote a letter yesterday to Chairman Schmoll of the Republican City Committee, demanding that Schmoll deny remarks attributed to him in a speech Friday night at the Odeon by a morning newspaper, relating to an alleged conversation with Drabelle which, the latter says, never occurred.

Schmoll was quoted as having said Drabelle told him recently there were "dead men" on the registration books and that others were registered at two places, but that it did not matter unless the men so registered attempted to vote twice, or someone attempted to vote for a "dead man."

Drabelle said he had met Schmoll only once and that was on Sept. 24, at a meeting of the board attended by all four members. Schmoll asked for a canvass of certain districts, and no conversation about "dead men" or men being registered twice occurred, Drabello says. Commissioners May and Wright confirmed this statement last night.

"BEST MAN" AT WEDDING IS CHIEF DIVORCE WITNESS

Sidney T. Bixby Testifies in Suit in Which Mrs. H. A. Blackwell Wins Decree.

TELLS OF A QUARREL

Asserts He Was Forced to Eject Defendant When Couple Were Guests at His Home.

Sidney T. Bixby, son of W. K. Bixby, who was best man at the wedding of Miss Mildred C. Stribling to Harry Arthur Blackwell three years ago, was chief witness for Mrs. Blackwell yesterday in proceedings which resulted in her obtaining a divorce by default. Mrs. Blackwell is a daughter of William C. Stribling of the St. Regis Apartments and a step-sister of Lady Peek, formerly Miss Edwine Thornburgh. Blackwell is vice-president of the Blackwell-Wielandy Book and Stationery Co.

As Bixby began his testimony in a low tone, with some appearance of reluctance, Circuit Judge Withrow directed him to speak more distinctly. He replied:

"Judge, I am in a peculiar position. I am a friend of both parties in this suit. I was best man for Blackwell at the wedding."

"And, now," said Judge Withrow, "you are best man for Mrs. Blackwell."

'Not at all,' Bixby responded rather heatedly. "I am simply testifying to the facts. I am only a witness.'

Says He Ejected Blackwell.

Bixby related that on one occasion, at his home, Blackwell treated his wife so roughly that he had to be ejected from the house. He said that Blackwell used improper language to Mrs. Blackwell, and was asked by the Court to repeat it.

"Well," answered Bixby, "I'm not much of a 'cusser,' but I'll curse if you want me to."

"Was it profanity?" Judge Withrow asked, and on the witness answering that it was, did not press the inquiry further. Bixby said he had heard Blackwell accuse his wife of going with other men.

Mrs. Blackwell testified her husband drank excessively and nagged her in public places and at the homes of their friends. As one instance, she related that he became intoxicated at the wedding of Miss Josephine Little to Louis H. Ingraham in 1912 and upbraided her before the guests. Last March, she continued, he shook her in the presence of other members at one of the country clubs, so that she was forced to leave the club and go home. In a cafe, before her friends, she said, he accused her of associating with other men.

"Was that true?" Judge Withrow asked.

"It was not," she replied.

Testifies to Good Character.

George D. Markham, an uncle of Mrs. Blackwell, testified to her good character. Mrs. Blackwell said she asked for no alimony because she has independent means Judge Withrow decreed, however, that she accept $1 gross alimony and that Blackwell should pay $40 a month for the support of their son, 2½ years old.

Blackwell was not in court, but was represented by an attorney. The Blackwells were married April 22, 1911, and separated April 15, 1914. They formerly lived at 470 Lake avenue. Sidney Bixby lives at his father's mansion at Lindell boulevard and King's highway.

SAYS HUSBAND OFFERED HER $10,000 FOR DIVORCE

Mrs. Walter E. Baack, in Suit, Alleges Purpose Was to Avoid Publicity.

Mrs. Ethel A. Baack, of 3528 Olive street, in her petition yesterday to divorce Walter E. Baack, president of the Baack-Dyer-Brecht Millinery Co., 1123 Washington avenue, alleged her husband offered her a check for $10,000 on Nov. 23, last, with the request that she go to Kansas City and get a divorce, so as to avoid publicity which he thought would result if the decree was obtained in St Louis.

Baack is charged in the petition with having called his wife a parasite, with having bought clothes for other women, having a violent temper and trying to persuade his wife to go out with other men.

On July 3, the day of their separation, Mrs. Baack states, her husband went to New York City. She accompanied him to Union Station on a street car. Baack disliked his wife's presence on the car and created a scene. She alleges the couple were married in 1907. Both declined to discuss the suit.

Mrs. Baack is living with her mother, Mrs. Dr. Mae E. Harris. Baack resides at the Belcher Hotel.

PAROLE LAW ATTACKED

Chicago Judge and Grand Jury View it as Factor for Crime.

CHICAGO, Oct. [illegible].—The Illinois parole law, as a factor in increasing crime in Chicago, was attacked from two sources today—the October grand jury, in its final report, and Judge Marcus Kavanaugh, a veteran of the bench, in an address to the Irish Fellowship Club.

Judge Kavanaugh declared crime flourished in Chicago because of all the cities in the world, it has the weakest protection against lawlessness. Under the provisions of the parole law, the Judge said, the prison becomes a mere temporary lodging for criminals who are paroled again and again.

The grand jury report set forth that criminals have been paroled as many as six times.

Society Woman Who Wins Divorce in Unopposed Suit

MRS. MILDRED STRIBLING BLACKWELL

BUSINESS MAN ENDS LIFE IN OFFICE CHAIR

Walter Piehl, 23 years old, manager of the St. Louis branch of the Gans-Stevens Mercantile Co. of Chicago, jobbers of bankrupt stocks, shot himself through the head while alone in his office at the front of the company's store at 1615 Washington avenue, yesterday afternoon.

The bullet passed out through the plateglass window about eight feet above the sidewalk, but so far as known the sound was not heard by any of the hundreds of persons passing along Washington avenue at the time.

John Neuman of 1608 Hogan street, the firm's shipping clerk, found Piehl about 4 o'clock, when he returned to the store, as he had been requested to do by Piehl, to get the key so he could open up Monday morning. Piehl was still in his office chair, a revolver was on the floor near by and a pool of blood indicated considerable time had elapsed since the shooting. Piehl was still breathing. He was rushed in an ambulance to the city hospital, where he died shortly after.

Notes left by Piehl on his desk indicated his act was premeditated. Thomas E. Bailey, proprietor of the Washington Inn, at 1643 Washington avenue, where Piehl was a guest, said Piehl exhibited a revolver in the dining room at noon, explaining he had been recalled to Chicago and would be sent to one of the company's branches in Texas, where he might need the pistol. Piehl said he bought the revolver at a pawnshop. Friday he gave a costly umbrella to a servant and paid a board bill for another boarder.

The letter on Piehl's desk was addressed to Neuman, requesting the latter to notify his mother, Mrs. H. P. Jensen of 1903 Cuyler street, Chicago, and to "send his body to Chicago, C. O. D." The note gave his name and age, but did not disclose a motive for ending his life. Another note was addressed to Miss A. F. Jacobs, 1614 East Forty-sixth street, Chicago.

A dispatch from Chicago said a shortage in his accounts and a broken engagement are believed to have been responsible. Two weeks ago Mrs. Jensen received a letter from her son in which Piehl said he had lost $75 of the firm's money while on the way to the bank. He said he did not know what he would do, but that the firm probably would have to wait until he could make it up.

Mrs. Jensen said he was engaged to be married to a young woman, but that the engagement was broken recently. She refused to give the name of the young woman or to tell the cause of the broken engagement. She said he had been in St. Louis two months.

VOTERS' LEAGUE ISSUES REPORT ON CANDIDATES

Results of Investigation Are Published and Recommendations Made on Basis of Qualifications and Records of the Men Regardless of Parties.

HOLTCAMP, KIMMEL MARKED FOR DEFEAT

Voters Are Advised to Choose Men for Office on Their Fitness—Races for Congress and Senate Not Discussed.

The Municipal Voters League, after a thorough investigation of the records of the candidates of the Democratic, Republican and Progressive parties, yesterday published its report and recommendations. The candidates were considered from the standpoint of fitness only for the offices they are seeking. The membership of the league is comprised of adherents of all parties, and its objective is to aid the voters to select honest and capable men for public officials.

The league recommends the defeat of Charles W. Holtcamp for Probate Judge, and advises voters to support Edward A. Feehan, his Democratic opponent. The league's opposition to Holtcamp is based upon his allowances of big fees from estates under his control to favored attorneys, which practice the Post-Dispatch has exposed.

It strongly recommends the defeat of Karl Kimmel, Republican, for Circuit Judge, declaring that in neither ability, character nor conduct in office as Police Judge, is he fitted for the Circuit bench.

Candidates for Judge Commended.

The three candidates recommended for Circuit Judge are: Glendy B. Arnold, Democrat, and J. Hugo Grimm and George H. Shields, Republicans. The league does not recommend Hiram N. Moore, Democrat, but finds that he is qualified for the office. It does not recommend John J. O'Brien, Democrat, holding that he is not well qualified.

While not making a positive declaration on the office of Recorder of Deeds, the league criticises the political activities of Charles F. Joy, Republican, and gives credit to his chief deputy for the efficient conduct of the office.

Voters are urged to defeat Calvin N. Miller, Republican candidate for Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction, and they are asked to elect Thomas A. Dwyer, Democrat, who was found to be well qualified.

The defeat of John J. Manton, Democratic candidate for Circuit Clerk, is recommended. Charles R. Graves, Republican candidate, is commended.

Howard Sidener, Republican candidate for re-election as Prosecuting Attorney, is recommended. The league says that Walter A. Kelly, the blind lawyer, who is the Democratic candidate, is not well qualified and should be defeated.

Two Republicans Favored.

Without criticising their Democratic opponents, the league recommends the election of Ferdinand I. Knittel for Clerk of the Court of Criminal Correction, and Louis Alt for License Collector. Both the Democratic and Republican candidates for Clerk of the Circuit Court for Criminal Causes are recommended. Henry C. Echterhoff is the Republican candidate, and Caspar J. Wolf the Democratic candidate.

The records of Charles W. Holtcamp for Probate Judge; Karl Kimmel for Circuit Judge and Charles F. Joy for Recorder of Deeds have been published in the Post-Dispatch, as well as the records of all the other candidates. The report of the league in full was published in the Post-Dispatch yesterday.

Of Judge Holtcamp the league said that he had made an excellent record in the dispatch of the business and general conduct of the office, but added:

> "More recently he has incurred severe criticism by reason of the fact that in making appointments for lucrative and important positions in connection with the administration of estates he has to a conspicuous extent persisted in making such appointments among a small group of men and has in some instances approved very liberal allowances for services which have been criticised as being out of proportion to the work performed, service rendered, and to the size of the estate involved."

Miller's Acts Reviewed.

Of Judge Miller of the Court of Criminal Correction, the League reports:

> "In view of the great variety of cases that come before this court, including those for original trial, those on appeal from the police courts, those for preliminary hearing for the grand jury, there is no court in our whole system that more vitally touches the entire community and particularly our less experienced citizens. It is a matter of regret that during the past four years Judge Miller has not raised this court above the plane of political activities which so frequently center in this court. NOT RECOMMENDED."

The league made no recommendations for United States Senator, Congress and officials to be voted upon by the State at large. It investigated carefully the candidates for State Senate and Representative in the General Assembly, and made recommendations. It also investigated all the candidates for Constable and Justice of the Peace.

The recommendations for State Senator were: Thirteenth District—Adolph C. Wiget, Republican. Thirty-second District—Conway Elder, Republican, and Breckinridge Long, Democrat. Thirty-fourth District—Charles O. Fischer, Progressive.

Recommended for Legislature.

For the Legislature the league recommends: Fifth District—Philip W. Chaney and Claude O. Pearcy, Republicans, and Thomas J. O'Brien, Democrat.

Second District—Anthony J. Laux and Louis E. Treiseler, Republicans, and Michael J. Ratchford, Democrat.

Third District—Dr. Wilson H. Cotton, Progressive; August Gisler and Fred Weissmann, Republicans.

Fourth District—Frank O. Bittner and John C. Robertson, Republicans, and E. H. Hohengarten, Progressive. The defeat of John J. Moroney, Charles Rizzo and Martin Ward, Democrats, is strongly urged.

Fifth District—Barnard Frank, Republican, and John S. Shields, Democrat.

Sixth District—Richard M. Wray, Democrat, and Clarence H. King, Republican.

For Justice of the Peace, the league's recommendations are:

First District—Louis Spies, Republican.

Second District—Charles F. Jerabek and Henry Pfeffle, Republican, are both recommended as being qualified.

Third District—Richard M. Johnson, Republican, is strongly recommended, and the defeat of Edward Rice, Democrat, is as strongly urged.

Fourth District—Frank J. Costello, Democrat, and Frank M. Slater, Republican.

Fifth District—Roger E. Gorman, Democrat, and Thomas R. Hazard, Progressive. In this district Andrew Gazzolo, member of the Democratic combine in the House of Delegates, is a candidate. His defeat is urged.

Sixth District—C. F. Bauer, Republican. The league recommends the defeat of James P. Miles, Democrat.

Seventh District—F. W. Beckman, Republican.

Eighth District—George Grassmuck, Republican.

Ninth District—William D. Moore, Republican. The league urges the voters of this district to defeat Robert J. Carroll, Democrat, former Justice, and in former years closely identified with the Butler crowd in politics.

For constables the recommendations are:

First District—John Eyermann, Republican.

Second District—William Dutzi, Republican.

Third District—John W. Shine, Republican.

Fourth District—Anthony W. Powers, Democrat, and Henry L. Hall, Progressive. The defeat of Lawrence P. Daly, Democrat, is recommended, and also of Charles H. Turpin, negro Republican.

Fifth District—George P. Bone, Republican, and Thomas J. Owens, Democrat. The defeat of William T. Egan, Democrat, is specially recommended.

Sixth District—No recommendation.

Seventh District—Henry Landwehr, Republican.

Eighth District—Edward W. Klorer, Republican.

Ninth District—William C. Metz, Republican.

The candidates of the Progressive party were carefully investigated and their records printed in the full report of the league. Most of the candidates were found to be well qualified for the offices they are seeking, but were not recommended for the reason that it was not thought they had any chance of election.

The report was signed by the executive committee of the league, comprised of Frank P. Crunden, E. A. Hildenbrandt, Luther Ely Smith, William A. Block, Benjamin A. Wood, Fred B. Eiseman, Alexander Galt, Dr. Carl Barck, E. V. P. Schneiderhahn, Fred G. Zeibig, Flint Garrison and Paul J. Wielandy.

MAN WHO KILLED HIS FAMILY WITH DYNAMITE

Farmer Tells of Killing Wife and Four Children

ple that your wife and children were in the house?" he was asked.

"Yes, I told them all," he answered, "but none of them tried to save my family. They seemed afraid to."

"Did you make any attempt to save your wife and children?"

"Yes, I started to run upstairs, but they were burning and my hair was singed, so I gave up the attempt."

He was informed that fire marshals had found a blood-stained garment in the ruins of the house, and that it was suspected that he had killed his family before blowing up the building. He answered:

"They were all living when I set the fuse, and they were all in that one room. I stayed there at the house until 5 or 6 o'clock in the morning. The only thing I thought of when I did this was that I had been in hard luck ever since I was married, and we had a hard time to get along. I thought they would be better off in Heaven."

He was asked whether there was not another motive for the crime, and went on with a smile:

The Other Woman.

"I had been going to see a woman named Lucille, who was in a place run by a woman named Hattie, in Champaign. I had known Lucille since last July. I wanted her to go away with me, but she would not, because I was married. That is what caused me to kill my family, and on the following Tuesday I went to see Lucille and told her I was a free man, that I had been divorced. She said: 'Well, you get right out of this house; the cops are looking for you.' Then Hattie came in and she and Lucille threw me out of the house."

"Lucille's the chicken that got my goat," he laughed. "She sure had me going. I went crazy over her, and she'll be the cause of me losing my neck."

He said that he had never heard the woman's last name. He preferred her to his wife, he said, because she was better looking and more entertaining. She was 25 and his wife was 35. His wife, he said, thought of nothing but the children and her home, and was always drudging at the cook stove or washtub, or at her household work. They had never had a quarrel, he said, and the children were so well-behaved that he never once had had to slap any of them.

To the confession he added a statement that it was made of his own free will, without promise of immunity, and with the knowledge that it would be used as evidence against him. When it had been typed and he had read it, he said: "That's it, exactly," and signed it. "Now, my mind feels relieved," he said, and added: "I want to tell you fellows something funny." He then related the incident of his dream.

To reporters Stone stated that he remained at Tolono until Oct. 16, and that, although he was questioned by the police, no suspicion was attached to him. The community believed the house had been set on fire by the explosion of a kerosene lamp, and that he alone had been able to escape. He received much sympathy for his supposed bereavement. On Oct. 16 he came to St. Louis and enlisted under the assumed name of Joseph A. Talbort of Mattoon, Ill.

Residents of Town Aroused.

The woman in the case is stated by news dispatches from Champaign to be named Lucille Johnson or Thompson. The story of Stone's confession, when it became known in Champaign yesterday afternoon, caused such indignation that the woman was taken to Danville by a deputy sheriff for safe keeping.

Roberts and Sloan said that when she read in the newspapers of the death of her admirer's wife and children, she suspected he was guilty, and told a woman friend of his imploring her to run away with him, and of his visit when he told her he had been divorced. Her confidante told other friends, and the story spread until it reached the authorities. The woman made affidavit as to the facts in her possession, and informed the police of Stone's whereabouts, as he had written to her after reaching St. Louis.

Stone was present, he said, when his wife's body was recovered from the riuns. The house was destroyed, and her body fell into the basement. No trace of the children's bodies was found save a few charred bones. It is supposed they were blown to atoms. The dead children were: Violet, 5 years old; Wilbur, 4; Mariella, 3, and Vernice, 1½ years old.

The house belonged to Stone's father, T. N. Stone, 74 years old, who, with his wife, was away on a visit to a son in North Dakota and a daughter in Detroit. They arrived home on the morning of the tragedy.

Stone suggested that his crime might have been partly due to the fact that he was struck by lighting seven years ago. One effect of the stroke, he said, occurred last winter, when he wandered away from home in trance, from which he awoke to find himself in jail in Terre Haute, Ind. His only symptom of remorse was when he said to reporters:

"Right after I had touched off that fuse, I wished someone had been behind me and shot me through the head just before I did it."

PROPOSES TOO OFTEN, GETS SHOT FOR ARDOR

East St. Louis Bartender Embraces Woman in Her Saloon and Lands in Hospital.

Peter Antonovich, 37 years old, a bartender of 421 North Sixth street, East St. Louis, yesterday proposed once too aften to Miss Julia Stanks, 30 years old, who keeps a saloon at 500 Ohio avenue. She shot him in the right hip.

Miss Stanks told the police that for the last year Antonovich has wooed her persistently and had proposed marriage to her so many times she could not remember the number, but she recalled at least a dozen times that she had had him arrested for embarrassing her by proposing to her and trying to embrace her in public places.

About 5 p. m., she said, Androvich entered her saloon while she was tending bar and while several customers were in the place. He went behind the bar, she said, embraced her and asked her to be his wife. She pushed him back and when he again advanced she drew a revolver from under her apron and fired.

When she saw she had wounded him she went with him in the ambulance to St. Mary's Hospital and remained by his bedside until the police came for her. She was charged with assault with a deadly weapon and was released on $300 bond.

EDISON'S SUBMARINE DEVICE SUCCESSFUL

Storage Batteries to Eliminate Danger of Gas Suffocation Tested in Navy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Preliminary tests of storage batteries designed by Thomas A. Edison for use in submarine craft to eliminate danger of suffocation by gases generated by batteries now used have been entirely satisfactory, Navy Department officials announced tonight.

The tests, which are being made at the New York Navy Yard, will be concluded within a month. If final tests warrant, new submarines will be equipped with the Edison battery, and whenever an old craft is repaired, and its batteries removed, the new one will be substituted.

LEADING REALTY MEN SAY "BUILD CENTRAL PARKWAY"

Authorities on Land Values Declare That the Enhancement of Downtown Property Will More Than Offset Money Spent for the Construction of Gigantic Traffic Highway Through Heart of City.

EXPERTS DISCUSS PLAN FOR TAX ASSESSMENT

W. J. Holbrook, Who Once Opposed Project, Favors a Levy on the District That Will Be Most Benefitted by Improvement When Finally Completed.

Coincident with the passage of the bill authorizing the condemnation of the 21 blocks embraced in the strip to be occupied by the proposed Central Traffic Parkway, the city, it is predicted by real estate men, will show improvement.

Oposition to the parkway is confined principally to the owners of land in the probable benefit district, who dread additional tax assessments.

Under the new charter, unless by bond issue, the entire city cannot be assessed. But the commissioners appointed by the Circuit Court to fix the benefit district are given wide latitude.

With the idea of lessenng the burden of the cost of the project, a comprehensive benefit district is being advocated.

Jones for Graduate Assessment

The benefit district should extend from Chouteau to Franklin avenues or to Cass avenue, and from Fourth street to King's highway, according to James C. Jones, of the law firm of Jones, Hocker, Hawes & Angert. Jones gave figures showing how the cost could be equitably divided among the property-holders of the district. The ratio of the cost, according to his calculation, would be about 1 to 50, or about 2 per cent. His idea is to graduate the assessment according to the benefits to be derived, with the abutting property-holders paying 25 per cent.

As the district proposed by Jones would include both the business and residence sections, the cost would not work hardship on any of these property-holders.

William T. Matthews, a real estate authority, says the enhancement to the adjoining property will exceed that of the assessment, however large. He favors the parkway project as one of the biggest things planned for the advancement of the city.

Thomas Wright, vice president of the Third National Bank, believes the parkway project to be a commendable one, and also favors an equitable distribution of the cost. As its benefits will be universal, he believes the city as a whole should be assessed. Incidentally, he says the enhancement or Chestnut street will be greater than either on Olive or Pine street, notwithstanding the fact these thoroughfares will get the business from the north side of Market and the south side of Chestnut street, which will be absorbed by the parkway.

Holbrook Now Urges Parkway.

W. J. Holbrook declares the value of the proposed parkway as a factor in the city's upbuilding will be potent. At the outset, Holbrook discouraged the parkway plan, but he is now awakening to the possibilities incident to it. A wide and comprehensive benefit district is urged by Holbrook.

The Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Company, which has large holdings on Pine, Olive and Locust streets under the provision of the charter would have to contribute a substantial amount for the parkway.

"When the parkway is completed, the adjoining property-holders will be so delighted with it that they will wonder why they ever object to it," said Gerald B. O'Reilly, former president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange.

Heavy Traffic on Downtown Streets

O'Reilly owns property fronting the parkway which will be subject to the assessment. He believes this will be offset by the enhancement of values the improvement will bring.

The parkway, if constructed, would relieve the congestion of traffic on Locust, Chestnut and Pine streets, which has become a menace to pedestrians, according to Director of Streets and Sewers Talbert. A total of 6970 autos, trucks and other vehicles passed over Locust street in 10 hours Wednesday by actual count of Talbert's inspecters. The figures show an increase of 45 per cent over those of a year ago.

The total number of vehicles passing over Chestnut street was 5341, an increase of 18 per cent.

On the three streets, the total number of 13,131 vehicles passed within 12 hours.

The total number of licensed vehicles in St. Louis this year to date is 29,961. The traffic on Locust street alone, it is estimated, already has increased 73 per cent over a year ago.

Frank J. W. Musik favors the parkway, but thinks that the entire city should be assessed. He does not think that the abutting property holders should bear the burden of the cost when the enhancement incident to the project is problematical.

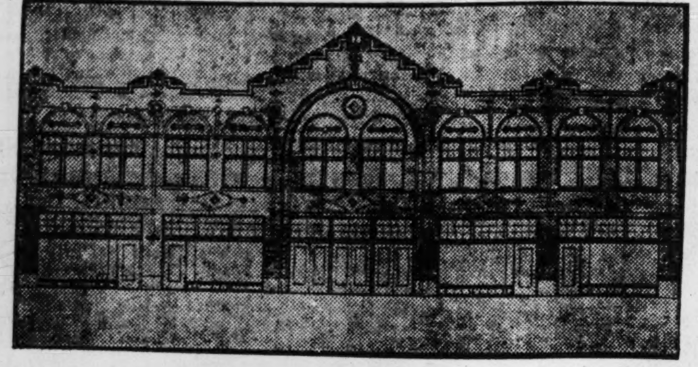
Theater and Business Block Proposed on Delmar Boulevard



PLANS and specifications are now being drawn by Norman B. Howard, architect, for a theater and business building to be erected on the north side of Delmar, between Hamilton and Goodfellow avenues. The proposed building will occupy a space of 100 feet by 157. There will be four stores on Delmar. The second floor will be occupied with a hall and several offices. The stores will extend back about 60 feet from the street line. The theater, which will occupy the rear part of the building, will have a seating capacity of 1500. There will be three entrances to the theater, one through a 22-foot lobby, between the stores and Delmar boulevard, one on the east side of the building and another on the alley. Only the latest motion pictures will be shown.

The Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., which is building this project, is conversant with the conditions in this section of the city, has erected two buildings adjoining the property on the east.

This will not be a competitor to the Park Theater, as it will only show moving pictures. The building will cost $50,000.

PLAN TO PUT ALL TICKET OFFICES ON OLIVE STREET

Railway Passenger Men Propose to Erect New Buildings Between Tenth and Twelfth Streets—Rents Would Be Cheaper and Public Would Be Benefited.

Negotiations were begun yesterday which contemplate locating all the railway ticket offices in St. Louis on Olive street, between Tenth and Twelfth streets. The deal involves the erection of buildings on both sides of the street, the rental of which, it is said, will be nominal compared with which the railroads are now paying on Olive street east of Tenth street. W. J. Holbrook, president of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., subsidiaries of which control much property in this section of Olive street, would neither confirm nor deny the story.

Holbrook was in communication last week with members of the Southwestern Passenger Association, which was in session in St. Louis.

Details of the plans which, it is said, are regarded favorably, it was stated by those who know, would not be disclosed at this time.

Two other deals involving the removal of the railway ticket offices from Olive street are pending. The Mercantile Trust Co., represented by Harry A. Cragan, has been endeavoring to land them at Tenth and Locust streets, while Jesse Dana of the Guardian Trust Co. has been trying to land them at Broadway and Locust street.

Both locations, together with the offer, have been under consideration by the roads.

As a matter of fact, 20 of the 21 railroads signed a tentative contract whereby they were to be provided with offices in the Kinloch Telephone Building, at the northwest corner of Tenth and Locust streets, and in a new building to be erected at the northeast corner of Eleventh and Locust streets.

Jess D. Dana and Lawrence declared yesterday that the ticket offices would be anchored at Broadway and Locust, while Cragan was equally confident as to the successful issue of his deal. A decision on one of the three locations will probably be reached the forthcoming week. A majority of the ticket offices now are located on Olive street east of Ninth street.

The rental paid by the railroads for present ticket offices range from $10,000 to $15,000 a year apiece. The Olive street deal now being engineered by Holbrook will save the railroads annually approximately $120,000.

The Pennsylvania's ticket office now is located at the southwest corner of Olive and Tenth streets.

With the central traffic parkway virtually assured, there has been much inquiry for quarters in the business district west of Eighth street, which, it is believed, will reflect the stimulus of the project.

The outcome of the three deals is being awaited in realty and financial circles with keen interest.

Should Dana and Pierce fail to land the ticket offices at the southeast corner of Broadway and Locust street, the site, it was suggested yesterday, would constitute an attractive location for a building for the Reserve Bank.

Homes at $880 Apiece on Weekly Terms Find Favor With Buyers.

Another active week was reported by the David P. Leahy House and Home Co. at West Walnut Manor, the big Northwest St. Louis subdivision. Sales of the houses at $880 apiece aggregated $14,960. While the terms of sale as regards the houses are $25 cash and $9.27 a month, in several instances all cash was paid.

The demand for the houses is increasing at a rate that gives promise of activity at West Walnut Manor throughout the winter.

Sales of lots to prospective builders were also reported.

There now remain to be disposed of about 500 lots in West Walnut Manor, the entire subdivision being composed of about 2500 parcels. The subdivision is rapidly being built up by the wage-earning classes, with substantial little houses.

The David P. Leahy House and Home Co., during the 25 or more years of its life, has opened 50 subdivisions in St. Louis, all of which are now flourishing home centers.

The lots in the manor are being sold on terms of $9 cash and $1 a week. West Walnut Manor is located at Hamilton and Florissant avenues, just outside the city limits and is not subject to city taxation.

INDORSES WRONG MAN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—President Wilson today found himself in pretty much the position of a person upon whom someone had played a halloween prank. The President discovered that he had sent a letter of indorsement to J. C. Vaughan, Progressive candidate for Congress, instead of to M. R. O'Leary, the Democratic candidate in the Second Illinois District.

In the letter the President commended the Progressive candidate as a Democrat who should receive the support of the good people of that district. When the mistake was discovered the President wired Vaughan, requesting him not to use the letter.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

BANK RESERVES RECORD GAIN OF OVER $6,000,000

Weekly Report of New York Institutions Makes Good Showing.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE WEAK

Warring Nations Are Big Buyers of Supplies; New Loans Planned.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review today, says:

"The suddenness with which returning hope and cheerfulness swept over the financial community this week may be said to have taken even the closest watchers of the situation by surprise.

"Coming as the new display of confidence did, in immediate sequence to a mood of profound dejection and despondency, and accompanied, as it was this week, by the gloomiest sentiment in the basic steel trade that has prevailed since the war began, it has excited in many quarters something like perplexity, if not incredulity.

"This was perhaps more natural, in that the change of feeling arose from no single event of high importance, such as would necessarily alter the situation.

"Yet this turn to cheerfulness need not have surprised people familiar with the history of previous eras of depression in this country. One need not even cite the famous saying of the late Mr. Morgan, that the man who is a bear on the future of America will go broke.

"The real explanation is quite as much psychological as financial; it lies in the perfectly well known fact that our business community's invariable habit, in the face of a formidable economic shock, is first to declare that nothing at all has happened that will hurt us; then to revert for a time to a mood of absolutely hopeless pessimism and then, even more abruptly, to open their eyes to recognition that rapid recovery is under way and moreover, that the situation had never been as bad as they had imagined.

Banks a Big Factor.

"The recent spell of despondency occurred in the very face of measures, more successful than their authors had dared to expect, for solving the graver immediate problems. It occurred when every reader of the news was aware that the new banking system, with its immense expansion of our credit facilities, was shortly to be in operation.

"It was certain all along that the very provisions of the Federal Reserve act, whose immediate results had the system been introduced at a time of expansion and enthusiasm, were anticipated with some misgiving, would serve in the highest imaginable degree to solve the problems now before us.

During all this recent period of gloom, moreover, every intelligent man must have been aware that Europe would presently be forced to enter our markets as a heavy purchaser of supplies.

"The reason then, for the almost spectacular change from despair to confidence, is that the real situation was recognized all at once, after a period in which the business community had refused to recognize it.

"Within the last week, moreover, a good deal has happened to bring about better conditions in the foreign exchange market and the money market, where the trend of affairs is usually indicated first.

"Indications are that during the next few days further arrangements will be perfected for the creation, in this country, of large credit balances for the account of various foreign governments.

"Provision just made by France, to establish a $10,000,000 credit balance here, through the sale of nine-months' notes, carrying 6 per cent interest, points the way for a further arrangement of that character with other foreign applicants.

Foreigners Buy Supplies.

"All the nations at war have agents in this country making large purchases of clothing, foodstuffs and other material badly needed in the territory where productive industry has been demoralized by the withdrawal of wage earners for military service.

"There have been definite rumors that even Germany was negotiating for a temporary loan here, with the understanding that the proceeds should be utilized to pay for material bought in this country. The probability is that some such advances have been already made, and that further loans will be required in order to buy up quantities of cotton, wheat and fodder.

"There is no reason why such loans should not be made by American bankers, to all countries which are making large expenditures in the United States. They do not involve the export of gold, and what is more, they act as a partial offset for any adverse trade balance created against this country.

"In addition to the loans for belligerent states, our bankers have had applications for temporary advances from Norway, Switzerland and various borrowers who have been accustomed to finance such requirements at Paris and London.

"All these operations must help the position of this market, for the total sums involved are sufficient to provide a vast amount of profitable business for the manufacturing interests of the United States.

With the sharp fall in foreign exchange rates to the neighborhood of normal figures, there has been less demand this week for the exchange bills of the $100,000,000 gold pool. The chances are that the members of the pool will not be called upon for other subscriptions, in addition to the $25,000,000 that has already been provided.

Exchange Market Normal.

The committee in charge of the fund has not made any statement concerning the exact extent of its operations in the foreign exchange market. Their operations have been of the greatest service, however, in supplying exchange when it was urgently needed, thereby arresting the advance of rates to a level which prohibited free buying of London bills by mercantile interests having to make large remittances for merchandise purchased abroad.

"The cotton pool will formally begin operations as soon as the large interior banks, which have been asked to join the undertaking, have given their consent. This will probably be a few days hence, when the real work of the helping out of the Southern interests will be taken up by the committees, acting under the direction of the Federal Reserve Board.

"The $50,000,000 subscribed by New York city banks will be paid over as soon as the board calls for the subscriptions provided by the banks of the Central Reserve cities. This pool is by far the most ingenious yet devised for relief work, since it grants the assistance only in cases where the banks of the territory helped put up as margin 25 per cent of each loan made.

"Within the last few days some of the largest banks in the clearing house have retired their loan certificates, and it is probable that a good many others will begin to retire their emergency notes next week, when the interest charge will be raised on much of the emergency circulation taken out in the first weeks of August."

"A further increase of $6,654,000 in the surplus reserve, as reported in today's weekly bank statement, brought that important item to a higher figure than in the corresponding week of any year since 1908.

"This week's improvement was effected by addition of $6,400,000 cash to the reserve, along with a moderate loan reduction. Banks in the Clearing House reported $3,078,000 further retirement of circulating notes, a process which began with last week's $785,000 reductions.

"By no means the least significant showing of the statement was the specie holdings (nearly all gold) in the New York institutions. The present total is $20,000,000 above what was held a year ago this week, and $33,500,000 above the week of war panic ending Aug. 8.

LONDON THINKS MARKET OUTLOOK GROWS BRIGHTER

Rapid Fall in Exchange Rates to Normal Basis Helps Sentiment.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The rapid fall in your exchange market to something like a normal basis, is as gratifying to us as to you. We consider it to be mostly the result of natural conditions.

"The heavy purchases of all kinds of materials (even apart from grain and cotton) which are now being made in your market by the belligerent Powers, have really been inevitable from the first. But the actual execution of the orders is now leading to heavy transfers of credit here to your account. Bills of exchange are now being freely drawn in this market and the names of acceptors are also taken readily.

But though this is the working-out of natural tendencies, they have operated much more quickly than had been expected. Manchester is still slow to wake up to the real needs of our cotton trade, but other requirements have now gone considerable distance towards filling up the void caused by the light purchases there.

Failures Are Likely.

"Thus far, the meeting of obligations on which the protection of the moratorium is expiring, has proceeded satisfactorily. It is still feared that when Nov. 4, the date of final expiration has been passed, there may be failures; for such arrangements as have been made, it has been impossible to protect all concerns, and it is possible that some may have to go under.

"Thus some weak spots in certain quarters of the present position, may be uncovered. They will, however, be of minor importance and the banks, which are fully alive to the situation, may be trusted to act with generosity and freedom.

The scheme for the rehabilitation of Stock Exchange business is now complete, and is simply awaiting ratification by the Treasury. Its fundamental principle is the protection of the loans which had been made to members.

The Bank of England is granting advance up to 60 per cent on such loans, if required, but no Treasury guarantee is to accompany them; the recourse being made against the original lender if losses are incurred.

"Important developments are pending regarding Russia, in addition to the recent operation here through Treasury bills. They should lead to a much better position in regard to payments from that country."

Banks Show a Gain of $6,454,000 in Surplus Reserves.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The statement of the average condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $14,914,950 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is an increase of $6,454,300 last last week.

GINNING SHOWS COTTON CROP IS SECOND LARGEST

Federal Figures to Oct. 18 Only 148,000 Bales Below Big 1911 Record.

New York Cotton Exchange May Reopen Soon.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—An early reopening of the New York Cotton Exchange, which has been closed since the beginning of the war, seemed likely today, when the Conference Committee of the exchange approved a plan under which a corporation of bankers and others will take over the unliquidated cotton at 9 cents a pound. Before this method can be put in operation the courts must decide what disposition shall be made of the unliquidated contracts held by Pell & Co. when that firm was suspended. Prior to opening of the exchange, the members of it will be required to report the number of bales they will offer to the corporation at the stipulated price of 9 cents, in order to clear up the unliquidated contracts.

The ginning of cotton to Oct. 18, as reported by the Census Bureau on Monday last, was 7,610,683 bales, as compared with 6,973,518 bales for the same period last year, and 7,758,621 bales in 1911. The ginning to Oct. 18 is only about 148,000 bales behind that of the big crop year of 1911. In this connection, it should be remembered that the present crop is at least 10 days later than usual. While the lateness of the crop may not account in full for the discrepancy between the crop of this year and 1911, the number of bales ginned in the interval between Sept. 25 and Oct. 18, this year, would indicate it.

In this period there were ginned 4,216,929 bales, as compared with 4,082,027 in 1911. The lateness of the 1914 crop may have been somewhat overcome by the lack of a market and the consequent uninterrupted picking and ginning. This large ginning points also to the fact that financial depression has not affected the gathering of the crop. Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Oklahoma, up to Oct. 18, had ginned more cotton than ever before. This year the heavy ginning was in the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama. The ginning in Texas this year was about equal to the ginning at the same date in 1911, when the percentage of cotton ginned to Oct. 18 was 49.9 of the entire ginning.

The ginning and the private reports indicate that the growth is at least the second largest on record. Further growth and fruiting is unlikely now on account of the killing frosts that have been reported over practically the entire cotton belt. There have been exceptions, however, where cotton has taken a fresh start on account of a period of warm weather following the freeze and continuing for a considerable period. The frost will have the effect of opening the bolls and making picking easier and cleaner.

India and Egypt Reducing Acreage.

In a smaller way, India and Egypt have the same problems of financing that we have in this country, and are taking steps to reduce acreage for next season. Both these countries made full crops. In India there are on hand, of the last crop, 500,000 bales, and the growing crop is estimated to be quite as large as the last one. On Sept. 22 a decree was promulgated by the Egyptian Government limiting the total acreage to 1,000,000 acres, a reduction of about 750,000 acres. The Chamber of Commerce in Bombay, according to the Manchester Guardian, has petitioned the Government to take custody of the cotton and issue warrants against it to enable owners to make loans. The Indian crop last year was valued at nearly $200,000,000.

Exports from this country are increasing daily, and the declaration that the English Government would not consider cotton a contraband of war further clarifies the situation. Germany has been receiving cotton indirectly, if we may judge from the movement of cotton along unaccustomed lanes, but if cotton is allowed to proceed in neutral bottoms to any destination it will assist greatly. About one-sixth of last week's exports were sent to Copenhagen, Gothenburg and Christiana, a total of 13,759 bales, and quite out of proportion with their usual needs.

The matter of Germany paying for the cotton in case of direct shipments, is for settlement by individual arrangement. The solving of the exchange problem with England was easier because we owed to that country a big balance. According to press dispatches, German exchange is selling at a very low figure in New York. There is some pressure to sell and prices are very low. Doubt as to the value of German credits is increasing, and this brings about a desire to realize on balances in German banks.

The demand in this country has improved considerably and a good business is being done with New England mills. Prices are irregular in the spot cotton markets, but quotations in the principal markets are generally from 6⅝ to 6¾ for middling. The movement is small and the stocks are increasing at both interior markets and ports. In the face of this there is a decidedly better feeling in the whole cotton market.

The belief that crop estimates will have to be reduced on account of the frost, the fact that the export trade is improving daily and the relief afforded by the cotton loan pool and the nearing inauguration of business by the reserve banks, all go to produce a more cheerful feeling in the minds of farmers, merchants and buyers.

The reduction of acreage next season is a big factor in fixing the price of the present crop. Speculative buying will be largely governed by the prospects for another crop, and speculative buying, whether by mills, merchants or people not in the trade, will have to take care of the surplus of this crop unless the farmer is able to borrow sufficient for his needs and hold his own cotton.

A reduction in acreage will be more likely if the farmer holds. If he sells, he will surely plant a big acreage to cotton next season. Whether he can do this or not may be open to doubt, but he has made crops on no money, practically, and the farmer is today in better financial condition than ever before. A crop has been made on rabbit and molasses and a little meal.

CATTLE RECEIPTS DROP; REACTION ADVANCES PRICES

Beef Rates Jump 50 to 75 Cents, or Even With the Market of Two Weeks Ago.

Receipts at National Stock Yards.

	This Wk.	Last Wk.	Year Ago
Cattle	20,000	40,790	35,647
Hogs	40,000	48,378	44,561
Sheep	10,000	9,124	17,821
Horses and mules	2,500	3,632	4,682

Receipts of cattle during the week were very moderate—only about half of what they were the preceding period. The runs, however, came more nearly being normal and were vastly more suitable to the demand. The trade was consequently on a considerably firmer basis and there was a quick reaction for the better in prices. During the preceding week it was difficult to get a bid on certain grades of beef steers; this week sellers had no trouble and liquidated their holdings readily. In general, the steer trade was 50@75c higher, or right back even with the market of two weeks ago. There was a lack of quality at all times, however, and the week's top, received on a load of yearlings, was $10. Medium and common kinds were in the majority.

Trade in butcher cattle was, like that in steers, on a much firmer basis, and, with the aid of light runs, prices were constantly on the upturn. Quality was lacking at all times in the heifer supply, medium and common grades comprising the bulk. Action was had on all classes early each day and by noon the clearances had been effected. An evidence of the week's activity was furnished by the fact that few cattle were carried over for afternoon session. The general trade in medium and common heifers and even good kinds was 50@75 higher, or back even with the market two weeks ago.

General Market Stronger.

Trade in cows was much the same as heifers. The market quickly reacted, the supply being hardly of sufficient volume to meet the demand. The general market, from canners up to best grades, was around half a dollar higher for the week. Bulls were in moderate supply and sold 25@35c higher. Vealers opened steady, but by the end of the week were 75c@$1 higher, with a late top of $10.50. Stock and feeding cattle also reacted with moderate supplies on sale and a little better inquiry from the country. The market was strong and prices were around 25@50c higher.

Receipts in the quarantine division were very moderate in volume and considerably less than the runs of the past few weeks. Texas and Oklahoma steers were very scarce, most of the showing being from southeastern territory. There was a strong demand for what few steers offered and prices rapidly advanced, until, by the close of the week, they were 25@35c higher than for the previous week, and, it was strong selling at the advance. Trade in canners and she-stuff had a firm tone all during the period and was around half a dollar higher than the close of the previous week. Yearlings and heretics did not show as much gain as did the grown cattle, most of them being around 25@35c higher.

Fair Supply of Hogs.

There was just a fair supply of hogs on sale. On no day was the run sufficient to be considered liberal. There were a lot of pigs and lights on the market the first part of the week and a fair number later, most of which came from the southwest territory. The market was in good shape all week and advanced 15@25c.

Good quality hogs, with a little weight, were the best sellers and brought top prices, but the pigs and lights made a greater advance. Best hogs went at $6.60@7.80; fair grades went at $6.25@7.50, and rough packers at $7@7.25. Buyers sorted the hogs closely and there were lots of roughs on sale.

Pigs and lights that were strictly good went at $7.35@7.65; fair to medium kinds went at $7@7.35, and the poor and common kinds in general at $6@6.75. Packers showed a much better disposition to do business than during any week for a month or more and paid right up around the top for quite a lot of hogs. They were getting a better grade as a rule.

Sheep in Good Demand.

Just a moderate supply of sheep and lambs arrived each day and as there was a good demand the market was on a slightly higher basis, but 10@15c would about cover the gain. Several lots of Western lambs were received and found ready sale at good prices owing to the small run of natives received. There also was a big lot of goats on the market.

Good fat lambs found ready sale at $7.75@7.85 the first of the week, but toward the end went at $7.90@8.25. Few sold above $8.15. Medium grades went at $7.35@7.75. Culls and those no better than culls went at $6.50@7.

Early in the week all the mutton sheep went to the slaughterers at $5.25, but later the good kinds were selling up to $5.40 and they were in good demand at the highest prices they have commanded in several weeks. Choppers and good stockers went at $4@4.50, and the bucks largely at $4.25. Bucks and stockers showed no improvement.

Horse and Mule Trade Unchanged.

The trade in horses was much the same as for the previous week. Buyers were taking war horses and, as the market was best on these types, the runs carried a greater proportion of them. There was no demand from Southern states for horses. The Eastern trade was good and all the quality types available sold at satisfactory prices.

Mules were slow and no material advance was made. Buyers were scarce and the outlet poor. The only sellers were miners, big mules and sugar mules, but these were also slow.

Quarantine Is Placed on Cattle.

LANSING, Mich., Oct. 31.—A quarantine in Michigan against cattle, sheep and hogs from the Chicago stockyards was approved late today by Gov. Farris. The proclamation will be issued tomorrow, but in the meantime all shipments of livestock from Chicago will be stopped.

The quarantine was ordered by H. H. Halladay of the Michigan Livestock Sanitary Commission after he had found in Lenawee County another herd of cattle infected with foot and mouth disease. The cattle had been shipped from Chicago.

At the Niles (Mich.) office of the Bureau of Animal Industry reports were received today of a fresh outbreak of the disease at Rolling Prairie, Ind., outside the territory under quarantine in that State.

WHEAT FUTURES IRREGULAR IN CHICAGO TRADE

Market Opens Higher, Then Loses Advance—Corn Is Fairly Steady.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—European readiness in accepting offers at higher prices had a strengthening effect today on the wheat market here. Attention continued to center on the uncertainties brought about by Turkey in the European war situation. Traders were made cautious, however, by the outlook for a big increase in the domestic visible supply total Monday. After opening ¼c to ¾c up, the market reacted a little and then advanced slightly higher than before.

Corn sympathized with the firmness of wheat. Besides there were new export sales. The start, which showed ¼@⅜c to ½c gain, was followed by some additional hardening of values.

Seaboard demand lifted oats. Cash houses were fair buyers of the December option.

Provisions were without much support. Lard in particular seemed to be difficult of sale.

Nearly twice as much wheat arrived at the principal terminals today as the total amount on the corresponding date a year ago. Besides, the figures for the week exceeded by 2,500,000 bushels the record for the preceding seven days. In this connection it was stated that so much wheat had already been sold to go to Europe that exporters were becoming reluctant to take the risk of contracts which called for shipment during November.

Realizing sales afterward by speculative holders caused a sharp setback in wheat. Huge primary receipts gave the bears an advantage. The close was nervous at ¼c net decline.

The corn market later tended to ease off with wheat. The close was steady at the same as last night to ¼c lower.

Wheat futures took a strong upward tack in the late trading last week, following the entry of Turkey into the foreign war. In the early speculation prices were reactionary on a larger movement of wheat to primary markets, but the losses were quickly regained and final quotations were about 1c higher than the final figures of a week ago.

Liverpool prices showed a strong upward drift throughout the week, and there was nothing in the foreign developments to suggest an early settlement of the war. Exporters were active purchasers of wheat and flour in this market, and all indications point to an unusual foreign demand for American wheat and flour throughout the winter.

At the moment trade follows the advance hesitatingly, as the price at which futures are selling appears high as compared with values a year ago. But in times of great wars wheat has invariably sold at abnormally high levels, with the record quotations on the crop usually made in the late months of the old crop season, when supplies in all countries are at their lowest ebb.

The movement of wheat to market in Canada continues to surprise the trade, as receipts are fully 60 per cent under last year's, and can only suggest that England has cleaned up the surplus wheat in Canada for the needs of her armies.

While visible supply statistics indicate that there is no shortage of wheat in the United States, the foreign figures indicate that France, Germany, England, Austria and other warring nations, with the exception of Russia, have holdings materially lower than a year ago, and will have to call on our surplus continuously to supply their needs.

In addition to this, a large percentage of supplies in this country are concentrated in the hands of strong elevator and milling interests, who will not force their grain on the market except at high or advancing prices.

The Argentine crop also is still an unknown quantity in the speculative equation. And should that yield run small, the shortage in the world's wheat crop, which now is placed some 400,000,000 bushels under that of last year, might prove somewhat startling to the entire trade. The week's statistics were bearish, as far as supplies were concerned, but very bullish from the export-figure standpoint.

Corn Market Firm.

Corn futures were firm. Receipts were moderate and there were reports of better Southern inquiries, owing to improved sentiment over cotton crop conditions. Oats showed a slightly firmer tone in sympathy with corn.

The Price Current said:

"Light rainfall last week gave some encouragement to the wheat producers on the western end of the winter belt. The soil has been so dry in the western half of Kansas and Nebraska for several months that very little hope of the acreage already seeded doing any good, had been held for some time. Further rains will give the plant a start. On the whole the wheat acreage of the country will not be enlarged as much as was expected a couple of weeks since. The central states are showing up with a good increase and generally outside of the dry area the plant is in usual good condition for this season of the year.

"Corn husking has been delayed by wet weather, but with the change that came last week and prospects of cooler temperatures the gathering of the crop will be under way in the northern states this week. Husking returns are varying, but on the whole the outturn is running with the Oct. 1 estimate of the Government. Fall pastures have never been better and there has been more than usual economy in feeding thus far."

An effective bear argument on corn has been the cotton situation in the South. The stagnation in the cotton market has cut off the usual Southern demand for corn, removing for three months past what is usually an important consumptive demand. The agreement which has been effected by which our cotton may be shipped to any of the countries now at war, without molestation on the sea, will at once start cotton moving, open up business conditions in the South and result in a Southern demand for corn and provisions that will be quickly felt.

UNION STOCKYARDS IN CHICAGO UNDER U. S. QUARANTINE

Danger of Foot and Mouth Disease Stops Shipments Except for Slaughter.

CARS MUST BE MARKED

Stringent Regulations Made by Government to Prevent Spread of Infection.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The Union Stock Yards at Chicago were quarantined today by the Department of Agriculture so as to prevent shipments of livestock, excepting for immediate slaughter because of foot-and-mouth disease.

This explaantion of the Government's action was issued at the Department of Agriculture:

"Because of the danger that cattle infected with the foot-and-mouth disease may have passed through them, the Union Stock Yards in Chicago have been quarantined by the Secretary of Agriculture. This quarantine goes into effect immediately.

"Under the provisions of this quarantine, no cattle, sheep or swine can be moved from the stock yards in interstate or foreign commerce, except for the purpose of immediate slaughter and under permits issued by Federal inspectors. In such case, they must be transported in sealed cars placarded 'For Immediate Slaughter.'

"The stock in these cars can only be unloaded into reserve pens which have been designated for this purpose by the chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry. Cars used for the transportation of stock from the yards must be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected before they can be moved again in interstate or foreign commerce. Shipments of stock into the yards from uninfected areas must be unloaded through cleaned and disinfected docks and alley-ways under the supervision of the Federal officials. When reloaded, the stock must be placed in cleaned and disinfected cars and the cars officially sealed.

"These measures are considered essential to the prevention of the spread of the disease. Foot-and-mouth is one of the most contagious infections known, and if it were possible to move stock from the Chicago yards to the country for feeding or dairy purposes, there is grave danger that the disease might be disseminated over large areas.

"Up to the present time, no case of foot-and-mouth diseases have been found in the Union yards, but there is some reason to believe that infected stock may have passed through. It is at least certain that shipments of stock to Chicago have been made from regions where the foot-and-mouth disease has broken out."

MISSOURI ROADS SEEK TO RAISE FREIGHT RATES

Application Is Filed With Commission to Increase Tariffs Not Already Ruled Upon.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 31.—All of the trunk line railroads of the State today filed with the Public Service Commission schedules of increased freight rates on commodities which have not been covered specifically by statutory enactment or by ruling of the commission.

The present rate on shoe and clothing findings ranges from 7½ to 17½ cents per 100 pounds. The new rate will call for 45 to 50 cents.

The tariff on saddle trees, pack trees and hitching horses will be increased from 30 to 45 cents per hundred. Leather shipped in carload lots will be increased from one-half cent to 2½ cents per hundred. Less than carload lots will be increased 27½ cents per hundred.

Broom materials hauled from St. Louis to Jefferson City will be charged for at $17.50 per car, whereas they formerly cost only $14 per car.

The tariff on overalls and clothing hauled between Jefferson City and St. Louis is increased from 30 to 45 cents per hundred.

Stop-over privileges on shipments of cement and farming implements, heretofore granted to shippers, are abolished under the new schedules and an extra charge of $4 per car for switching at shipping points has been added. This charge formerly was absorbed by the line over which the haul was made.

The schedules will go into effect Dec. 1, unless rejected by the commission.

MAN WHO SAID HE WAS "PRINCE PAUL" ENDS LIFE

Author Denied He Was Hero of "Three Weeks"; Had Varied Career in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—A man 30 years old who called himself "Prince Paul de Clairmont," and had a varied career of two years in New York, was found dead today in his hall bedroom in a theatrical boarding house. An autopsy established that he killed himself by taking cyanide of potassium.

De Clairmont claimed to be a Russian Prince, a Prussian at other times, also a Frenchman. Persons who claim to have known him in London have said that he was an Englishman, the son of a shopkeeper who had, by his nerve and knowledge of the mental workings of lonesome women with money, managed to impose himself among them until discovered. Among his many impositions was his assertion that he was the hero of "Three Weeks," but the author of the book denied it.

Shortly after the "Prince's" arrival here a newspaper published a story that he was a faker and had been arrested in London for the theft of Lady Abdy's diamond brooch, worth several thousand dollars. He admitted pawning the brooch, but said her ladyship had given it to him in lieu of lending him money.

HEAD OF ILLINOIS SUFFRAGISTS IS SHORN OF POWER

Mrs. Trout's Opponents Slip Over Amendment Restricting Her in Naming Delegates.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31. — Unrestricted power to appoint delegates to the National convention was taken from the president in a resolution hurriedly adopted today in the closing minutes of the convention of the Illinois Equal Suffrage Association. This amendment to the constitution, offered by Mrs. Antoinette Funk, was accepted so quickly that few of the friends of Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, re-elected president, realized its importance.

According to the amendment, presidents of the organizations affiliated with the State association may each send one name of a member willing and qualified to serve as a delegate. The National delegates must be chosen from this number. If there is a deficiency in the representation after these nominations have been made, the board of directors may complete the delegation from its own selections.

The convention officially adjourned at noon, but a large number of delegates met later in the day in another hall in the same hotel. For several hours they plied with questions Mrs. Medill McCormick, Mrs. Funk, Jane Addams and Sophonisba Breckinridge, who made statements which, they said, they were not permitted to make on the floor of the convention.

This meeting was not called for the purpose of considering the organization of a new suffrage association, Mrs. McCormick said later. "This question was not even thought of, much less considered," she said. "Neither was there any discussion of choosing a second delegation, one which would represent our views, to send to the National convention at Nashville, next month.

"We simply explained to many of the delegates things we were not permitted to explain during the convention. I suppose Mrs. Trout thought we were going to attack the administration, and for that reason would not let us talk."

Other officers elected were Mrs. G. A. Soden, Chicago, first vice-president; Mrs. H. M. Brown, Peoria, second vice-president; Mrs. Judith Lowenthal, Chicago, recording secretary; Mrs. E. L. Stewart, Chicago, corresponding secretary; Miss Jennie Johnson, Chicago, treasurer; Mrs. W. F. Carr, Ottawa, auditor.

ST. LOUIS FIRM TO BUILD ENGINES FOR 3 U. S. SUBMARINES

Government Places Rush Order for Equipment for Boats With Busch-Diesel Co.

Vigorous activity by the Government to enlarge the American submarine flotilla, following the recent successes of this type of craft in the European war, is indicated by a rush order placed with the Busch-Sulzer Bros.-Diesel Engine Co., Second and Utah streets, for six submarine engines of 600 horsepower each. James R. Harris, general manager of the company, says he has assurances of further rush orders from the Government.

The engines now contracted for are intended for the submarines L-5, L-6, and L-7 now being built by the Lake Torpedo Boat Co., at Bridgeport, Conn. Each boat will have two engines.

The amount of the contract exceeds $250,000. The St. Louis plant will begin tomorrow running day and night, and will double its present force of 200 men.

Lieut. L. P. Warren, U. S. N., has been assigned by the Government to remain at the plant as inspector during the building of the engines.

The company has promised to have the engines ready within a year. The St. Louis company is associated with a company in Switzerland employing 8000 men, where it required two years to construct the engines for the United States submarine G-3.

The St. Louis firm has patents pending for a new engine which it is believed will completely overcome the great trouble previously experienced in submarines of the breaking of their crankshafts at critical moments. Lightness and small size are essentials of submarine engines, but with these qualities must be combined great power and endurance.

THAT LOST ARTICLE MAY NOT BE FOUND TODAY

Or tomorrow or next week. In fact, a month or more may elapse before it turns up. A little persistency may be necessary. Often the article may be unfound; often fear of prosecution or hope of more satisfactory reward may delay the restoration. Then the belated awakening of the finder's conscience explains many delays. But persistency and Post-Dispatch wants will usually recover a lost article if an honest person finds it. The service of the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau is also enlisted in behalf of advertisers. (93)

PLEASE do not class this ad with the worthless class, for the reason that it may sound too good to you; I can show you I have an honest proposition of great merit to offer someone who is looking for a money-maker. It is a manufacturing business, easily handled and requiring very little capital, with the time you have to devote to it. You should make $200 or more per month from the start, and have absolute control of a proposition which will increase the business upon its merits. I offer the right to manufacture and sell in St. Louis and East St. Louis for $150 and the two adjoining counties at $50 each; no curiosity seekers. Call and let me show you, 8 p. m. today or 10 a. m. Monday. Room 1004 American Annex Hotel.

NEXT TO A GUARANTEE

If you were guaranteed that 10 insertions of a classified "ad" would find a buyer for your real estate, at a fair price, you'd be willing to pay the highest advertising rate for these 10 insertions ever paid anywhere for like publicity—wouldn't you?

You can't buy CERTAINTY in classified advertising. Life, business, bothersome problems, would be too simple to be interesting—if you could buy a result at a stipulated price.

But in using classified advertising in the Post-Dispatch as your "salesman" for real estate, you are as near to "certainty" as to results as you can possibly get.

DEMOCRATS CLAIM A MAJORITY OF 100 IN THE NEXT HOUSE

Gain of Senators Expected in New York, Ohio, Kansas, Illinois and Connecticut.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 31.—The Democratic National Committee and the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee tonight issued a statement predicting a sweeping Democratic victory at the polls next Tuesday. The committees predict a majority of 100 in the new House of Representatives. They claim that the Democratic majority in the Senate will be increased by the election of senators from Connecticut, Ohio, Kansas, Illinois and New York.

The greatest gains will be made in the heretofore Republican territory west of the Mississippi, the statement says.

"The most striking feature of all the reports received," the statement says, "is the tremendous popularity of President Wilson. It reaches into every nook and corner of the land. His handling of the difficult and trying questions growing out of the great world crisis has appealed to the people with peculiar force and they will not embarrass the present situation by electing a Congress antagonistic to him. The general situation could not be better and the friends of this administration who confidently expect a verdict of approval for real public service will not be disappointed.

Gains Expected in West.

"Democratic sentiment is particularly strong in that section of the country west of the Mississippi. This is well illustrated in the former Republican State of Montana, where the vote for Congressmen Evans and Stout in the primaries exceeded the combined vote of all other parties. Gains are confidently expected in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Minnesota and other western states.

"In the east our reports are particularly gratifying. In the first New Jersey district and other districts in the East now represented by Republicans prospects for Democratic success are exceptionally good. Making due allowances for the fact that quite a number of Democrats in the Sixty-third Congress represent strong Republican districts, which under normal conditions we could not hope to win, it is difficult to see how the Democratic party will fail to organize the House with approximately 100 majority.

Senate Gains Forecast.

"Our majority in the Senate will be increased by the election of Senators in Cinnecticut, New York, Ohio, Kansas and Illinois; all of which are represented now by Republicans, Stevens in New Hampshire, Johnson in South Dakota, Purcell in North Dakota, Moyle in Utah, Phelan in California and Husting in Wisconsin have fine chances of success, according to the best reports obtainable. Palmer in Pennsylvania and Connolly in Iowa appear to be gaining strength rapidly and our latest reports from these two states are very reassuring."

POSTAL CLERK INVOLVED IN MONEY LOSS IS FREED

Man Arrested Last Friday Night Is Said to Have Handled Missing Cash.

Edward C. Runder, a St. Louis postoffice clerk, who was arrested Friday night by Postoffice Inspector Bunson and held at police headquarters in East St. Louis, charged with having "misrepresented the facts in the matter before a United States Commissioner," was released on a $1000 bond yesterday.

Runder testified at the preliminary hearing of William A. Andrews, a railway postoffice clerk, who is on bail on a charge of embezzling $2000 which was being sent from the Third National Bank in St. Louis to the State Bank at Prairie du Rocher, Ill., on Oct. 14.

Runder is said to have given a package containing the money to Andrews and in return received a receipt.

United States Commissioner Coultas declined to discuss the testimony which Runder gave at the hearing and what statements he made which caused his arrest. Runder lives at 1419 North Nineteenth street.

MAN FOUND DEAD, SITTING ON FLOOR OF BATHROOM

Coroner Decides Rupture of Aorta Was Fatal to Carpenter.

Lute Pendergast, 28 years old, a carpenter, of 6160 Suburban avenue, who works at night, and sleeps during the day, woke up at noon yesterday and told his roommate, Sebastian Kufer, that he was going to the bathroom to take a bath. Kufer went to sleep again.

About an hour and a half later Kufer woke up, and, finding his roommate had not returned, went to the bathroom. The door being locked, he peered through the keyhole and saw Pendergast in a sitting posture on the floor with his back against the wall. He called, and when he failed to get an answer, went outside and obtained a ladder and entered the room through the window. He found Pendergast dead.

Coroner Bopp decided Pendergast died from a rupture of the aorta. Kufer said Pendergast never complained of any illness except a rheumatic knee.

Falls Eight Inches and Breaks Leg.

As James Wristen of Chicago was leaving an undertaking establishment at 311 North Ninth street, East St. Louis, last night, he stumbled over the doorstep, fell eight inches to a granitoid sidewalk and fractured his right leg between the ankle and knee. He had gone into the establishment to get a drink of water.

Has your family outgrown that cottage? Need a larger place? Why not make an exchange offer through Post-Dispatch Wants for a more satisfactory home?

SHORT TERM PAPER FOR THE AMERICAN DEBTS IN EUROPE

Reopening of Cotton Exchanges Bears on Negotiations, to Be Resumed Next Week.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—While conferences today between American and English treasury officials and New York bankers resulted in no definite conclusions as to plans for restoring foreign exchange, it is understood that short term paper was agreed to be the best medium for the settlement of American obligations in Europe.

The conference will be resumed next week, members of the Federal Reserve Board, Sir George Paish and Basil B. Blackett of the English Treasury, and A. H. Wiggin and Benjamin Strong Jr., representing the New York bankers, participating. The New Yorkers again will discuss the problem with their associates in the meantime. It became apparent today that the re-opening of the cotton exchanges in New York and Liverpool has a direct bearing on the negotiations.

Cotton Fund Virtually Assured.

The proposed $135,000,000 cotton loan fund seemed tonight to be practically assured. It is expected to have a marked effect upon the cotton market, but bankers are said to be anxious to see the Cotton Exchange reopened.

With New York and Liverpool in the market again, it is felt that the cotton problem will be near a solution. It was predicted tonight the exchanges would open soon after the reserve banks begin business Nov. 16. It was believed the matter had reached a point where negotiations between committees of the New York and Liverpool exchanges would bring a definite decision. Although no representative of the New York Stock Exchange has been present at the conference here with Sir George Paish and Mr. Blackett, the attitude of the Federal Reserve Board and New York bankers probably would have an effect on the opening date.

Cotton Buyers Watching Market.

Sir George often has expressed the belief that American cotton would be purchased in quantity by English manufacturers if they had assurance that the bottom price had been reached. A reopening of the exchanges and the $135,000,000 pool are expected to end the uncertainty.

It was announced tonight progress was being made in raising the loan fund, and that clearing house committees in various cities were actively at work.

Official reports came from St. Louis to the effect that $7,500,000 promised there has been subscribed.

COLLINS SAYS ENTIRE CITY TICKET WILL WIN

Speaker Tells Audience Independents Should Vote Democratic on Wilson's Record.

John P. Collins, Democratic nominee for Congress in the Twelfth District, addressed a gathering of about 300 persons last night at Anchor Hall, Jefferson and Park avenues. Arthur J. Fitzsimmons presided.

Collins declared President Wilson's record is such that every independent voter should support the Democratic ticket. He declared he had explored every nook and corner of the Twelfth District and was confident he would be elected by a majority of at least 1500. He predicted the entire city ticket of the Democratic party would be elected.

A delegation of supporters of F. M. Curlee, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Tenth District, marched into the hall carrying banners and singing "We'll hang Jake Meeker on a Sour Apple Tree." Jacob E. Meeker is Curlee's Republican opponent.

Collins was to have addressed a meeting in the Seventh Ward, at Seventh and Hickory streets, but was unable to attend and sent his regrets by Samuel Willman, a South Broadway merchant. Willman, in a speech, accused the newspapers of treating Collins unfairly.

LABOR UNION SECRETARY CHARGED WITH SHORTAGE

Officer of United Brotherhood of Leather Workers Admits Irregularities.

Charles E. Zumwalt, St. Louis financial secretary of the International United Brotherhood of Leather Workers, was arrested yesterday at the St. James Hotel in the room occupied by W. E. Bryan of Kansas City, general president of the organization.

Bryan told the police Zumwalt was short $295.35 in his accounts and a charge of "suspected embezzlement" was placed against the prisoner. Zumwalt admitted there was a shortage, but could not state what amount. He said it was a temporary embarrassment which could be made good. He said he had taken small sums from time to time from the treasury and had called Bryan's attention to the slight irregularities.

Zumwalt is 24 years old, is married, has one child and lives with his family at 3753 Cote Brilliante avenue. He was released on bond.

$50,000 BUILDING TO GO UP ON MORGAN STREET

The Protzmann Realty Co., through the agency of Rutledge & Kilpatrick, reports the purchase of 78 feet of ground on Morgan street between Tenth and Eleventh streets, by Charles J. and Frederick E. Briner.

The premises were formerly occupied by a cabinet manufacturer and were destroyed by fire some two months ago. A contract was immediately let to wreck the ruins of the old building, preparatory to erecting a modern three-story fireproof building, to be occupied by the Briner Electric Co., which is now located at 207 Franklin avenue.

Improvements approximating $50,000 will be made, and the new improvement will undoubtedly create a new electrical supply district in the immediate vicinity.

CHECKS FOR $7000 CASHED; BIDDERS SEEK ARCHITECT

Man Who Planned to Build Laclede Market Ends Partnership and Leaves City.

Contractors and supply concerns that submitted bids for contracts on the $100,000 market-place to be erected on Laclede avenue, between Vandeventer avenue and Sarah street, are awaiting the return of W. D. Newsome, an architect, who is said to have cashed certified checks totaling about $7000, which had been filed with the bids, and are hoping that he will repay them.

Newsome left the city last Monday for Virginia, saying he expected to obtain money there. Letters are said to have been received by frinds from him in which he assured them he would return in a few days and straighten everything out.

One of the bidders, the Gamble Construction Co., has filed an attachment suit in the Circuit Court for $2405. The furniture and other property in his offices in the Wright Building has been seized by the Sheriff and placed in the basement of the Court House.

Both Members of Firm Sued.

The suit names Charles B. Yoder and W. D. Newsome, doing business as C. B. Yoder & Co., consulting engineers, Railway Exchange Building, and alleges that the defendants prepared plans for the Merchants' and Consumers' Market Association for a market building and called for bids on the work. The Gamble company submitted a bid Sept. 24 on the concrete work. The firm's bid was $48,000. It was required to accompany the bid with a certified check for $2405, or 5 per cent of the bid. It was made payable to the firm of C. B. Yoder & Co. This check was to be returned in 10 days if the company's bid was not accepted. W. G. Gamble, president of the company, makes affidavit that Newsome cashed the check Sept. 25, the day after the bid was made, and appropriated it to his own use.

Other concerns whose checks have not been returned are the St. Louis Sales Co., Patrick Rowan, plasterer, Chemical Building; the Seidel Manufacturing Co., 300 North Broadway, and the General Weather Proofing Co., 1440 North Broadway.

Yoder told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday his investigations indicate that checks totaling about $7000 were received by Newsome and have not been returned to the bidders.

Newsome Came From Richmond.

Newsome, Yoder said, came here from Richmond, Va., a year ago. About six months ago he acquired a half interest in the architectural branch of Yoder's business. Yoder says Newsome handled all of the business in connection with the market project. On Sept. 23 Newsome's connection with the Yoder firm ceased. Yoder disposed of his interest in the market proposition to Newsome and obtained from him a written agreement to return all of the certified checks that had been received.

Newsome moved to rooms 711 and [illegible] Wright Building and installed fine furniture. Yoder retained his offices in the Railway Exchange Building. Yoder said he had no knowledge when the dissolution occurred that Newsome had cashed any of the certified checks and that none of the money from these checks came into his hands at any time.

The market project was promoted by Victor Diesing. He said yesterday that the Yoder firm was employed to draw the plans, but that Newsome was not authorized to take bids. He said he was expecting Newsome back tomorrow, and whether the project would go forward would depend upon whether he returned.

INVASION STATEMENT OF T. R. CAUSES NO STIR

Army Officer Explains Nations Have All Sorts of Plans for Campaigns Against U. S.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Army and navy officers today showed little interest in the statement made by Col. Roosevelt yesterday that he had seen the plans made by two European staffs for invading New York and San Francisco and holding them for ransom in the event of an American-European war.

An army officer explained that there was nothing unusual in the Colonel's statement, because every great military Power has comprehensive plans for capturing every city and port of importance in the world. He said that undoubtedly every general staff in Europe had mapped out complete plans for all sorts of campaigns against the United States, just as the United States army has mapped out similar plans to be used in a war with any great Power.

The fact that some of the European campaign plans included a scheme for taking and holding New York and San Francisco would surprise no one, he said, who had any knowledge of war tactics. As the greatest and richest city on each coast, they would form the natural objective in certain campaign schemes, he said.

The fact that Col. Roosevelt saw sets of the plans, he added, was not surprising, because the army war college has filed away many plans which were prepared by European army staffs. As President of the United States, the Colonel would have had ample opportunity to scores of such plans, he said.

St. Louisan Aids Bureau of Mines.

The Bureau of Mines at Washington today made recommendations regarding methods to be used by miners in resuscitating those overcome by electric shocks or gases. The recommendations are the result of a report of a committee of prominent physicians, of which Dr. W. S. Cannon of Harvard University was chairman and Dr. Joseph Erlanger of 4243 West Pine boulevard, St. Louis, one of the members.

HORSE SHOW COST $20,000; RECEIPTS EQUAL EXPENSES

Success of Six Days of Entertainment Insures Repetition for Next Season.

BREAK U. S. JUMP RECORD

Loula Long, Beaten by Vanderbilt, Withdraws Entry for Champion Harness Horse Pair.

The Horse Show at the Coliseum, which ended last night after a week of successful performances, cost Adolphus Busch III and his fellow promoters about $20,000, of which $12,000 was in prize money.

Although no official figures were given out, officials connected with the management said a sum almost equalling the expenditures had been taken in at the doors, insuring a Horse Show next season.

The management attributed the increased receipts to the large crowds which attended each of the eight performances, the increased number of season tickets sold to members of the Bit and Bridle Club, and the lowering of entrance fees to events, which brought forth a larger number of entries.

There were two happenings last night which sent the crowd home talking—the unofficial breaking of the United States high jump record, and Miss Loula Long of Kansas City withdrawing her entry in Class 21 for champion harness horse pair.

Jumps 7 Feet 5 Inches.

In Class 77, special, for high jumpers, in which E. Allen Russell of Warrenton, Va., matched his Skylark against Afton, owned and ridden by H. Rasmussen of Chicago, the former unofficially broke the United States championship by taking a seven-foot, five inches fence, with the top rail tied.

The official record, made several years ago at Madison Square Garden, New York, is seven feet three inches. As the St. Louis contestants did not stage the event under supervision of the National Horse Show Association, the record will not hold officially.

Miss Long, who had entered her two crack steppers, Realization and Revelation, in the paired harness horse championship, withdrew them after the judges had decided in favor of the Vanderbilt entry in the single horse championship contest.

In the latter, Miss Long, seated behind Revelation, drove with others against Vanderbilt's driver holding the reins over Sir James. The contest narrowed between Sir James and Revelation and the two circled the arena time and again to the cheers and applause of the crowd until the judges finally pinned the blue ribbon on the Vanderbilt entry.

Miss Long Angry at Decision.

Miss Long seemed decidedly put out about the result, and told friends that owing to the decision she would not enter her horses in the paired harness horse championship.

The latter event was won by Vanderbilt's Duke and Pireno, which had been defeated previously in the week by Revelation and Realization, the team Miss Long withdrew.

One feature of the week was the coming to the front of another champion Missouri reinswoman—Miss Myrene Houchin of Jefferson City, who, in her clashes with Miss Long, won three times over the Kansas City expert.

Miss Houchin, holding the reins over Hastings Girl, won the coveted ribbon in the champion roadster class, defeating Miss Long, who drove Illumination.

However, Miss Long's entry, Nancy Garland, won the saddle horse championship, deefating My Idol, owned and ridden by Dell Holman of Holiday, Mo.

In the military jumping event carded for army horses, jumping in pairs, Lieutenants Merchant and Wagner of the Mounted Service School, Fort Riley, Kan., riding Deceive and Connie, weer given the ribbon.

Columbia (Mo.) Horse Is Winner.

Class No. 48, scheduled for saddle horses, showing five gaits, was won by Cigarette, a bay mare owned by Hook & Woods, Paris, Mo. Lee Chief, owne dand ridden by E. D. Moore of Columbia, Mo., was given the red ribbon, and Miss Long's Cleo Gran, McDonald gained third place.

Class No. 39, for horses in harness, single, that had not taken first or second in their classes during the week, went to Val Crane' Winter Rose, with O. J. Mooers' Pick of the Basket second.

However, to compensate for her previous defeats, Miss Long has to her credit the defeat of Paul Brown's famous saddler, Johnnie Jones, in the saddle class championship. Miss Long sent forth Kentucky's Best.

In Class 60, for jumpers who had not won during the show, Poppy of the Mounted Service School, was given the ribbon over Old Platte.

In Class 61, for championship jumpers, Geologist, owned and ridden by Arthur White of Middleburg, Va., was given first, with David Gray second.

Adolphus Busch, III, president of the Horse Show, said the week had brought together one of the best collections of blue-blooded animals he ever had seen.

"The show has been a great success from that standpoint," he said. "We have had many fine horses here and their exhibitions have been great. Each night's attendance surpassed that of the same night of the show last year. We are gratified by the manner in which the public has supported us."

Ousted Sheriff's Appeal Denied.

HELENA, Mont., Oct. 31.—The State Supreme Court handed down a decision today refusing an appeal in the ouster case in which Sheriff Timothy Driscoll of Silver Bow County was removed from office as a result of the disturbances last June, when dynamiters destroyed Miners' Union Hall in Butte.

150 GHOSTS MAKE HALLOWEEN FUN AT BELLERIVE

Sunset Inn Is Scene of Merriment for Large Crowd—Mild Pranks in City.

NEGRO ROBBED BY CLOWN

Victim of Holdup by Men in False Faces Says He Lost $2.90.

Halloween was celebrated last night for the most part at the country clubs, the biggest gathering of merrymakers being at Snuset Inn, to which motored many Horse Show spectators at the conclusion of the show. In the city, those who acted on the old superstition that on Halloween all the witches are permitted to sally forth to do what mischief they can, contented themselves mostly with turning out street lights.

At Sunset Inn the main dining room and veranda were decorated with oak leaves and pumpkin jack o' lanterns illuminated with electric bulbs. About 700 guests were present, and many of them joined in dancing on the veranda.

At the Bellerive Club about 150 members and guests took part in a ghost party, many of them in spectral attire, and played upon each other the pranks proper to the occasion. At the Westwood Club about 100 members held a Halloween party.

A 10-minute blockade on the Bellefontaine line was caused by mischief makers who smeared soap on the rails at the foot of a small hill, on Virginia avenue near Robert avenue. The cars could not climb the hill until the rails had been sanded.

Street lamps by scores were turned out on Cook, Pendleton and Newstead avenues, Page boulevard and on Whittier street. It was too late to relight them, and the streets remained in darkness. Many complaints were made by telephone against boys who turned out street lamps and placed tictacs on windows.

Orville Ohl, 17 years old, 3517 Juniata street, and Marcus Aldrich, 17, of 4259 Cozens avenue, were arrested for removing shutters from windows and gates from fences, and were held for police court.

Sylvester Saylon, 30 years old, a negro of 2934 Pine street, was the victim of a Halloween party last night with more fun as its motive. He was walking east on the south side of Lucky street, and at an alley just west of Goodfellow avenue two men jumped out at him. One covered him with a revolver while the other relieved him of $2.90. Saylon said one of the men had on a clown's suit, and that both wore false faces.

CATHOLIC UNION GIVES VIEWS ON AMENDMENTS

Opposes Nos. 1, 3, 6, 10, 13, 14 and 15 and Is Non-Committal on No. 7.

The Catholic Union of Missouri yesterday issued a circular setting forth its views on the constitutional amendments and propositions to be voted upon in Tuesday's election.

The union is opposed to Amendment No. 1, which would restrict the use of the initiative; has no opposition to No. 2, which affects only Kansas City, and is opposed to Nos. 3, 6, 14 and 15, all relating to road improvement matters. It favors Amendment No. 4, to increase the compensation for members of the State Legislature, favors the principle of No 5, which gives cities the power to vote bonds for subways, is noncommittal on No. 7, providing for pensioning of the deserving blind, and has no objection to No. 8, providing simplified methods of amending charters in larger cities.

It indorses proposition No. 9, the full-crew law; opposes No. 10, which is the county unit bill; favors Nos. 11 and 12, the St. Louis home rule bills, and opposes No. 13, which provides for woman suffrage.

COUNTRY CLUBS BEGIN SUNDAY CLOSING OF BARS

West Wood and Bellerive Announce Lowering of Lid to Comply With Law.

The Westwood Country and the Bellerive Golf Clubs, in St. Louis County, announced last night that the bars in the clubs would be closed last midnight until 5 o'clock Monday morning, and no liquor sold.

This was done to comply with the recent decision of the Supreme Court, which placed all clubs under the supervision of the Excise Commissioner.

At the Country, Glen Echo, Algonquin and Normandie Clubs the stewards stated they would probably receive instructions from the governing bodies this morning as to whether the bars should remain closed all day.

LIEUT.-GEN. A. R. CHAFFE IS DYING IN CALIFORNIA

No Hope for Recovery of Veteran of Several Wars, Doctors Say.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 31.—The death of Lieutenant-General Adna Romanza Chaffee is a matter of a short time. A statement by physicians tonight left no hope for his recovery.

Lieutenant-General Chaffee has served in all the wars of his country from the time of the Civil War. He was at the head of the army sent to Cuba, served in the Philippines and was at the head of the Chinese Relief Expedition at the time of the Boxer Rebellion.

POULTRY HOUSE OF OPEN FRONT TYPE BEST FOR FOWLS

It Comprises the Essentials of Comfort, Ventilation, Sanitation and Economy.

The essentials in a poultry house are convenience, comfort, good ventilation, sanitary surroundings and economy of construction. The kind of house that best meets all these needs is the "open front" type, such as is shown in the illustration on this page. This house may be built to accommodate as many birds as desired by simply lengthening it out and putting in partitions where needed.

The ideal location for a poultry house is one on sandy, high ground, with a south exposure that can be reached by the sun from early morning until night. The house should face the south, and, if possible, should have some kind of shelter on the north. The south side of an evergreen thicket is ideal for this purpose. It is not a good plan to build the house close to granaries, corncribs, barns or any other structure or object that might furnish a harbor for rats or other vermin.

The foregoing recommendations, of course, may largely be considered only by farm poultrymen, although the city keeper will find it possible to follow them out in some particulars. If on your city lot you have a spot that is not free from mud in wet weather and will not drain well, it will pay to haul in some earth, sand or cinders and raise the level to keep the surface dry.

The Interior Arrangements.

Nothing is more important in a poultry house than dryness—a dry floor and dry surroundings. There is probably nothing, barring actual starvation, that will more quickly bring disappointment and loss than a damp hen house. Sometimes drain tiling may be successfully used to keep poultry house floors and yards dry.

The house shown in the illustration is about 15 feet long, 10 feet wide, seven feet high in front and 4½ feet high in the rear. A building of this size will comfortably house from 35 to 50 hens, depending on the breed and size. The skeleton is of 2x4s with 2x2s used to complete the frame. The sides are inclosed with dropsiding and in addition the north wall is sealed inside, this sealing also extending up the roof over the roosts. To make the house still more draft-proof, building paper may be used on the inside. The roof is tightly boarded and this is covered with 3-ply roofing paper.

The open space in the front is about 4 feet wide, 12 feet long, and is covered with wire netting. On the inside, at the top, a frame is hinged, which is covered with canvas. On stormy days and during cold nights this is let down to cover the open space so as to keep out the cold, but at the same time admitting enough air for ventilation. The window at the left furnishes light during the daytime, when the curtain must be kept down.

For further protection some poultrymen provide a second curtain that may be dropped directly in front of the roosts.

Movable Perches and Nests.

The dropping board, roosts and nest boxes are along the north wall of the building. The dropping board, made of matched flooring, is about three feet above the floor, and directly beneath the front edge is the row of nests. Two or three perches a few inches above the dropping boards supply plenty of roosting room. The perches are movable, as are also the dropping board and the nests. The dropping board need not be more than two feet wide.

This arrangement of roosts, nests and dropping board allows the entire floor to be used for scratching purposes. Grit boxes, feed hoppers and water fountains are hung on the walls or placed on shelves. A deep litter of clean straw should always be on the floor. If a board floor is used care must be taken that the foundation is well banked with earth on the outside so as to prevent drafts through cracks in the floor. There is no objection to earth floors if they can be kept dry.

In the right hand front corner is the dust bath, a box-like inclosure, containing the dusting material. The wire-covered inclosure back in the corner at the end of the roost section is used to pen up chronic sitters and surplus roosters.

A house of this size and type may be built for from $40 to $60, depending on cost of materials and labor.

Many poultrymen are opposed to the open-front poultry house, believing it to be risky in winter on account of the exposure. But exposure where there are no drafts, and where the cold is not too severe, does not hurt any feathered fowl. A fowl may roost up in a tree all winter, exposed to wind and weather, and not even catch a cold. But put it in a drafty old henhouse and there will be trouble right away. Nature provided protection in the first instance, but not in the second.

The open-front poultry house provides ventilation in the ideal way—without drafts. On the average sunshiny day in winter, you will find it far more comfortable in an open front house than you would in the old type of solidly inclosed hen house, with the sunlight shut out. On a cold night drop the curtain and your birds will roost snugly behind it, but still there will be enough ventilation through the canvas to keep the air pure and keep the house from getting damp. In the old type of house, where everything is closed up tight, the birds come out into the cold morning air from the damp, steamy interior and colds and attendant ills are the natural consequences.

State Poultry Show to Open in St. Louis Nov. 24

Liberal Cash Prizes, Important Meetings and Splendid Exhibits to Mark Event.

The Missouri State Poultry Show will be held in St. Louis Thanksgiving week, Nov. 24-29. From Tuesday until Saturday night the Missouri hen will be on dress parade and it is expected that several thousand birds will be shown. The exhibit is to include all varieties of chickens, turkeys, ducks, geese, pea fowls, guineas, pheasants and pigeons. It will be held in the St. Louis Coliseum, and there will be lectures and demonstrations each day by prominent poultrymen.

The premiums on pens are $15 for first, $7.50 for second and $2.50 for third. On single entries, the prizes are $3 for first, $2 for second and $1 for third.

One hundred dollars is offered in special prizes on turkeys and $100 is also offered in special prizes on eggs of all varieties. Nearly $100 is offered on capons. Liberal cash prizes are offered on all varieties of poultry.

Gov. Elliott W. Major will be the principal speaker on Friday, following Thanksgiving day. Hon. Jewell Mayes, secretary of the State Board of Agricultural, also will speak. The Missouri Poultry Association, which is composed of 5000 farmers and poultry raisers, will hold its annual meeting, as will the Missouri branch of the American Poultry Association.

Premium lists and programs of the show can be had free by addressing Fred Crosby, secretary, or M. L. Quisenberry, assistant secretary, Mountain Grove, Mo.

Fancy Breeds Big Aid to Utility Poultry Raiser

Combining Both Branches of Industry Improves Laying Qualities, Brings Greater Profits.

Under no circumstances will the fancy and utility branches of poultry keeping combine so well as in the back yard or small poultry plant. To pay attention to both sides of the business means a little extra care, but it also means a better income the year around and there will be more interest and fascination about the work.

For the small poultryman who goes into the fancy breeding business exclusively there is an income only for a few months in the year and during the rest of the time the flock is a dead expense. On the other hand, the utility poultry raiser will find that the marketing of a few birds or settings of eggs for breeding purposes at a premium over market prices, will act as a wholesome stimulant. He will make a greater effort to improve his flock, there will be closer culling and he will realize greater profits as a result.

The poultry raiser who goes in for both the utility and fancy branches with the same flock is doing the poultry industry a real service. It is he who improves the laying qualities of the many varieties of pure-bred poultry, a service that neither the exclusive utility or exclusive fancy breeder can render in the same degree.

The beginner who intends to combine these two branches cannot be too careful in his foundation stock. The right kind of start has everything to do with future success. If the cost of the right kind of birds seems prohibitive, do not substitute cheaper stock. Better get just a few fowls of the right kind, or a setting of eggs, rather than a greater number of birds of lesser quality.

Poultry Problems Solved

Runner Ducks.

Can you tell me a poultry paper or book on Indian Runner ducks? Has any Sunday paper besides the Post-Dispatch and Republic a poultry page? What is a good laying ration for eight ducks?

C. B. F.,
1104 Walnut st., Carthage, Mo.

I do not recall any book devoted to Indian Runners. The Reliable Poultry Journal, Quincy, Ill., has a book on ducks. No poultry paper is published in the interest of Indian Runners exclusively. The regular poultry papers publish articles about them from time to time. You will find illustrations of them, and a detailed description, in the American Standard of Perfection, an indispensable book to anyone who wants his stock to be "right." Here is a good laying ration: 5 per cent cornmeal, 15 per cent wheat bran, 15 per cent vegetable foods, that is, cooked vegetables, such as potatoes, turnips, etc., 12 per cent beef scrap and 8 per cent coarse sand or grit. Mix with water to a dry, crumbly state. Feed twice a day. And always be sure that ducks have plenty of water at hand and right near the feeding place. No other papers in St. Louis print poultry pages. Papers in other cities have such pages.

"Common" Ducks.

I have half a dozen "common" ducks. I should like to know if it would pay to keep them. What season of the year do they lay? What shall I feed them, and how much? Name some winter-laying hens.

JACK, St. Louis.

I should not keep "common" ducks. If you want them for eating purposes, keep a larger variety. The Pekins are the most popular table ducks. Your "common" ducks are probably small. If you want ducks for laying purposes, try Indian Runners. They are great layers, but are rather small for the table. For a feeding ration see answer above. Ducks are strong feeders. Feed liberally. How much depends upon size. There are no varieties of hens that can be called winter "laying" hens rather than others. Any variety will lay under proper conditions, if the hens are of a good strain. Leghorns, Plymouth Rocks, Brahmas and many other varieties are winter-laying hens.

Chicken Houses.

Which variety of chickens do you consider best to raise on a 20-acre farm for a general-purpose fowl? Which are the best layers of three varieties: Barred Rocks, White Rocks or White Orpingtons?

R. E. R., Eldorado, Ark.

The American and English varieties are usually considered the best all-purpose breeds; that is, Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and Orpingtons. These are not the only all-purpose fowls, however. I cannot tell which are the best of those named. And no one else can tell. Find out which you like best. I do not know which of the three varieties you name is the best layer.

Poultry Paragraphs.

Giving close attention to details is what counts in the chicken business.

Clean houses and proper ventilation without drafts go a long way toward keeping poultry troubles in check in winter.

Fowls turned out in the cold air right after eating a hot mash are liable to colds.

When there is no other dusting material available, sift out the ashes and let the birds have them.

Other things being equal, the best layer in winter is the warm and busy hen.

It is far better to keep 10 hens and make a profit than to attempt to keep 100 and lose on the effort as a whole.

The lazy, inactive cockerel is not the kind to head a flock if the eggs are to be used for hatching. There should be plenty of vitality in evidence.

Feed the growing stock heavily and the old stock well, but moderately, at this time of year. This is my rule, at any rate.

Chasing and frightening fowls is not excusable for any reason. Keeping them tame at all times is an advantage in many awys.

If all the flock is roosting in the house now, it will be well to investigate some night to see that there is no crowding.

Exercise is a better laying stimulant in cold weather than heat-producing condiments.

A good occasional change in the diet is parched corn on the cob.

Water in which potatoes have been boiled is the best thing with which to sponge and revive a silk dress.

Lands Pike, 42 Inches, 17 Pounds.

WARSAW, Ind., Oct. 31.—Charles Carter, prominent Warsaw merchant, landed a pike measuring 42 inches in length. The fish was the smallest of three monsters taken from Center Lake, almost within a stone's throw from the courthouse, this summer. It weighed 17 pounds. In its gills was a wooden minnow, showing that it had narrowly escaped capture at some former time.

Both young males and females will do better if the sexes are separated when the cockerels become gallant to the pullets.

When the Cobra of the Sea Struck the Hawke

THE sixth British cruiser to be lost in the North Sea was the Hawke, 7350 tons, which was torpedoed Oct.16 by a German submarine. The projectile struck the ship beneath the water line and exploded her oil tanks. She staggered over on her side and sank in eight minutes. Out of the ship's complement of 544, 3 non-commissioned officers and 49 men were saved from the chill waters.

WHEN MEN ARE NO LONGER CANNON FODDER

By IDA M. TARBELL Contributing Editor of the American Magazine.

A GREAT hold of militarism has always been the notion that common men were nothing but cannon fodder. Industry has also had that idea; but men are ceasing to be cattle in industry. They have fought their way out and there are increasing numbers of owners and managers who are recognizing the value of men and saying that there is nothing that should not be done to develop their powers.

It is the recognition of the possibilities in common men that is changing things. They are too good to kill. You might just as well deliberately burn up a coal mine as let a body of workingmen wear themselves out, kill their powers. When we get it firmly into our heads that common men are too valuable to go uncultivated, undeveloped, we will have gone a long way toward discouraging war. If they are too valuable for cannon fodder, then even a Kaiser will not allow them to be so used. But the men will see to it themselves as they come to realize their value.

The stand many bodies of laborers and of socialists take against war is bound to be stronger as time goes on. It will be stronger after this war. The common man won't tolerate it when he comes to see that he is getting nothing from it and that there is a peaceful way for him to get more out of life. Moreover when he sees that those who direct his work are in sympathy with his ambition, believe in his powers, he is going to be more of a person than ever.

The new industrial order is going to do an enormous amount toward putting an end to war. It is going to make life too interesting, too prosperous and too co-operative to stop every now and then and destroy all that has been achieved in a few generations. War has been a way of getting things. Industry is going to get more things for everybody in a more interesting way. It is the co-operative principle that will do the thing.

Every man who organizes his factory force on scientific principles, trains his men, opens the way for their advancement, considers health, safety and happiness as sound business principles, who fits wages to service and takes into some form of partnership everybody who stays by, who regards business not as "his" or the stockholder's but as the joint product of everybody who contributes to it—that man is pulling the teeth of war, for he is making peace worth while, and the way the world has been run peace has not been worth while, for many men. War was more interesting and profitable.

If industry were to be continued on old lines, or as it used to be, in our own steel and wool mills and in the mines of the world, there would be little to choose between war and industry. The former had many advantages. It had its thrills and its opportunities for iron crosses and things, and it put one in a noble company and you could wear a uniform and march to a band, and if you were wounded you were given a pension and were a hero, and if you were killed you belonged to a holy company. Nothing of that kind for a coal miner or a cotton spinner or a railroad brakeman. But things have changed in industry. It also is training men as war has in the past. When every group of miners, street cleaners and shovelers become a trained body and are handled as so many soldiers are, then out of this body those fit are advanced regularly. When you get the whole body of labor handled like a decent organization, not like a dump heap, you'll have done something to make the life of the common laborer as desirable as that of the common soldier. I count enormously on the general organization of industry to make it more interesting to men than war.

Is the Bottom Dropping Out of the World?

BY GERALD STANLEY LEE

Author of "Crowds," "The Inspired Millionaires," etc.

A MAN across from me at a dinner took a fifty-cent cigar out of his mouth and replaced it with the following remark (it seemed to me a pity to take out a fifty-cent cigar for a thirty-cent remark, but probably he felt driven to it):

"Well, there's one thing about this war; it's giving us all a chance to see through human nature. The mask is stripped off from civilization. Now we know at last what men and women are really like."

I suppose the remark irritated me too much, but the man looked so comfortable and contented with it, and I was so afraid he would make another, or that every man with a fifty-cent cigar at the table would pile in and agree with him, that—well, I don't remember just what I said, but the general idea was that the world was full of old respectable rubber-tire remarks that everybody had been running on for ten thousand years, and nobody could puncture them.

This idea about civilization being a mask, for instance.

"Scratch a gentleman and you get a savage," was Noah's favorite remark. When Noah had been trying in vain for three hours to get some poor, wild, reckless relative to come into the ark, that was what he said to him. Jacob one morning got up from breakfast saying something horrid to Rachel and flinging himself out of the room; and Rachel, looking after the retreating form of her suave and elegant husband, said to her sister "Scratch Jacob and you get Esau."

Some people assume that every time a man is ugly he has just smashed a hole down through into his real self. Everybody can see what he is. And when he is decent he is pretending. All virtues (they tell us) are put on, and all beautiful and harmonious things are a kind of rouge. Civilization itself for ten thousand years is a colossal affectation, everybody keeping guard on himself lest he should give himself away, and everybody spying on everybody else and keeping them up lest everybody should give everybody else away, and the bottom should drop out of the world.

Of course the nearest thing to having the bottom drop out of the world is what is happening in Europe today.

When a man sitting quietly and comfortably at table watching the bottom drop out of a world turns to me pleasantly and says "I told you so," and acts rested and relieved by having human nature look as mean and savage as he always thought it was—it seems to me something ought to be done or said by the world to this man which will make him feel lonesome and uncomfortable.

How many people agree with him?

The most important thing that is getting ready today in behalf of Europe is what America thinks about and is going to do with this man's remark.

When this war is over, and a world has to be made once more—painfully and slowly—out of the human beings that are left, the older nations of the earth are going to gather around our boundless, thoughtless, mighty youngster-nation and say: "What does America think of human nature? What kind of a next thousand years does America pick out for it and propose to get for it?"

Then they will wait and hear what we say.

Two opposite theories of human nature are going to be laid before the American people. One or the other of these theories we are daily getting ready to vote on and adopt as our national faith — as our programme for a world. Soon there are going to be but two flags, practically, in the whole world. On one flag will be written the strange and tragi-comic saying that has plunged a whole continent into war because it believed it: "Scratch a gentleman and you get a savage." On the other will be inscribed in letters of light: "Wake up a savage and you get [illegible]tleman!"

I believe that our American people are going to rally around this latter standard—this flag of humanity—of all the graver, older nations of the earth. We are going to proclaim it upon the air as our national religion. We are going to sing with it, dedicate nations to it, build skyscrapers to it and cathedrals and railroads and cities to it.

Both of these sayings are different ways of putting the same idea—the idea that every man is mixed, woven part out of gentleman and part out of savage. Put it one way, and you have what Europe has now, a civilization that is merely waiting to be smashed. Put it the other way, and you have a civilization that is waiting to wake up. In other words, we turn it around:

"Scratch a savage and you get a gentleman."

America's peace is the fruit of the American theory of human nature. The war in Europe is the final sublime and awful culmination of Europe's theory of human nature. It is not merely a huge gun-battle that is raging in Europe. It is a theory of human nature that is raging there—the Krupp theory of human nature—"Scratch a gentleman and you get a savage."

All Europe has rallied to this belief. They have formed huge fanatical bodies of men called armies, all devoted to the faith that the only final sure way to deal with people is to assume that just underneath they are savages. They have conceived and built the dreadnought: a kind of vast sacrificial altar on water, a kind of cathedral to hate and fear and suspicion of human nature, filled day and night with the worshippers of a negative religious faith—the faith that Right cannot make Might, the faith that guns make human nature, that only armor plate can protect God. . . . Without Krupp what is to become of poor, helpless God?

* * * * * * * *

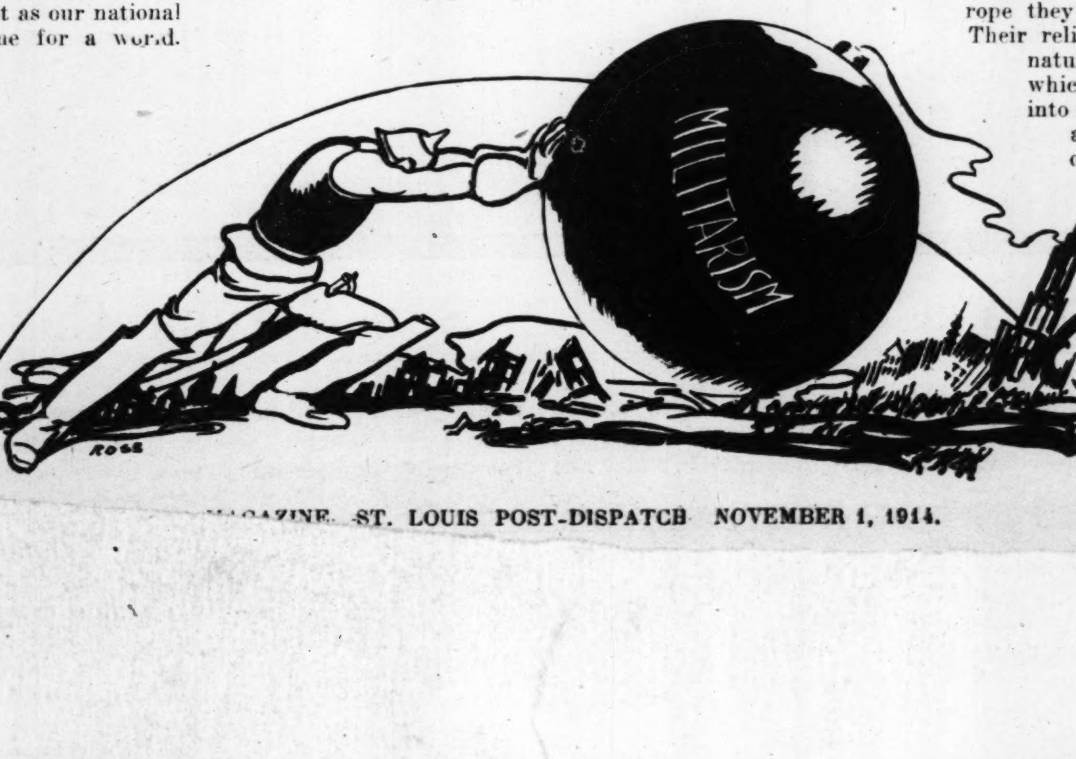
Last week two cold, dead soldiers—a German and a Frenchman—were found lying in a long death grapple under the night sky. For many hours they had been lying there together like two strange statues of their own hate—effiges of their own fear and despair about themselves and about one another. Their dead fingers had to be pried away from one another's throat. Let no man tell me these men were being themselves when they died. They died crazed with the lie they had been taught about human nature.

The only people in Europe today who are being their real selves are the Red Cross people. It is they who represent human nature. It is they who are the delegates today from all human nature, appointed by all of us to represent mankind on a sick and hysterical continent.

It is a harsh and bitter thing to say of a savage that he would do what the gentlemen of Europe are doing now.

San Francisco had a mere earthquake. Merely the ground under people's feet shook, and mere stones and iron girders fell on people's heads. But the people were fearless, steadfast, great-hearted, quiet about their souls and about one another. And men and women stood out above the ruins, heroic, unmastered, and with a sudden strange godlikeness of them. Like stars in a wide heaven the men and the women stood while the flames licked up the stones of the earth and the skyscrapers rocked like poplars in a wind. Human beings looked in each other's eyes and knew themselves, and knew God! This is what human nature is. It is what European human nature is. In San Francisco they had a mere earthquake. In Europe they are having a manquake. Their religion or theory of human nature — the hell-about-people which they have been drilled into believing for forty years, and which now millions of other men who did not believe it have been cheated into believing—has worked its way to the surface and produced its manquake.

Nobody knows what human nature is, who judges it, or constructs a world for it, by the way it acts during a manquake.



Kreisler's Own Story of Fighting the Cossacks

Great violinist, wounded in Galicia, tells how in enthusiasm of warfare he forgot he was an artist ❧ Hurrahs of his comrades the sublimest music, exclaims virtuoso ❧ His ardent hope to return to the front ❧ Praises zeal of Austrian army . . .

Fritz Kreisler and his American wife. He as a Lieutenant in the Austrian army and she as a Red Cross Nurse.

"NEVER have I heard more beautiful, more sublime music than the hurrahs of our troops at the moment they gained the enemy's position," exclaims Fritz Kreisler, most fiery of violinists, in an account of his life as an officer in the Austrian army which thrills with the passion of patriotism as vibrantly as a deep note drawn from the G-string of his own fiddle.

Kreisler's personal story of the campaign in Galicia during which he was wounded by being ridden down under the hoofs of a charge of Cossacks was published in the Neues Wiener Tageblatt of Sept. 16, a copy of which has just reached this country. He was saved by the devotion of his orderly, who carried the unconscious virtuoso off the field upon his back, although wounded by a bullet which passed through his knapsack.

Kreisler, who was lamed by a bruise of the nerves in his leg, was invalided to Vienna and placed in the care of his wife, an American woman, who is serving as a Red Cross nurse. By this time he may have rejoined his regiment at the front, as he declares it his ardent hope to do.

He is a Lieutenant of the Austrian Reserves. A translation of his vivid interview is as follows:

"IT is well known that as an artist one lives in a world peculiar to himself, with his own personal experiences and emotions. But let me say that when I hastened to my regimental colors a veritable storm came over me which drove away the artist in me. Scarcely had I donned the Emperor's coat than I felt myself a soldier, inspired with the selfsame warlike spirit that glowed in my comrades and my men.

"This same spirit of heroic self-sacrifice was displayed by our men at the very outset, in their first engagement, when in the midst of the enemy's artillery fire they dug out trenches with the utmost coolness. Before us lay a widely spread swamp, over which a single bridge gave passage. This could be commanded by our infantry. We had to lie perfectly quiet in the trenches, so that we might entice the Russians over that bridge. Behind us was our own artillery, which opened fire upon the enemy's, which was trying to locate our position. In order to do this more effectively they opened fire upon the whole field, hoping that we would betray ourselves.

"The shrapnel howled, whizzing and singing through the air. At first this music made a most uncanny impression, but one gets used to it very soon. I lay thus in the trenches, listening on and off, talking with the men, and waiting longingly for night to come. Each night—nights of plenteous moonlight—the animals brought supplies to the trenches, and we certainly received good hot meals. Never have I tasted better soup than this simple, healthy fare. So splendid was the humor of the troops that my soldiers played cards by moonlight in the trenches.

"A few days later I had the opportunity of seeing through my field glasses the Russian infantry, as well as Russian artillery, in action. We noticed then that the Russian artillery were good shots, but that about 25 per cent of their bombs failed to explode. The effect of this observation was to make our soldiers besiege the officers incessantly with requests to lead them forward into battle. They wanted to charge. We had a hard time convincing them that our inactivity was for the present absolutely necessary.

"We found, too, that most of the wounds inflicted by the Russian fire were of a light nature. This is explained by the fact that the Russian conical bullets are relatively small and are possessed of an extremely powerful penetrative effect. They leave very small wounds, in which gangrene seldom appears.

"Once during the action I had the opportunity of seeing and experiencing a grandiose battle picture. Our regiment was on a hill, as reserve. I was, therefore, an objective onlooker, as it were. It was an uncanny striking tableau. It was about 11 in the morning, and there was the vast plain below with the heavens arching above. The two armies were facing each other, each with a line extending a kilometer along the front. On one side I could behold our cavalry, stationed on a far-off wooded declivity; on the other there was a section of the Cossacks. I saw, too, our batteries and the Russians taking up their places.

"One episode here made a great impression upon us. A Russian battery had assumed its position on an edge of the woods. Scarcely had they done this when an Austrian battery, from a post where they could not be seen by the enemy, opened up a vigorous fire. For about half an hour the thundering duel continued. At first the enemy shot with full battery, then with four guns, and finally with but two, which in their turn were soon silenced. We later heard that these two cannon were captured in a charge by a squadron of Austrian cavalry.

"Wonderful, too, was the conduct of our own troops who were recruited from the ranks of our Alpine soldiers. What a glorious sight it was! And the bravura with which they made their way closer to the enemy's lines! Never have I heard more beautiful, more sublime music than the hurrahs of these troops at the moment they gained the enemy's position. Such stormy hurrahs that the wind bore to our ears!

"It was a gigantic struggle, and so great was its fascination, that all of us wished we were in the midst of it. Although each of us would have been but an atom in the mass, we were almost overpowered by the desire to plunge into the thickest of the fray. This magnetism of the battlefield affected us all to the last man. It inspired me to see how our men, with a childlike trust in their officers, and with almost insane heroism, charged forward.

Kreisler as he appeared in St. Louis on his most recent tour.

The great violinist as he returned wounded from the front, having lost 20 pounds from hunger and exposure.

"How difficult it was for me to keep my men lying quietly in the trenches! They wanted to get a look at the foe, so that they might have as many targets as possible. I could talk for hours, if I wished to tell of the anonymous deeds of bravery which every day and every hour brought forth—deeds performed with no ulterior thought, no desire for reward. How many officers' servants marched along with their superiors, even though wounded, so that they might stick by their masters!

"And there was one fellow, a cook, who refused to abandon the wounded horse who carried his cooking pot. He remained, right through artillery firing, by the side of his wounded animal, until some doctors had arrived and given the horse's wound medical treatment. How touching it is to find humans so attached to their horses, insisting upon regular treatment, and the binding and curing of wounds It really amounts to special hospitals for animals!

"When a man fights with such soldiers, and his soul swells with the same inspiration that guides them, when he beholds daily and hourly such examples of self-denying heroism right before his very eyes, he can feel no fatigue. One feels rejuvenated—new strength flows in his being.

"For 12 whole days I did not take my clothes off. And the strangest part of it is that I did not feel it as an uncomfortable ordeal. I slept every night in wet grass without any other protection than my cloak. Were this during my ordinary civil life I certainly should have contracted a heavy inflammation of the lungs. But I escaped with nothing more serious than a cold in the head.

"On the field all of one's senses become more acute. You see and hear with greater precision. I don't recall any trouble with my stomach. All nervous and neurotic symptoms disappear as if by a magic spell. The whole organism functions normally and is infused with energy.

"And if, as has happened with me, you are for a time withdrawn from the firing line, you have the sublime, strengthening feeling that you have participated in the powerful work of our glorious army with your comrades—for on the field every soldier is the equal of his officers.

"You can conceive how it is when I tell you that I look forward to the moment of my recovery with the utmost gladness, so that I may again be with my regiment—back again with the comrades of war who have in so short a time grown so dear to my heart."

The tale of how Kreisler was wounded is here taken up by his wife, in a letter to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lies of New York. She tells how the famous artist, after only three weeks' service, telegraphed he was returning on a hospital train, and how, on seing him limp off the train, "my knees went from upder me with shock."

"He had a three weeks' growth of beard," she continues, "which was more gray than black, and was hollow-eyed and cheeked. He had lost about 20 pounds in weight, and limped from a bruised nerve center in his leg.

"It seems he didn't get out of his clothes for more than 18 days, and in all that time slept under the heavens, in the damp and marsh. The accident to Fritz was the following: One night when the regiment was in trenches, in horrible dirt and mud, there was a sudden alarm and they were attacked by Cossacks. Fritz's only recollection is being suddenly overridden and of shooting the second horseman, when he lost consciousness from pain. . . . The day after Fritz was sent away another terrific battle took place, and every single officer was wounded. Fritz's own particular company was almost depleted."

DANGER!

A Remarkable Story of Submarine Warfare Against England

BY A. CONAN DOYLE

The Creator of "Sherlock Holmes"

GREAT BRITAIN, declaring war upon a minor European power, is defied by Capt. John Sirius, with eight submarines and an unusual strategic plan. In two days, Sirius destroys a score of food ships coming into British ports. Already pinch and panic are felt in London markets and at Lloyd's, But the newspapers find reassurance in the thought that the hostile submarines can't keep the sea much longer—and their base (supposedly) has been captured. "We'll see about that," said Sirius, as he starts out again to send more ships down, and prices up.

This is a story of modern warfare, of a sea fight more thrilling than ever marked the days of pirates. Science plays its part, cool and unerring in singling out its victims; but romance is there, too, the romance of adventure, throbbing in every line of a sailor's brief log book of facts. The story is no more than a pen-picture, but Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is the artist, and never was painting of Turner's more lurid, vivid and compelling.

'Heavens, what a crash! The whole stern seemed to rise up."

I WAS still looking at the sinking Edela when Vornal, who was beside me, gave a sudden cry of warning and surprise, gripping me by the shoulder and turning my head. There behind us, coming up the fairway, was a huge black vessel with black funnels, flying the well-known house flag of the P. and O. Co. She was not a mile distant and I calculated in an instant that even if she had seen us she would not have time to turn and get away before we could reach her. We went straight for her, therefore, keeping awash just as we were. They saw the sinking vessel in front of them and that little dark speck moving over the surface, and they suddenly understood their danger. I saw a number of men rush to the bows, and there was a rattle of rifle fire. Two bullets were flattened upon our four-inch armor. You might as well try to stop a charging bull with paper pellets as the Iota with rifle fire. I had learned my lesson from the Adela, and this time I had the torpedo discharged at a safer distanec — 250 yards. We caught her amidships and the explosion was tremendous, but we were well outside its area. She sank almost instantaneously.

I am sorry for her people, of whom I hear that more than 200, including 70 Lascars and 40 passengers, were drowned. Yes, I am sorry for them. But when I think of the huge floating granary that went to the bottom, I rejoice as a man does who has carried out that which he plans.

IT was a bad afternoon that for the P. and O. Co. The second ship which we destroyed was, as we have since learned, the Moldavia, of 15,000 tons, one of their finest vessels; but about half past 3 we blew up the Cusco, of 8000, of the same line, also from Eastern ports, and laden with corn. Why she came on in face of the wireless messages, which must have warned her of danger, I cannot imagine. The other two steamers which we blew up that day, the Maid of Athens (Robson Line) and the Cormorant, were neither of them provided with apparatus, and came blindly to their destruction. Both were small boats of from 5000 to 7000 tons. In the case of the second, I had to rise to the surface and fire six 12-pound shells under her water line before she would sink. In each case the crew took to the boats, and so far as I know no casualties occurred.

After that no more steamers came along, nor did I expect them. Warnings must by this time have been flying in all directions. But we had no reason to be dissatisfied with our first day. Between the Maplin Sands and the Nore we had sunk five ships of a total tonnage of about 50,000 tons. Already the London markets would begin to feel the pinch. And Lloyd's—poor old Lloyd's—what a demented state it would be in! I could imagine the London evening papers and the howling in Fleet street. We saw the result of our actions, for it was quite laughable to see the torpedo boats buzzing like angry wasps out of Sheerness in the evening. They were darting in every direction across the estuary, and the aeroplanes and hydroplanes were like flights of crows, black dots against the red western sky. They quartered the whole river mouth, until they discovered us at last. Some sharp-sighted fellow with a telescope on board of a destroyer got a sight of our periscope, and came for us full speed. No doubt he would very gladly have rammed us, even if it had meant his own destruction, but that was not part of our program at all. I sank her and ran her east-southeast with an occasional rise. Finally we brought her to, not very far from the Kentish coast, and the searchlights of our pursuers were far on the western sky line. There we lay quietly all night, for a submarine at night is nothing more than a very third-rate surface torpedo boat. Besides we were all weary and needed rest. Do not forget, you captains of men, when you grease and trim your pumps and compressors and rotators, that the human machine needs some tending also.

I had put up the wireless mast above the conning tower, and had no difficulty in calling up Capt. Stephan. He was lying, he said, off Ventnor, and had been unable to reach his station on account of engine trouble, which he had now set right. Next morning he proposed to block the Southampton approach. He had destroyed one large Indian boat on his way down Channel. We exchanged good wishes. Like myself, he needed rest. I was up at 4 in the morning, however, and called all hands to overhaul the boat. She was somewhat up by the head, owing to the forward torpedoes having been used, so we trimmed her by opening the forward compensation tank, admitting as much water as the torpedoes had weighed. We also overhauled the starboard air compressor and one of the periscope motors which had been jarred by the shock of the first explosion. We had hardly got ourselves shipshape when the morning dawned.

I HAVE no doubt that a good many ships which had taken refuge in the French ports at the first alarm had run across and got safely up the river in the night. Of course I could have attacked them, but I did not care to take risks—and there are always risks for a submarine at night. But one had miscalculated his time, and there she was, just abreast of Warden Point, when the daylight disclosed her to us. In an instant we were after her. It was a near thing, for she was a flyer, and could do two miles to our one; but we just reached her as she went swashing by. She saw us at the last moment, for I attacked her awash, since otherwise we could not have had the pact to reach her. She swung away and the first torpedo missed, but the second took her full under the counter. Heavens, what a smash! The whole stern seemed to go aloft. I drew off and watched her sink. She went down in seven minutes, leaving her masts and funnels over the water and a cluster of her people holding to them. She was the Virginia of the Bibby Line—12,000 tons—and laden, like the others, with foodstuffs from the East. The whole surface of the sea was covered with the floating grain. "John Bull will have to take up a hole or two of his belt if this goes on," said Vornal, as we watched the scene.

AND it was at that moment that the very worst danger occurred that could befall us. I tremble now when I think how our glorious voyage might have been nipped in the bud. I had freed the hatch of my tower and was looking at the boats of the Virginia with Vornal beside me, when there was a swish and a terrific splash in the water beside us which covered us both with spray. We looked up and you can imagine our feelings when we saw an aeroplane hovering a few hundred feet above us like a hawk. With its silencer, it was perfectly noiseless, and had its bomb not fallen into the sea we should never have known what had destroyed us. She was circling around in the hope of dropping a second one, but we shoved on all speed, crammed down the rudders, and vanished into the side of a roller. I kept the deflection indicator falling until a had put 50 good feet of water between the aeroplane and ourselves, for I know well how deep they can see under the surface. However, we soon threw her off our track, and when we came to the surface near Margate there was no sign of her, unless she was one of several which we saw hovering over Horne Bay.

THERE was not a ship in the offing save a few small coasters and little 1000-ton steamers, which were beneath my notice. For several hours I lay submerged with a blank periscope. Then I had an inspiration. Orders had been Marconied to every foodship to lie in French waters and dash across after dark. I was as sure of it as if they had been recorded in our own receiver. Well if they were there, that was where I should be also. I blew out the tanks and rose, for there was no sign of any warship near. They had some good system of signaling from the shore, however, for I had not got to the North Foreland before three destroyers came foaming after me, all converging from different directions. They had about as good a chance of catching me as three spaniels would of overtaking a porpoise. Out of pure bravado—I know it was very wrong—I waited until they were actually within gunshot. Then I sank and we saw each other no more.

It is, as I have said, a shallow, sandy coast, and submarine navigation is very difficult. The worst mishap that can befall a boat is to bury its nose in the side of a sand drift and be held there. Such an accident might have been the end of our boat, though with our Fluess cylinders and electric lamps we should have found no difficulty in getting out at the air lock and in walking ashore across the bed of the ocean. As it was, however, I was able, thanks to our excellent charts, to keep the channel and so to gain the open straits. There we rose about midday, but, observing a hydroplane at no great distance, we sank again for half an hour. When we came up for the second time, all was peaceful around us, and the English coast was lining the whole Western horizon. We kept outside the Goodwins and straight down Channel until we saw a line of black dots in front of us, which I knew to be the Dover-Calais torpedoboat cordon. When two miles distant we dived and came up again seven miles to the southwest, without one of them dreaming that we had been within 30 feet of their keels.

"'NOW let us run down the Channel and send prices up a little higher.'"

WHEN we rose, a large steamer flying the German flag was within half a mile of us. It was the North German Lloyd Altona from New York to Bremen. I raised our whole hull and dipped our flag to her. It was amusing to see the amazement of her people at what they must have regarded as our unparalleled impudence in those English-swept waters. They cheered us heartily, and the tricolor was dipped in greeting as they went roaring past us. Then I stood in to the French coast.

It was exactly as I had expected. There were three great British steamers lying at anchor in Boulogne, outer harbor. They were the Caesar, the King of the East and the Pathfinder, none less than 10,000 tons. I suppose they thought they were safe in French waters, but what did I care about three-mile limits and international law! The view of my Government was that England was blockaded, food contraband, and vessels carrying it to be destroyed. The lawyers could argue about it afterward. My business was to starve the enemy any way I could. Within an hour the three ships were under the waves and the Iota was steaming down the Picardy coast, looking for fresh victims. The Channel was covered with English torpedo boats buzzing and whirling like a cloud of midges. How they thought they could hurt me I cannot imagine, unless by accident I were to come up underneath one of them. More dangerous were the aeroplanes which circled here and there.

The water being calm, I had several times to descend as deep as a hundred feet before I was sure that I was out of their sight. After I had blown up the three ships at Boulogne I saw two aeroplanes flying down Channel, and I knew that they would head off any vessels which were coming up. There was one very large white steamer lying off Havre, but she steamed west before I could reach her. I dare say Stephan or one of the others would get her before long. But those infernal aeroplanes spoiled our sport for that day. Not another steamer did I see, save the never-ending torpedo boats. I consoled myself with the reflection, however, that no food was passing me on its way to London. That was what I was there for, after all. If I could do it without spending my torpedoes, all the better. Up to date I had fired 10 of them and sunk nine steamers, so I had not wasted my weapons. That night I came back to the Kent coast and lay upon the bottom in shallow water near Dungeness.

WE were all trimmed and ready at the first break of day, for I expected to catch some ships which had tried to make the Thames in the darkness and had miscalculated their time. Sure enough, there was a great steamer coming up Channel and flying the American flag. It was all the same to me what flag she flew so long as she was engaged in conveying contraband of war to the British Isles. There were no torpedo boats about at the moment, so I ran out on the surface and fired a shot across her bows. She seemed inclined to go on, so I put a second one just above her water line on her port bow. She stopped then and a very angry man began to gesticulate from the bridge. I ran the Iota almost alongside. "Are you the captain?" I asked.

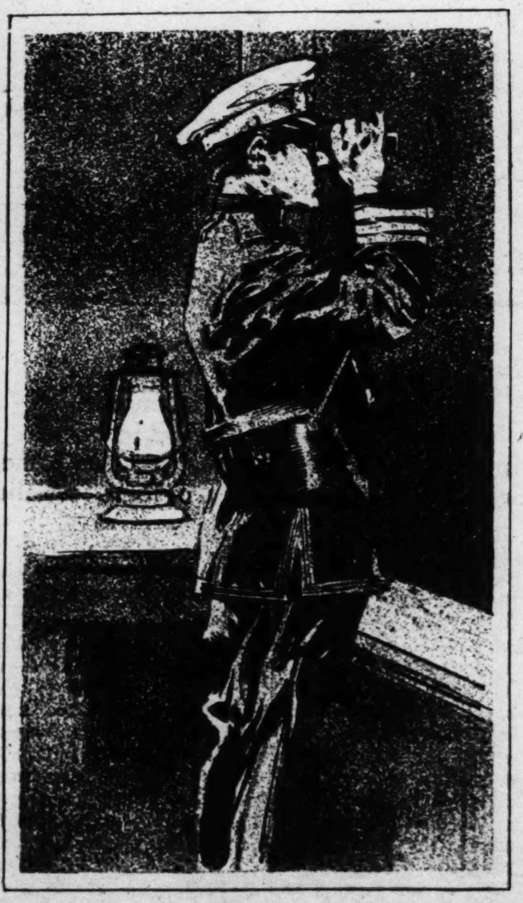
"What the "—— I won't attempt to reproduce his language.

"You have foodstuffs on board?" I said.

"It's an American ship, you blind beetle!" he cried. "Can't you see the flag? It's the Vermondia of Boston."

"Sorry, Captain," I answered. "I have really no time for words. Those shots of mine will bring the torpedo boats, and I dare say at this very moment your wireless is making trouble for me. Get your people into the boats."

I had to show him I was not bluffing, so I drew off and began putting shells into him just on the water line. When I had knocked six holes in his ship he was very busy on his boats. I fired 20 shots altogether, and no torpedo was needed, for she was lying over with a terrible list to port and presently came right on to her side. There she lay for two or three minutes before she foundered. There were eight boats crammed with people lying around her when she went down. I believe everybody was saved, but I could not wait to inquire. From all quarters the poor old panting, useless war vessels were hurrying. I filled my tanks, ran our bows under, and came up 15 miles to the south. Of course I knew there would be a big row afterward—as there was—but that did not help the starving crowds around the London bakers, who only saved their skins, poor devils, by explaining to the mob that they had nothing to bake.



"Before morning the Beta reported itself."

BY this time I was becoming rather anxious, as you can imagine, to know what was going on in the world and what England was thinking about it all. I ran alongside a fishing boat, therefore, and ordered them to give up their papers. Unfortunately, they had none, except a rag of an evening paper which was full of nothing but betting news. In a second attempt I came alongside a small yachting party from Eastbourne, who were frightened to death at our sudden appearance out of the depths. From them we were lucky enough to get the London Courier.

It was interesting reading—so interesting that I had to announce it all to the crew. Of course, you know the British style of headline, which gives you all the news at a glance. It seemed to me that the whole paper was headlines, it was in such a state of excitemen Hardly a word about me and my flotilla. We were the second page. The first one began something li this:

CAPTURE OF BLANKENBERG!

Destruction of the Enemy's Fleet—Burning of Town—Trawlers Destroy Mine Field—Loss of Two Battleships—It Is the End?

Of course, what I had foreseen had occurred. The town was actually occupied by the British. And they thought it was the end! We would see about that.

On the 'round-the-corner page, at the back of the glorious resonant leaders, was this little notice:

"HOSTILE SUBMARINES

"Several of the enemy's submarines are at sea, and have inflicted some appreciable damage upon our merchant ships. The danger spots upon Monday and the greater part of Tuesday appear to have been the mouth of the Thames and the western entrance to the Solent. On Monday, between the Nore and Margate, there were sunk five large steamers, the Adela, Moldavia, Cuso, Cormorant and Maid of Athens, particulars of which will be found below. Near Ventnor on the same day was sunk the Verulam, from Bombay. On Tuesday the Virginia, Caesar, King of the East and Pathfinder were destroyed between the Foreland and Boulougne. The latter three were actually lying in French waters, and the most energetic representations have been made by the Government of the Republic. On the same day The Queen of Sheba, Orontes, Diana and Atlanta were destroyed near the Needles. Wireless messages have stopped all ingoing cargo ships from coming up Channel, but unfortunately there is evidence that at least two of the enemy's submarines are in the west. Four cattleships from Dublin to Liverpool were sunk yesterday evening, while three Bristol-bound steamers were blown up in the neighborhood of Lundy Island.

"However vexatious these incidents may be, we may console ourselves by the reflection that since a submarine cannot keep the sea for more than 10 days without refitting, and since the base has been captured, there must come a speedy term to these depredations."

Another small paragraph was more eloquent:

"The price of wheat," it said, "which stood at 3 shillings a week before the declaration of war, was quoted yesterday on the Baltic at 52. Maize has gone from 21 to 37."

"Good, my lads!" said I when I read it to the crew. "I can assure you that those few lines will prove to mean more than the whole page about the fall of Blankenberg. Now let us get down Channel and send those prices up a little higher."

If St. Louis Should Be Bombarded

Army ordnance expert tells what effect of 16-inch shells would be on the modern skyscraper ❧ Mississippi river an almost impassable barrier to invasion from the east

HENRY S. BRECKINRIDGE, Assistant Secretary of War, was quoted in a recent London newspaper as saying that a well-equipped army of 200,000 men, such as are fighting in Europe, could march across the United States if successfully landed. While American army officers laugh at the suggestion, it has opened up an interesting field of speculation as to what would happen to our large cities if the United States were invaded. Because of its situation on the Mississippi River, St. Louis would have to be occupied before any program of extensive conquest could be approximately realized. Of course the prospect of invasion of the United States by a foreign army is so extremely remote as to be scarcely worth considering. Before an army could be transported across either ocean, it would become necessary to destroy the American navy in its entirety. This would be necessary because if only one or two battleships were left and could get within striking distance of the great fleet of transports necessary to carry the hostile forces, more damage could be inflicted on the enemy in a few hours than might result from a long campaign.

To destroy the American navy outright would be considerable of an undertaking. To do it within a year would require such an overwhelming preponderance of force as could only come from an alliance of several great Powers, assuming that the Powers will come out of the present conflict with something like their existing maritime forces.

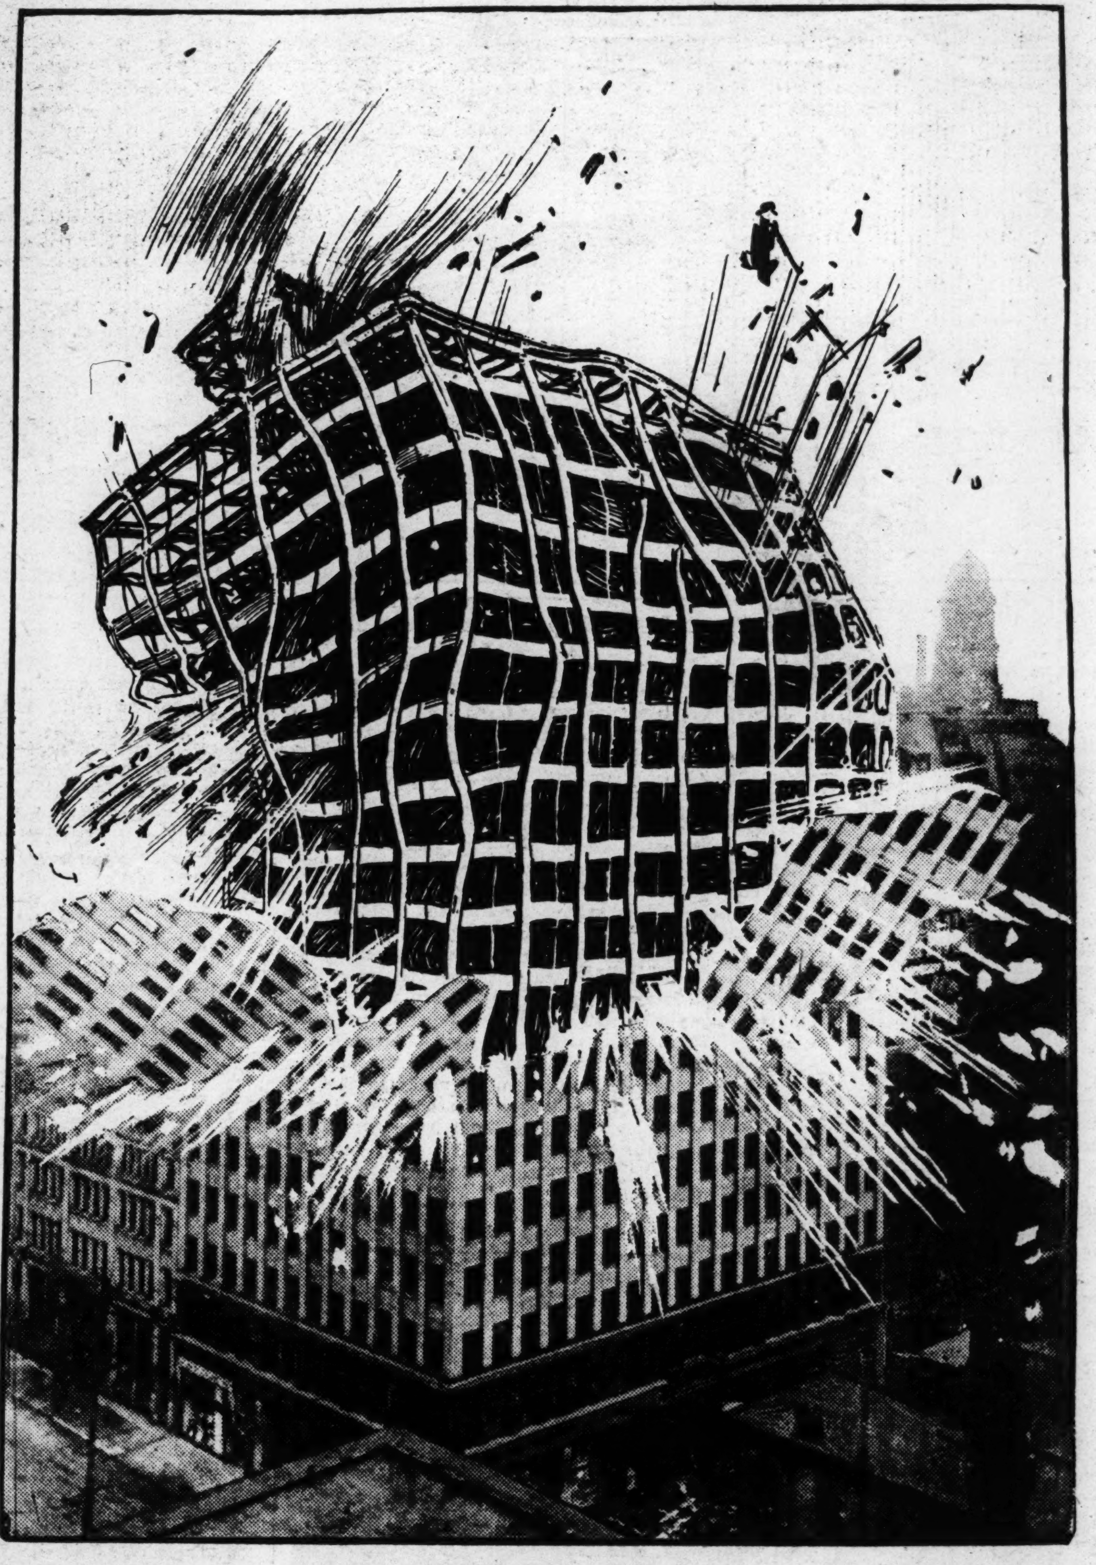
While this was being done the American Government would be putting a million or so men in the field. Army officers say the United States would not again be caught napping, as it was in the Spanish War, when the clumsy efforts to manufacture a big army within a few months caused many a contemptuous shrug from military experts abroad. The American war college not only has worked out innumerable plans of campaign, covering almost any conceivable emergency, but has accumulated in accessible depots the necessary supplies for a great host of soldiers.

Even if Mr. Breckinridge's hypothetical landing of 200,000 foreign soldiers, thoroughly equipped, could be effected within the first few weeks of a war, it is extremely doubtful that it would get any great distance on its march from the Atlantic to the Pacific. A United States army officer, who is a close student of military matters, pointed out some of the obstacles. He made it clear that even if this force should crush all the 80,000 or 90,000 regular soldiers who could be sent against it immediately, it would still face a campaign that would make the march of Cyrus and his 10,000 Greeks a puny effort in comparison.

It would be harassed night and day in guerilla warfare, it would be isolated in a hostile country, cut off from its bases of supplies and worn down until a sufficient force of volunteer soldiers could be put into the field to annihilate it by sheer weight.

According to this same officer, if more than double that force of invaders could get a foothold on the Pacific coast, the American army could abandon the coast cities, fall back on Sacramento, Cal., as headquarters and by holding three or four mountain passes between the Canadian border and the Mexican border indefinitely keep the enemy from advancing.

If an invading force could force its way across the western coast ranges, the Rocky Mountains and the great plains, or if it could sweep the Atlantic seaboard, penetrate the Appalachian Mountains and drive its way through the populous eastern states, it would still come to an almost impassable barrier when it struck the Mississippi. Before it could pass the Mississippi it would have to establish an enormous preponderance of men and material over the defenders.



"If," said the ordnance expert, "shells from a huge 'brummer' should hit one of these big buildings at a place where steel girders joined it would bring the whole structure tumbling."

Naturally any such movement would have as its primary objective the occupation of St. Louis. This city is important not only because of its wealth, but because of the enormous stores of war material here and because of its strategic situation at the intersection of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers. The army officer above referred to outlined some of the things that would be necessary for the defense of St. Louis.

Unfortified as it is, St. Louis would require, the officer thinks, a defending army of upwards of 200,000 men, considerably more than double the present entire strength of the United States army. Such a force, he believes, could repulse an attack from the east, no matter how large the opposing force, if the attack were delivered from the front. It would be necessary to dig entrenchments from somewhere south of Jefferson barracks clear to the mouth of the Missouri and man them with infantry and artillery.

The bridges could then be wrecked and it would be necessary for the enemy to cross in boats. Because of its great width and the speed of its current, it would be virtually impossible to construct a pontoon bridge in the face of fire that would be adequate for bringing across the river any considerable force. Before the enemy could cross the river it would have to accomplish some flanking operation, probably going far to the north or south of the city. To accomplish this successfuly it would need a great preponderance in numbers.

What, however, would happen to St. Louis if the town were subjected to such a bombardment as reduced the forts at Antwerp would be appalling to contemplate. According to the officer, the enemy would need only to post such weapons as the great German siege guns on the hills southeast of East St. Louis to reduce the business section of St. Louis to matchwood in a few hours. To protect the city from such a bombardment it would be vitally necessary to hold those hills against all the efforts of the enemy. To hold them would be a dangerous and difficult task for troops in the field, for if they were defeated and compelled to fall back, they would have the big river behind them and might be terribly punished before they could cross it to the safety of the entrenchments.

According to the army officer, if the enemy fired only shrapnel shells at the big downtown buildings of the city, they would be riddled and those of steel construction would not be destroyed. He thinks, however, that if a shell from a huge "brummer" or "busy Bertha" should hit one of these big buildings at a place where the steel girders joined, it would bring the whole structure tumbling into a mass of ruins. From the East St. Louis hills it would be child's play for an expert gunner to hit the Railway Exchange Building, or any of the other big downtown buildings.

An architect and a structural engineer were asked what they thought would be the effect of heavy artillery fire upon the big steel-girder office buildings. Both of them inclined to think that, while the damage would be great, it would take more shots to raze one of the modern buildings than it would a structure of solid masonry.

They pointed out that if a shell were to fall on the roof of the Railway Exchange Building it might drop through a floor or two before it exploded. The great power of an explosion is derived from the impact on the cushion of air. The air is thrust outward in every direction. Naturally it would seek the point of least resistance.

The result would be that it would smash out the windows and all the thin partitions adjacent but would have little effect upon the steel skeleton of the building.

According to the architect and the engineer, between 50 and 100 shells would be required to demolish the Railway Exchange Building entirely and each of them would have to strike a vital point on a steel column. Looking from above straight down the building might be conceived as built in sections. Each section would be in the form of a square, with three vertical columns in each side of the square. If a shell struck the column at the exact center of the square, it might cause it to give way. The section of the building embraced within the square would collapse.

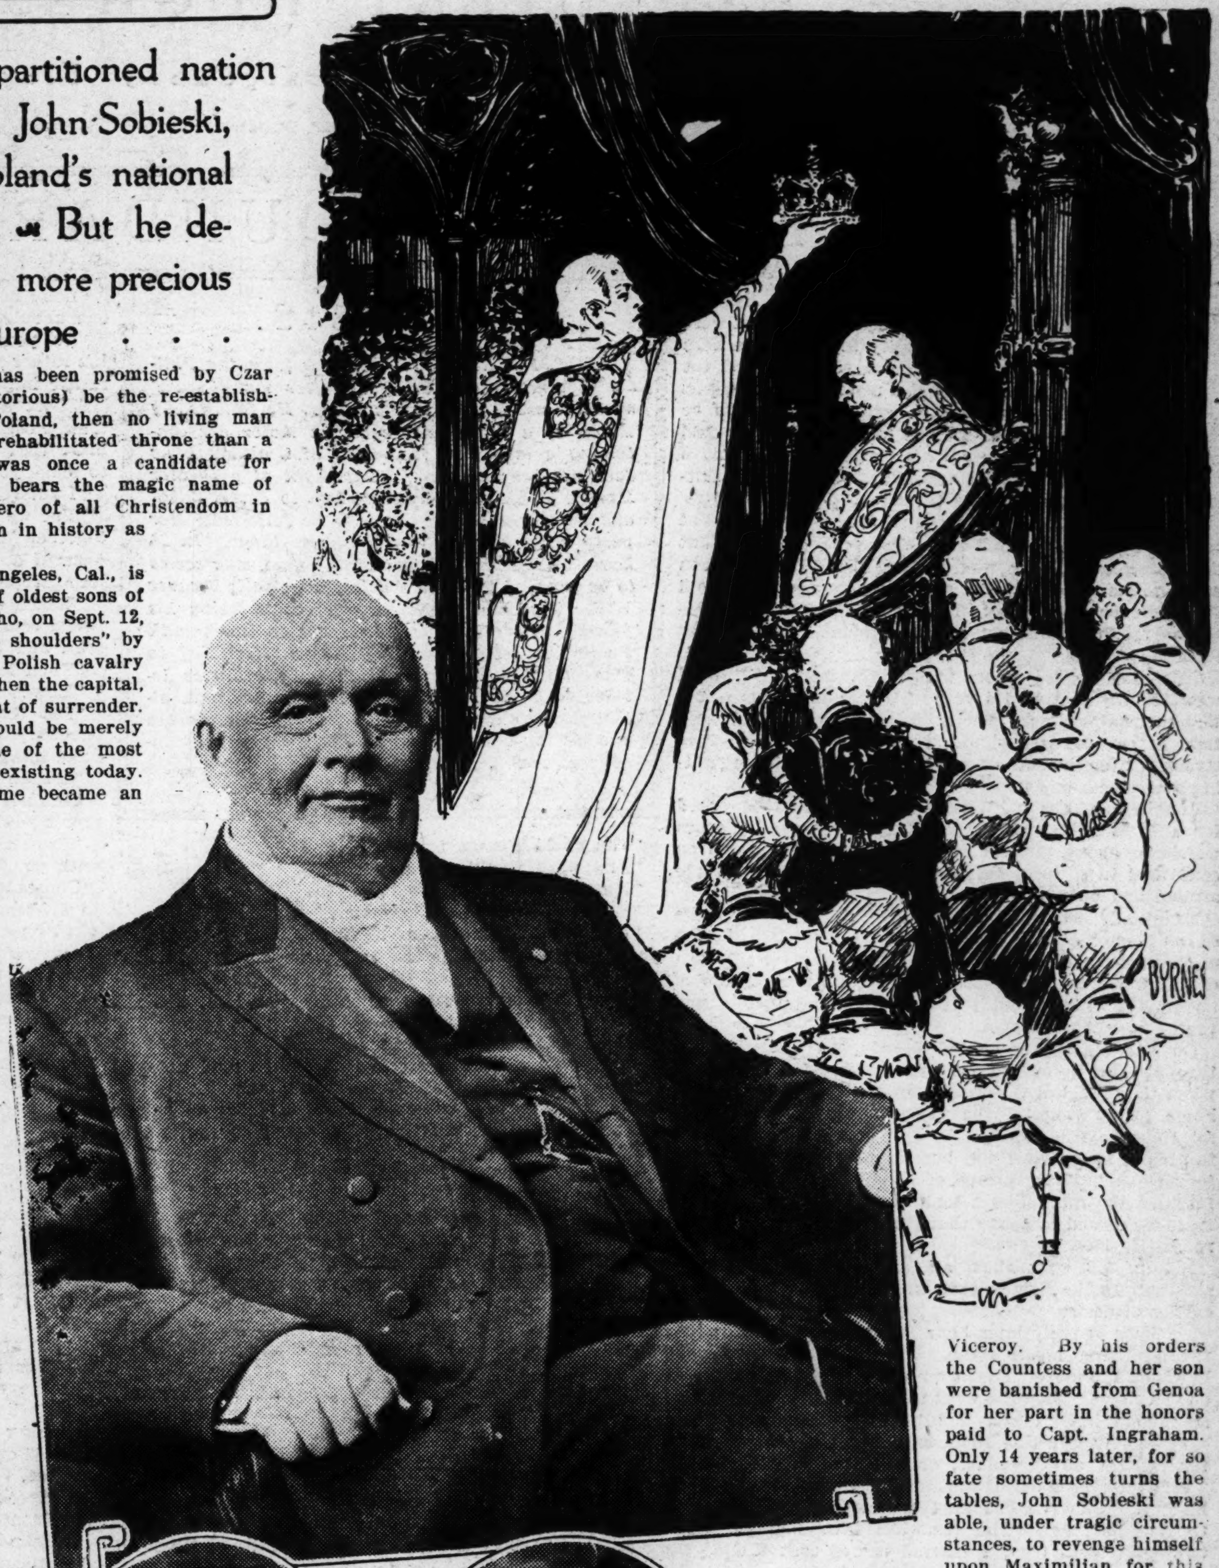
Both of the architectural authorities agreed that the damage from a shell exploding within a building of solid walls would be immeasurable. It has been estimated that a thickness of 30 feet of solid concrete is necessary to stop the largest German shells. The explosion would cause a solid wall to bulge outward and the whole house to collapse.

The largest known guns available for use on land will shoot from seven to nine miles. Little is actually known about the range of the new German 12-inch guns, but it is supposed that they can shoot much farther. Some of the largest naval guns are said to be powerful enough to carry effectively 16 miles.

If nine-mile guns were placed on the hills at Edgemont, the nearest point the East Side bluffs are to the business section, they could throw shells out about as far as Jefferson avenue and Olive street. Mortars could be placed back of the Edgemont bluffs and easily drop shells into the downtown district. If the new German guns are as powerful as they are rumored to be, one of them could be located in the Courthouse square of Belleville and drop shells on the Post-Dispatch building. It is not at all necessary for modern gunners to see the target, which they can hit just as easily from behind high hills as if the range were unobstructed.

Former Candidate for Missouri Governor Has Best Title to Be King of Poland

Russia's promise to restore partitioned nation revives pretensions of Col. John Sobieski, sixth in descent from Poland's national hero, King John Sobieski ☙ But he declares American citizenship more precious than any Kingship in Europe . . .



Col. John Sobieski, descendant of Poland's greatest king and once candidate for Governor of Missouri, as he is today.

SHOULD one result of the war (as has been promised by Czar Nicholas in case the allies are victorious) be the re-establishment of the ancient kingdom of Poland, then no living man would have a better claim to the rehabilitated throne than a romantic American citizen, who was once a candidate for Governor of Missouri—a man who bears the magic name of Poland's greatest King and the hero of all Christendom in the seventeenth century—John Sobieski, known in history as King John III.

Col. John Sobieski, now residing in Los Angeles, Cal., is sixth in descent, through the direct male line of oldest sons of oldest sons, from the great warrior monarch who, on Sept. 12, 1863, removed "the pagan yoke from Europe's shoulders" by charging in person at the head of the fiery Polish cavalry against the Turks, under the walls of Vienna, when the capital, abandoned by Emperor Leopold, was at the point of surrender.

The proffer of a scepter to Col. Sobieski would be merely a fitting climax to his stirring life story, one of the most remarkable odysseys adventured by any man existing today. How this scion of a resplendent historic name became an exile in infancy, and in turn a stowaway, a soldier of fortune under two flags, a politician and a man of letters; and how, in Mexico, he was able to take terrible vengeance for the wrongs inflicted upon his nation by Austria—these episodes constitute an epic of heroic proportions.

John Sobieski was born at Warsaw Sept. 10, 1842, 72 years ago. At that time all that remained of the former great Polish monarchy was the minute Republic of Cracow. All the rest of the unhappy country had been partitioned between Russia, Prussia and Austria. But the little republic was the center of a patriotic propaganda throughout Poland. The French revolution of 1848, which drove Louis Philippe from his throne and placed Louis Napoleon in power as President of France, convulsed all Europe.

The partitioning nations chose this moment to trample out the last spark of liberty in Poland and suppressed the Republic of Cracow. The harshness of the oppressors drove many of the Polish nobility into armed rebellion—among them Count John Sobieski, father of Col. Sobieski. They were overcome by superior numbers and Count Sobieski was taken prisoner.

His wife was Isabel Bem, sister of the famous Polish patriot, Joseph Bem, who became a Mohammedan and joined the Turkish army solely in order that, as a man without a country, he might have an opportunity of fighting against Russia. To this high-spirited woman the Czar sent word that her husband was to be executed; but that if she would take the oath of fidelity to the Russian crown and permit her son to be reared in the Orthodox Russian faith, she might remain in possession of the Sobieski estate, one of the largest in Poland. The noblewoman refused the bargain with scorn. She and her son were permitted to spend six hours with Count Sobieski in his dungeon at Warsaw, and then were thrust across the Austrian frontier to shift for themselves. On the next morning Count Sobieski, his wife's father and her two brothers were hanged from the same scaffold.

The widow and her son were soon driven out of Galicia and went to Posen, where they were permitted to remain only two weeks. They fled to Breslau, but the name Sobieski was suspect to the authorities, and the police ordered them away after a few months. They spent a year in Berne, Switzerland, where the Countess, who a short time before had been immensely wealthy, earned a livelihood by teaching music and languages. Next they went to Genoa, then the harbor of more political exiles than any city in the world.

Here the Countess was the leading figure in an episode connected with one of the most stirring events in the history of the United States navy. A Hungarian military officer, Martin Koszta, had been involved in the movement of 1848-9 to detach Hungary from the Austrian empire and had fled to the United States. In 1852 he made a declaration under oath of his intention to become an American citizen, at the same time renouncing all allegiance to any foreign Power. A year later he went to Turkey on business, and at Smyrna was seized, dragged by force on board the Austrian brig-of-war Huszar and confined there in irons. In the harbor were three Austrian men of war of 150 guns.

It happened that there was also in port the little American sloop of war St. Louis, which could muster but 22 guns. But its captain was Duncan Nathaniel Ingraham, who had served on the Bon Homme Richard under John Paul Jones. Having been trained in so heroic a naval school, Capt. Ingraham laid his sloop alongside the big Huszar, on July 2, 1853, and declared that if Koszta were not surrendered in three hours he would open fire.

The Austrians were so astounded by the American's audacity that they agreed to release Koszta in custody of the French Consul-General at Smyrna until an agreement could be reached. The Austrian Government demanded at Washington that Capt. Ingraham be disavowed and called to a severe account, and that "satisfaction proportionate to the outrage" be tendered to Austria. Secretary of State Marcy replied with a ringing declaration to the effect that Koszta, although not fully naturalized, had by his declared intention of becoming a citizen been invested with the nationality of the United States. Austria, rather than go to war with the United States, yielded, and Koszta was released. The incident became known in history as the Koszta affair.

The name of Capt. Ingraham, hero of this memorable exploit, rang through Europe. So, when it was announced that he was about to anchor off Genoa in the St. Louis there was great enthusiasm among the exiles who had reason to hate Austria. Countess Sobieski organized a demonstration in honor of the naval officer of the young republic across the seas who had dared, single-handed, to defy the empire.

At her direction the horses were removed from the hero's carriage and it was dragged to his hotel by political exiles, all of them noblemen. One of the excited spectators was the 11-year-old son of the Countess.

But Austria was then master of Northern Italy, and Maximilian, brother of the Austrian Emperor, was Viceroy. By his orders the Countess and her son were banished from Genoa for her part in the honors paid to Capt. Ingraham. Only 14 years later, for so fate sometimes turns the tables, John Sobieski was able, under tragic circumstances, to revenge himself upon Maximilian for this act of tyranny.

He and his mother went to London, where, two years later, she died, exhausted by grief, wandering and privations. Her 13-year-old orphan was left penniless and friendless. But in his memory lingered the vision of the American hero, Capt. Ingraham, and the stories he had heard of the land of freedom across the Atlantic, where there were no remorseless Kings to oppress the people and where every man was a sovereign.

So the orphan made his way to Liverpool and stowed himself away on board the American man-of-war Constellation, with Capt. Cravens in command. He remained in hiding until the ship was well out at sea. The Captain, instead of punishing him, took an interest in the high-spirited boy. He landed him at New York on Washington's birthday, 1855. His one accomplishment, as Col. Sobieski now relates, was blowing a bugle. So Capt. Cravens obtained for him an appointment as bugler in the United States army, in which he served 10 years.

In the sixth year of his service and in his nineteenth year, the Civil War began.

VII. OVER THE BOUNDARY WALL

SYNOPSIS.

LIEUT. FORBES, U. S. A., back from the Philippines, sees New York after many years' absence and it goes to his head. He follows, by means of a Fifth avenue bus, a motor car containing a lady who fascinates him, although he does not see her face. That night at a theater Murray Ten Eyck introduces him to Persis Cabot and he learns she is the lady he followed. Her party adopt him and teach him to tango. In 24 hours he is deeply in love with Persis, who seems to be engaged to Willie Enslee, principally because Willie is rich and the elder Cabot is losing his footing in Wall street. In order to lunch with Persis, Forbes is compelled to ask Mrs. Neff to make up a party for the Ritz. Willie Enslee desides to go to his place in the country and, although there are no servants there, Persis, Forbes and all the others go with him, a thoroughly unconventional house party.

LUNCHEON was breakfast again, with a few additions. Winifred had lost the hand of the range, and what successes she had were ruined by her inability to corral the herd on time. The soup was salted beyond the sanction of even the most amiable palate. The chickens were guaranteed not to be resurrections from a cold-storage tomb; but they would have been the better for a little longer hanging and a little shorter cooking. The vegetables had not been salted at all, nor warmed quite through.

"I've survived the fireless and foodless cooking at breakfast and luncheon," said Murray Ten Eyck, "but the dinnerless dinner would finish me. Winifred can afford to bant, I can't. I'm going to give a party. We'll all dine over at the Port of Missing Men and have dinner on me; that will get us through until tomorrow at least."

This was agreed upon with enthusiasm. Winifred was tactfully proffered a vote of thanks and a vacation. There remained only the afternoon to kill. Persis thought to steal a few minutes with Forbes, and they struck out for the sunken gardens, but Willie came panting after them and constituted himself their guide.

Unable to shake off Willie, Persis pleaded the need for a little sleep and retreated to her room. Forbes wandered about, puzzled at the appalling loneliness he could feel in so beautiful a place, with so many people around and only one missing.

Eventually, however, the sun, which had begun the day with such ecstasy for him, began to approach the top of the western hill, and the caravan set out for the Port of Missing Men, which proved to be a little cottage of an inn set upon the edge of a small mountain and surveying a vast panorama.

On the piazza the crowd dined well and returned through the great park to the homeward roads, for when they reached the Enslee bridge it was like coming home. The wings of the motor had made it possible for them to run 25 miles to dinner and 25 miles back in almost negligible time; but the exultant speed of the journey and the multitude of sights that had fled past fatigued the mind like a long voyage, and it was once more a subdued company that gathered before the living-room fireplace.

Silence fell upon them all, and they sat once more staring into the flames, each finding there the glittering castles of desire.

At some vaguely later hour Persis rose and went into the adjoining music room. Forbes longed to follow, but feared to move. She strummed a few inexpert chords on the piano. Then she went to the victrola and searched among the black disks. A little later she called out:

"Everything in this house is last year's. There's not a turkey trot on the place, or a tango."

A little later she spoke again: "Here's a bit of ancient history." She cranked up the machine, set the needle to the disk, and "The Beautiful Blue Danube" came twanging forth from a scarred record that riddled the melody with curious spatterings.

The once world-victorious rhapsody had almost a dirge-like tameness now; but it brought Willie to his feet, and he began to circle the room with Persis. She drooped over his inferior shoulders like a wilted flower.

Other waltzes were played, but Willie's appetite for them was quenched after the first. He sank into a chair by the living-room table and took up a story in an old magazine.

Persis waltzed with Forbes more often than the others; but Willie never knew. In fact, it was not long before his head grew heavier and heavier, and finally, with his chin on his necktie, he slept.

The dancing, the copious wine and the sudden warmth of the weather soon led to the opening of doors. From the music room one stepped out into a kind of cloister opening on the lawn.

Eventually Persis set a two-step record whirling on the machine. Forbes asked her to dance with him. As they were passing one of the doors a little gust of summer-night air blew upon them so appealingly that Forbes swung Persis across the sill and stepped out into the cloister, where the moonlight streamed like a distant searchlight.

The music followed them, but muffled by the pat of their feet along the tiled floor. To silence this noise Forbes danced across the margin of stone out upon the smooth, short, silent grass. Persis made no resistance and he danced always a little deeper into the lawn, a little farther from the house. He danced her round the inky plumes of a cluster of cedars. These shut out the lights from the door. The music was quite lost here, and Persis hummed the tune herself; seemed to croon it into his very heart.

The moonlight fell about her in a magic veil, and Forbes could not let her go. He caught her closer to him. But before his lips could brush her cheek, she broke his clasp and said:

"We must go back."

"Oh please!" he implored.

"The others will wonder."

"What of it?"

"We can't afford to set them talking."

"We can't afford to waste a night like this in a stuffy room."

"There will be other moonlight nights."

"But we may not be alive. It may rain tomorrow. And the day after I must be getting back to my post."

"Really? Oh, that is too bad!" There was such deep regret in her words that he took courage to say:

"If we could only walk together a long, long distance! Doesn't the moon seem to—to command you to march?"

"You could change them."

"And what would the others say?"

"Must they know?"

"How could they help knowing?"

"If you told them all good-night and went to your room and changed your slippers, and came out later, and I met you"——

It was a very elaborate conspiracy for him, and she gasped:

"Do you think I am quite mad?"

"I know I am, or it seems that I'll go mad unless I can be with you in this wonderful light."

"It is wonderful, but—even if I were crazy enough to do as you say you would spoil it all—you wouldn't be good."

"Oh, yes I would. I promise."

"Solemnly?"

"I solemnly promise that I will not annoy you. I will not presume to—to kiss you unless you ask me to."

"That ought to be safe enough," she laughed. "Well, I'll think it over. And now we really must get back. Alice and Murray are at the door looking this way."

They returned slowly to the cloister, discussing the beauty of the night and the brilliance of the moon. Persis told on herself; confessed that she had been foolish enough to dance on the grass, and her shoes and stockings were drenched.

Willie, who was partially awake, supplied the necessary excuse for absence. He demanded that she change at once and not risk pneumonia.

"If I'm sent to my room I won't come back," said Persis, and yawned convincingly. This set up a contagion of yawns. Everybody was instantly smitten with sleepiness.

There was some flurry over the nightcap drinks, and a leisurely exit of all except Persis, who left immediately. When the rest went up to their rooms, Forbes went to his.

He waited with frantic impatience for the light to go out in Ten Eyck's room. It was nearly midnight when Forbes felt it safe to venture out into the hall and tiptoe downstairs. He had just arrived there when Persis stole down and met him. They did not venture even to whisper. He took her arm and groped with his free hand through a black tunnel to a blacker door, which opened stealthily and admitted a flood of moonlight.

They did not wade out into the midsea of the lawn. He remembered Persis' dictum that behind the blinds there are always eyes. Like snickering truants they skirted the balustrade, the shadowy privet hedge, the masses of juniper and bay and box, till they reached a point where the winding stairway dropped down between its high brick walls.

The shadows were doubly dense here, and Persis hung back, but Forbes laughed at her for a poltroon, and she refused to take the dare. He was so afraid that she might fall that he finally suggested:

"If you are afraid of stumbling here, I—I'm not forgetting my promise; but I just wanted to say that I—I don't mind holding on to you, if you want to ask me to."

She declined with whispered thanks. Down, down the walk drifted. At length they heard a murmur—the mysteriously musical noise of a fountain. They rounded a few more curves and came upon a niched Cupid riding a dolphin, from whose mouth an arc of pure water poured with a sound of chuckling laughter.

They stood and watched it like children for a long while. Then Forbes urged Persis along to the lowest of the circular levels.

There he led her to a bench and dropped down beside her. They both looked into the huge caldron of the hills, filled with moonlight as with a mist.

Persis and Forbes sat worshiping like Parsees of the moon, in awesome silence, till Forbes could no longer hush the clamor in his heart.

"Miss Cabot," he said, "I promised not to annoy you. Would it annoy you if I told you that—that I love you with all my heart and soul and being?"

"How could you love me?" she answered, softly, hoping to be contradicted. "You've known me only a few days."

"There are some people we live with for years and never like nor understand; others we know and love the moment our eyes meet."

"And did you love me the moment our eyes met?"

"Long before that. I loved the back of your hat and one shoulder."

"Do you tell everybody you meet the same thing? It's rather a stale question to ask a man, but you do seem rather impulsive on so short an acquaintance."

"Short acquaintance? We've seen each other more than most people see [illegible] each other in six months. I know that I shall never be happy unless I can be trying to make you happy."

"I am very happy just now," she murmured.

"But we can't sit here forever, and we can't even be together for more than a day or two. I want you for my own. I don't want to see you only—only on—Mr. Enslee's property."

"Which reminds me," Persis said, with a tone of dispelled romance, "that we are still on Mr. Enslee's property, and it doesn't seem fair to him."

"Then let's leave Mr. Enslee's property."

"How? In an airship?"

"See that wall down there? That is one of the boundary lines. If we were over that I could tell you some things that I've got to tell you."

"It's an awfully long way."

"It's not far. Let's walk to keep warm. You are cold, aren't you?"

"Frozen, that's all. Well, come along, I'll go part way with you."

Constantly pausing to turn back, but finding it easier to drift on down than begin the upward climb, Persis went on and on, arm in arm with Forbes. By and by they reached the boundary wall. He helped her to set one knee upon it and mount awkwardly. He clambered up and sat down at her side. Their backs were toward the Enslee demesne, their feet in the unknown.

And there, without delay, Forbes told her that she must be his wife, told her that he loved her as woman had never been loved before.

His hands fought to caress her, his lips tingled to be again at her cheek, but he kept his promise.

"Couldn't you possibly love me, Miss Cabot? Couldn't you possibly?" he pleaded; and she whispered, with a sad sweetness:

"I could—all too easily, Mr. Forbes, but I am afraid to love. I thought I never should love anybody really. And now that I know I might, it's so terrible an awakening that I—I'm afraid of it."

"Don't be afraid," he implored. "Love me. Let yourself love me."

"I'm afraid, Mr. Forbes."

"Then if you're afraid to love, it's because you don't, because you—can't."

This hurt her pride. Her heart was so swollen with this new power that it would not be denied either by herself or him.

"Yes, I could! Oh, I could! But I mustn't—I mustn't let myself love you—now now—not so soon."

"Then I must wait," he sighed, and said no more. And she sat in silence, though there was a great noise of heartbeats in her breast and in her temples and ears.

She began to shiver with the night and with her excitement. She wanted to say they must start back; but her tongue stumbled thickly against her chattering teeth. The world was bitter cold—so far from him. In his arms would be warmth and comfort as at a fireplace. She was lonely, unendurably lonely and wistful.

Finally he took his eyes from the moon and bent his gaze on her. He saw how her shoulders quaked.

"You're cold, you poor, sweet child—you're cold. I'm dying to take you in my arms, but I promised—I promised.

She was afraid to surrender, and afraid to defy the will of the night. The chill shook her with violence again and again till she felt the world rocking, the stone wall wavering. Then she leaned toward him and whispered:

"Kiss me!"

He could hardly believe that he heard, but he caught her to him and sought her lips with his. Immediately, she was afraid again. Again she hid the preciousness of her mouth from him, writhed and struggled and twisted her face, hid it in his breast. But now he fought her with gentle ruthlessness, took her cold cheeks in his cold hands, and, holding her face up to the moonlight, kissed her eyes, and her dew-bespent hair and her cheeks, and pressed the first great kiss on her lips. They fled from him no more.

Only a moment she lingered in Elysium, and then she sighed:

"We must go back—we must! I hate to, but there's tomorrow—and the people! What wouldn't they think if they saw us?"

He knew that they would not think the beautiful and holy thoughts that filled his heart and hers, and he consented to climb back from this lowly heaven to the upper purgatory.

So Persis and Forbes climbed slowly the winding stairway, and their mood was one of hallowed reverence for God and His beautiful world. They skirted the balustrade with a guilty rapture, avoiding the almost daylight of the moon-swept lawn. They opened the door with the innocent stealth of good fairies.

The mounted the stairway with their arms about each other's bodies, and in the hall above they kissed and whispered, "Good-night! Good-night! Good-night!" and tiptoed in opposite directions.

At their remote doors they paused to throw kisses into the black dark toward each other's invisible presence.

Forbes turned the knob of his door with fierce caution, and waited to hear Persis close hers. There was a faint thud and a little click like a final kiss. He tiptoed across his sill, and was just closing his door after him when he heard somewhere in the hall the soft thud of another door, the click of another lock. His heart leaped as if a fist had seized it suddenly. Someone else had been in the hall. In the deep black there was no telling whose door it was. But someone else had been in the hall.

Forbes' eye fought in vain against a dark that was like a black bandage. He felt sure that it was not Ten Eyck's door that had thudded so slyly shut. But he could not even guess whether it were the door of Enslee or of one of the women.

He waited and waited, hoping that a light would be made, but there was no glimmer along any sill. Even Persis was evidently undressing in the dark, or in the moonlight that must be pouring into her room.

Forbes reproached himself for bringing this blight on Persis. It was he that had dragged her protesting from the house, persuaded her to steal forth, led her into the distance, and kept her while the respectable hours slipped by.

The only atonement he could make was to proclaim as speedily as possible that their love was honest and that they carried the franchise of betrothal. Tomorrow he must make sure of her. He closed his door with the utmost caution and got out of his clothes and into his bed with all possible silence. He was exhausted with the long day of love's anxieties and triumph, and the new anxiety he had stumbled into. He had yet to tell her how far from rich he was. He had yet to persuade her to leave this golden world of hers for the parsimony he offered.

In the chaos of his perplexities he fell asleep, and did not waken till the whirr of the telephone on his wall called him from his slumber. Winifred's voice gruffly informed him that his breakfast was waiting for him.

Forbes ate his breakfast in the mixed humor of a detective and a suspect. He studied the others, and they seemed to study him or to avoid him. He could not settle upon even a theory.

After the breakfast he sought an opportunity for a secret word with Persis. She was told off to the bedmaking squad. She was even to do his room? He caught her at the foot of the stairs. She warned him with a gesture and he broke the news to her without preparation:

"Last night when we were saying good-night someone else was in the hall."

Her lips parted in a gasp of terror, and her eyes widened. "How do you know?" she whispered.

"I heard her—or him."

"Who was it?"

"I don't know. I can't even guess," he mumbled.

"Do you think it could have been—All right, Mr. Forbes, I'll be careful of your razor blades."

This last aloud for the benefit of Mrs. Neff, who came by and spoke with icy severity—was it ironical?

"Chambermaids are not allowed to flirt with customers in this hotel." She went on up; and Persis followed helplessly, leaving Forbes distraught.

Later he saw her at his windows, beating his pillows. The intimate implication thrilled him, and he threw her a kiss while pretending to take his cigar from his lips, and she retreated into the embrasure to answer it with a secret waft from her own mouth.

Forbes had hoped to be invited to ride with Persis, and had put on a pair of civilian riding breeches and his army puttees. But he was ignored in the program for the day, announced by Enslee, who decreed that he and Persi would ride over to Sleepy Hollow Country Club, by the quietest roads they could find, while the rest were to motor across. They would all have luncheon together and return in the same way. "If that horse of mine doesn't break both our fool necks," he added.

Persis was wearing the bowler hat and the coat and breeches and boots Forbes had seen her in that morning in Central Park. He knew how well she rode in the bridle path, but he feared for her in the motor-swept roads. He told her so, but she laughed again.

She set her foot in the stirrup, flung her leg across the saddle, and warned the groom away. While W got one foot in the stirrup and went hopping hither and yon in pursuit of it with the other, Persis was getting acquainted with her own mount, humoring him in his schoolboy hilarity, and sharply repressing any malicious mischief.

The moment Willie was aboard the two horses whirled and charged down the winding road in a mad gallopade. And Forbes' heart galloped in his breast as he wondered if he should ever see her alive again. He had felt this same fear for her that first day on the avenue, when her motor shot forward so wildly. He was always feeling afraid for her.

The motor passengers were in no haste to be gone, and they loitered, watching the mad riders on their breakneck descent, now hidden, now revealed again by a swerve in the road, a jut of hillside or a group of trees.

Enslee had sent his own driver and his own car to take them to the club, and with an unusual thoughtfulness had ordered the robe rack filled with lilacs. And so they rode behind a screen of purple beauty, and breathed in a spicy air filtered through flowers.

The car reached its destination without encountering Persis or Willie. The clubhouse was a pile of creamy brick, tall and spacious as a hotel. The servants were in livery, some of them already in summer white, with dark collars and lapels—"to distinguish them from the members," said Ten Eyck.

Ten Eyck and Winifred offered Forbes a racquet in their tennis game, but he preferred to be alone with his loneliness. He accepted Ten Eyck's suggestion, however, that he might care to go round the links, and Ten Eyck procured him a bag of clubs and a caddy, promising him ample time for at least nine holes before Persis could arrive.

With the usual luck of beginners and re-beginners at a game, Forbes did his best work at the start. His first drive from the first tee drew such a white arc across the sky that even the caddy was moved to an exclamation of applause, hitched his sack on his shoulder and set off in search of the ball with vicarious pride.

As he worked his way up a steep ridge green and vast as the back of a tidal wave, he saw at the top of the height a bunker thrusting out into the sky like the comb on top of a Spanish woman's head. He paused for his approach, to let two women clear the way. He recognized Mrs. Neff and Alice, but they did not see him. Mrs. Neff seemed to be in a mood of displeasure. There was vexation in her very heels.

Thinking the pathway clear, Forbes mumbled "Fore" and, picking the ball up neatly in his iron, sent it over the edge of the bunker with a hurdler's economy of gap. And just as it escaped the top a head arose, followed by a pair of shoulders.

Forbes shrieked an ex post facto "Fore!" but it was drowned in the snort of pain and rage from the man, whose shoulder blade stopped the ball.

As Forbes ran forward with abject apologies a glaring face peered over the bunker and roared out:

"Damn it, man! Where do you think you—— Why, it's you! Harvey, my boy!"

"Senator Tait!" Forbes cried, darting for one corner of the bunker as Senator Tait dashed for the other. They paused, turned back, and made for the opposite ends, stopped short foolishly in the middle, and laughingly clasped hands over the ledge.

"I'll come round," said Forbes; and the Senator met him, put his arms about him, and hugged him with a fatherly roughness. After he had told Forbes how much he had grown and how fine he was, and Forbes had exclaimed how young the Senator looked, the Senator hugged him again.

"I can't believe that you are yourself. The first time I saw you was in your father's arms; you were about half an hour old, and your father said you were very handsome. I couldn't see it at the time, but you've improved. I wish he could see you now. I was with him, you know, when his horse fell with him and"——

"Yes, I know," Forbes murmured. "You were his best friend—our best friend."

"It's a shame that we've lost sight of each other. We mustn't any more. Life's too short to waste in not seeing people we love. I must say, though, I'm rather hurt at your not looking me up before. Mrs. Neff has just told me you've been in town nearly a week."

"I—I've been very busy," Forbes stammered.

"So I hear, you young scoundrel!" Tait growled jovially. "You're at the heartbreaking, heartaching age, and no time to spend on old duffers like me when young beauties are drooping on every bough. But what's this Mrs. Neff tells me about your being rich? I hadn't heard it. I hadn't expected it, either, for your father was a better fox hunter than a financier. What did you do—invent some new explosive—or a new gun?"

Forbes smiled bitterly and explained the foolish mistake, too foolish to correct at first, and later embarrassing.

The Senator stared at him a moment searchingly, with a tender inquisition, then said:

"Unless you're golf hungry, let's send the caddies back and have a talk."

"By all means," Forbes agreed; and even as he cast his glance about in search of his caddy he looked farther to see if Persis were not visible somewhere from this Pisgah height. He was fond of the old man, but he loved the young woman.

Forbes' caddy was standing by the ball, and came in with it, cannily claimed his pay and tip for the full course, and hurried back with the Senator's caddy to pick up other fares. They took both the golf bags with them to put away.

Tait and Forbes strolled aside from the traffic of the golf course and found a quiet seat in the shade.

"And now tell me," the Senator said. "Did you see my daughter Mildred at the clubhouse?"

"No, I don't think so. I don't suppose I'd know her. She was a little tike in short skirts when I saw her last."

"She's a big woman now—regular old maid—fanatic on charities—fine mind—great heart. Good Lord, Harvey, what that child knows! Her mother to her dying day never heard of half the things that young spinster discusses, and has never had a flirtation so far as I know. But she's wonderful, Harvey. I'm afraid of her, but I do admire and love her. Women like her make these mad tango trotters look pretty cheap."

Forbes resented the unintended criticism on the wonderful soul the tango mania had enabled him to meet and know so well so soon. He murmured something formulaic about his eagerness to see Mildred, and then he added, with a little hint of raillery:

"You congratulated me on my wealth. Am I to congratulate you the same way, for your success with little Miss Neff?"

The Senator stared at him. "My success with little Miss Neff? What do you mean? Who's little Miss Neff? Alice?"

"Yes."

"What success should I have with her?"

Forbes was confused, and tried to back out, but Tait would know, and Forbes at last explained: "Alice says that her mother is trying to marry her off to you."

Tait's eyes popped, and his mouth gaped stupidly, then he swore with sonority, and blurted out: "Do you mean that that old haridan of a Cornelia Neff has gone mad enough to—Why, Alice is younger than Mildred! Well, I'll be double—— Is Alice in on the game, too?"

"Oh, no; Alice is crazy to marry Stowe Webb."

"Poor old Jim Webb's boy, eh?" Forbes nodded. "Well, why doesn't she?"

"He has no money."

"Oh, she's one of those."

"He hasn't even a job."

The Senator puffed like an unmufflered cut-out, and he frowned like a pirate, then he began to chuckle in the manner of a pirate ordering the plank put over the side.

"He hasn't a job, eh? Well, I'll get him one. I'll that old lady in her own coin. Make a fool out of

THE MYSTERY OF THE GLASS TUBES

Cleek and Narkom, as nautical detectives, on this smuggling case of extraordinary complexity, furnish a narrative breezy with comedy at first, but verging upon tragic horror as the old Apache enemies from Paris turn tables on the men from Scotland Yard and trap them in a scuttled vessel putting out to sea. Ailsa Lorne is the rescuing angel, and Cleek's spectacular handcuffing of an "honest" Breton skipper proves no error, after all.

MR. NARKOM entered his private office at Scotland Yard and dropped into his chair with a sigh of satisfaction. For the first time that week his report sheet was clear. Good! He had scotched that gang of smugglers at last. Now he would be freed from the reproaches of his colleagues and the sneering smiles of his subordinates, as every fresh case had been brought home to his notice. Gad! he'd just like them to be in his place for a week, and see whether they could stop unlimited cargoes of saccharine being passed through the customs house absolutely free from duty, and discovery only being made when it was too late, through the channels of the secret service spies and the political underworld.

The oncoming of footsteps outside caused him no qualms of doubt.

"Well, Petrie!" he said blandly to the detective sergeant who stood with bared head in front of him.

"Yes, sir. There's another case got through somehow," gave back Petrie with just the suspicion of a change in his imperturbable countenance.

"Another case! Good heavens, man, it's impossible! Every boat and passenger has been searched—by my own men."

"Yes, sir," said Petrie, patiently; "but it's true, sir. Mr. Ketseven at the customs says the source of information is an umim—um"——

"Unimpeachable one," rapped out the Superintendent irritably.

"Yes, sir. That's the sixth case this week. Someone's making a pretty good thing out of it. Saccharine's fetching a fair price just now, but if this goes on"——

"Goes on!" Mr. Narkom drummed his fists impatiently on the arms of his revolving chair. "Goes on! If it does, I shall."

Detective Petrie gave a little dry cough, then finally, taking his courage in both hands, spoke out.

"There's only one man as can get to the bottom of it, sir, and that's Mr. Cleek."

"Oh, I know that," flung out Narkom, frowning harder than ever. "But the devil of it is, he's not in town—I haven't seen or heard of him for more than a month. The constant strain of dodging that band of Apaches who have sworn to be revenged on him for the old Vanishing Cracksman days has finally told, even on Cleek, and I persuaded him to go away and rest and let his enemies think him out of the country. Just wait until we catch them at some of their desperate games in England—then we shall rid Cleek of his incubus forever. Meanwhile, here's the blessed saccharine coming in as if it were wheat. I've half a mind to run down and see Miss Lorne, but Lord! what'd be the use? No one will ever find Hamilton Cleek, unless he's ready to come back."

AT that particular moment the telephone bell jangled harshly, and Mr. Narkom spun around like a shot and seized hold of the receiver.

"Gad! it's himself. I . . . Oh, my dear chap, I never was so glad to hear you back in my life." He lowered his voice. "For heaven's sake, don't go away—hold the line one minute." He turned to the waiting sergeant. "Clear out, Petrie; send Lennard along and——

"You there? Dear old chap—that's all right. Just sent for Lennard. You can't think how glad I am to get you back—What's that? Urgent? I should think it is urgent. I say, can you contrive to meet me somewhere this morning? What? Yes, I'm listening. . . . Oh, Lord! the beggars still at it! I thought our last trick had done 'em—All right; I understand—it's a bit risky; but we'll do our best. Villiers street, in half an hour, eh? All right. Good-by."

And that was how it came to pass that half an hour later, Mr. Maverick Narkom, restored to his old debonnaire self, after a brief interlude with Lennard, sallied forth from Scotland Yard, where, drawn up to the curb, the very latest thing in limousines awaited him.

A crowd of boys had collected idly around the entrance to the yard, and in the midst of the crowd, ragged and dirty, was a little Parisian gamin, his sallow face alight with curiosity.

"Charing Cross Station, Lennard, as fast as you can streak it. Must catch the 11 o'clock boat train," shouted Mr. Narkom as he jumped into the limousine. "And keep a sharp lookout for Mr. Cleek at Villiers street; he'll be disguised as an old road sweeper."

"Very well, sir," said Lennard. "Crickety! only three minutes!" he said, as he wrenched the car around and let her go.

Yet he was not so quick as the little French urchin, who was scudding along the Embankment as if the limbs of the law were already after him.

Fate was evidently against Lennard that morning, in the shape of another car, obviously of foreign make and driven by a French chauffeur, who seemed bent on getting in his way.

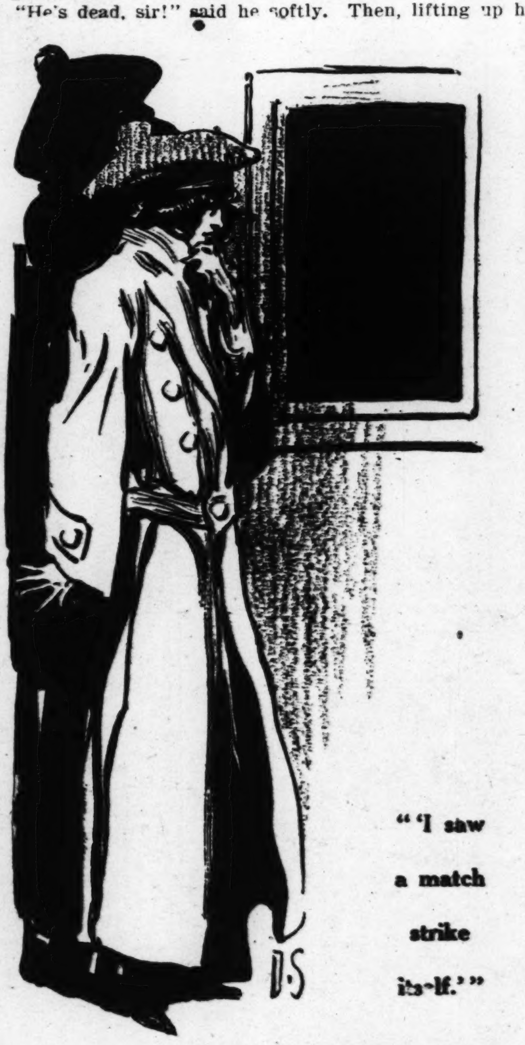
It was just under the arch approaching Villiers street that the accident happened.

The rival cars were very close to one another, and Lennard, glancing up at the little army of road sweepers busily engaged in their labors, was just in time to see one of their number put down his broom, run out into the open roadway directly in front of the fast-moving wheels, and then, even as he shut down the brakes and tried to bring the machine to a standstill, the front wheel caught the figure of the running man, whipped him quickly off his feet and sent him crashing down into the roadway!

HE spoke as he fell, muttered something, gave a little writhing twist of the body—and was still, lying like a dead thing, even as Mr. Narkom, with a hurried exclamation of dismay, jumped from the limousine and went pelting toward him; while a policeman on point duty, receiving a sign from his chief, hurried off and waved back the fast-approaching crowd.

But Lennard was already kneeling beside the still figure, with horror in his face.

"He's dead, sir!" said he softly. Then, lifting up his leathern driving apron, he threw it reverently over the body.



"'I saw a match strike itself.'"

Meanwhile, the other car had driven rapidly away in the opposite direction.

"Leave it to me," said Mr. Narkom loudly to the constable. "I'll take him to the hospital in the car." And, disdaining all assistance save Lennard's, he lifted the body, with the apron still covering its face, and deposited it gently in the limousine; then slowly and sadly the car was turned around and went wending its way in the direction of Westminster Hospital.

Yet, when that hostile crowd had been left far behind, and the blinds of the limousine drawn by Mr. Narkom's hand, a strange thing happened.

The "corpse" sat up suddenly, throwing off the leathern apron, and looked at the Superintendent with a little laugh of triumph.

"Well played!" said he in Cleek's voice. "Played, indeed, Mr. Narkom—and Lennard, too; though I had to remind him with a wink to cover my face up. What's that, dear friend?"

"A pretty close shave," struck in the Superintendent grimly. "But it ought to give those Johnnies the 'push' for a while at least. They drove off like mad things—taken completely in, by James. Directly I spotted that little French rascal on the steps I knew something was up. That's why I gave out your disguise!"

"A master stroke that!" Cleek said delightedly. "I had to make a sprint for it, though, and I shall be glad of a rest. Not that there's much chance of that while you're around. I only rang you up just to let you know I was still upon this planet, but—who's in trouble this time, dear friend, eh?"

"I am," said Mr. Narkom simply. "I wasn't able to tell you over the phone, but the heads are blaming me—I wonder what the dickens they expect me to do!"

"Supposing you tell me the facts," interposed Cleek gently.

"It's a case of continual smuggling. It's saccharine! That's the stuff—and it's coming in like water—no one knows from where, or how; only that not a cent of duty is being paid."

"Oho!" said Cleek. "The limousine seems to be traveling, Mr. Narkom. Where the dickens?"——

"Southampton," the Superintendent flung out. "Capt. Kesteven, in command of the Custom House at Southampton, is perfectly enraged over the whole affair."

"H'-m-m!" said Cleek. "It isn't another case of a barking dog and the burglar's friend, I suppose?"

"Well, we must wait and see. Meanwhile, as it sometimes happens that the fool knows the least and sees the most, we had better dig up that blithering idiot, 'George Headland' again and see what he can do in the matter. And if we can't manage to put a stop to this business and finish it once for all, then my name's not Hamilton Cleek."

IT was getting late in the afternoon when they reached Southampton, but they drove straight down to the Customs House, where Mr. Narkom sent in his official card, and together with Mr. George Headland waited in the little anteroom.

Two minutes later the door was flung open and an elderly gentleman fairly hurled himself upon the Superintendent, clasping his hand as though it belonged to a long-lost brother. It was Capt. Kesteven, the head of the Customs House—a fine, hale, gray-hair, graybeard man of about 55 or 60; a man with something of the naval officer in his bearing.

Mr. Narkom coughed slightly and waved a hand toward Cleek.

"This is Mr. George Headland," said he, smiling a little at the Captain's look of amazement. "He's taken the place of Cleek—Hamilton Cleek, you know."

"How long has it been going on?" asked Cleek quietly, tipping his head on one side and looking so stupid that Capt. Kesteven eyed him in unveiled contempt.

"Nearly five weeks," he replied. "We have a special number of secret service men making observations, and they reported the cases to me. I have it down here in my official report book." He plunged over to his desk, returning to the table with a large leather-bound volume.

"Here you are. 'June 8. Case of saccharine got through free—reported. Starchpelt.' Here you are again. Fifteenth ditto, nineteenth ditto, twenty-fourth ditto"——

Cleek put up a detaining hand.

"Stop. One minute," said he blandly. "There couldn't be any mistake, I suppose? This Starchpelt, as you call him, is"——

"One of the finest men in the service!"

"Hum! Ah, quite so. And now, what about the boats? What manner of craft are they, and where do they come from?"

"Havre, mostly. You see, just now vast quantities of French dairy produce, fruit and vegetables, are being landed, and we had every one searched. Mr. Narkom's own men have been hard at it. Even the crates of vegetables were overturned, and the boats themselves searched from stem to stern, I tell you, sir, if we don't get at the bottom of it, all the French vessels will go to Portsmouth. They are grumbling bitterly"——

"At what?" struck in Cleek. "They don't like being searched, you mean?"

The Captain shook his great head.

"No, it's the delay. Everything depends on their catching the boat trains to London, and all this searching takes time"——

"H'mmm! And what boats have you in harbor now?"

"Practically none but our own sailing out tomorrow—the great liners, you know—and a few small trading boats from Havre and Brittany. They bring most of the dairy produce—make weekly trips, you know . . . I don't see there's anything more to tell you."

"Nothing else to do but to look at the boats for ourselves," said Mr. Narkom, looking over into George Headland's dull countenance.

FROM the Customs House it took but a few minutes to reach the harbor, which bore a curiously deserted look. Two or three great liners lay in the docks, while at anchor rode a few French boats, their decks still crowded with the empty packing cases in which their cargoes had been carried.

"Every one of these was unloaded under police supervision," said Capt. Kesteven. "That one is La Chirefloux," pointing to the nearest. Skipper, Marton—as honest as the day. La Rose"——

"Hullo!" interrupted Cleek abruptly, as his eyes swept over the various boats. "That's a peculiar looking object—that black one at the end."

Capt. Kesteven's eyes lit up.

"Ah! so Jean Bertillot has come back! That means my wife has returned from her holiday as well. She said she would sail with Jean. A splendid fellow. That's his boat, La Fleurette Noire, Mr. Headland, sailed and owned by the finest man that ever drew breath and, by heaven! the most unhappy."

Cleek switched around suddenly.

"Unhappy?" he said. "Why should he be unhappy? Or perhaps you don't know?"

"It happens that I do, for I—or, rather, my wife—was the means of making him happy for a few months."

He drew out his cigarette case and offered it to Cleek and Mr. Narkom, and lighted up himself.

"It was this way," he continued. "He lost his young wife on their wedding trip five years ago. He is a sort of protege of mine, and I have known him since a lad, when he came to and fro on his father's boat before him. My wife, some years ago, had a desire to have a maid from Brittany, and Jean Bertillot said he would procure her one from his native village, some twenty miles from Havre. He brought us Rose-Marie, a girl as good as gold, industrious and honest to a fault, and we were delighted with her. Well, we did not have her long. Bertillot discovered that she was more necessary to him than to us, and married her forthwith, and we—my wife and I—attended the wedding in Brittany. You may imagine our dismay when Le Fleurette Rouge, as the craft was then called, returned—without her."

"JEAN BERTILLOT was tall and dark, with heavy lids and soot-black hair. There was an olive hue to his skin, but his fine eyes were gray and wrinkled at the corners, and his mouth had a pathetic droop. He stared at the newcomers with simple unconsciousness."

"Hullo!" said Cleek. "So he changed the name of his boat, eh?"

"Yes," said the Captain. "I think he worshipped Rose, and after her death—it seems she ate something on board that upset her, was taken ill and died, and he buried her at sea—I tell you, it changed the man entirely. He is morose and embittered, but faithful—my word! I'd trust my life to Jean Bertillot. Well, when he got to harbor he spent all his profits on painting his boat black—everything is black, inside and out: cabins, decks, sails—as you can see for yourself—a regular raven among doves. And he rechristened her La Fleurette Noire. Very few men, in fact, will work on her; they say it's so damnably gloomy. Well, it's his own boat and he does what he likes. Ever since that day, however, he has plied to and fro with his butter and eggs; he doesn't seem to care whether he sells them or not. He's just broken-hearted."

"I'd like to have a chat with him," said Cleek.

"So you shall, Mr. Headland," said the Captain, nodding, with perhaps just a little tinge of irony in his voice. "Perhaps he'll be able to give you some ideas"——

Cleek followed the Captain down to the little quay, where La Fleurette Noire had anchored.

A LITTLE crowd of gesticulating, chattering Breton sailors was on the deck—amidst them just a patch of white: a woman's dress—and at the sight of its wearer Cleek gave a cry of delight and rushed off at headlong speed, leaving Mr. Narkom to explain to a justly aggrieved customs officer that this was one of the latest methods of detecting.

But Cleek cared nothing for customs or smugglers just then, for here was Ailsa Lorne—Ailsa, who had vanished from the riverside cottage, leaving but a brief note to "allay any anxiety"—and what a week of intolerable torture it had been, only Cleek, and perhaps the youthful Dollops, could have told.

"A stroke of sheer luck this—or am I dreaming?" he said softly, with a little laugh of pure rapture. "Aisla, is it you, my dear, my dear!"

"It is indeed," she made answer with a quick smile. "But surely you got my letter? It should have arrived today."

"For which Mr. Narkom is to be blamed!" cried Cleek.

"Never mind!" said she softly, looking up into his face with shining eyes. "I am rather glad you did. Somehow, the crossing on that boat has got on my nerves. My old Breton nurse, Jeannette, wrote to me that she was very ill, so I could not help but go to her; and, not wanting to wait for the other boat, I crossed on this one, with Mrs. Kesteven. But"—she gave a little shiver—"it's full of mystery."

"Mystery? What do you mean by that, I wonder?"

They had crossed to the end of the quay, and Ailsa gave a little nervous look over her shoulder before she answered him.

"It is only just a fancy, I expect, on my part. The blackness of everything got on my nerves—but I fancied I heard all kinds of queer sounds—unexpected sounds during the night. I slept on board last evening, so as to be sure and get the boat train; but it was so hot and stuffy in the cabin that I threw a cloak around me and went out on deck.. It was then I saw"—

"Saw what?"

"It sounds so silly," she said apologetically, "but I saw a match strike itself on a box. I know you'll think I am mad, but I saw the yellow match box and the white match. I even heard the scratching sounds it makes when it ignites—yet there was no one there! I don't think I was ever so frightened in my life."

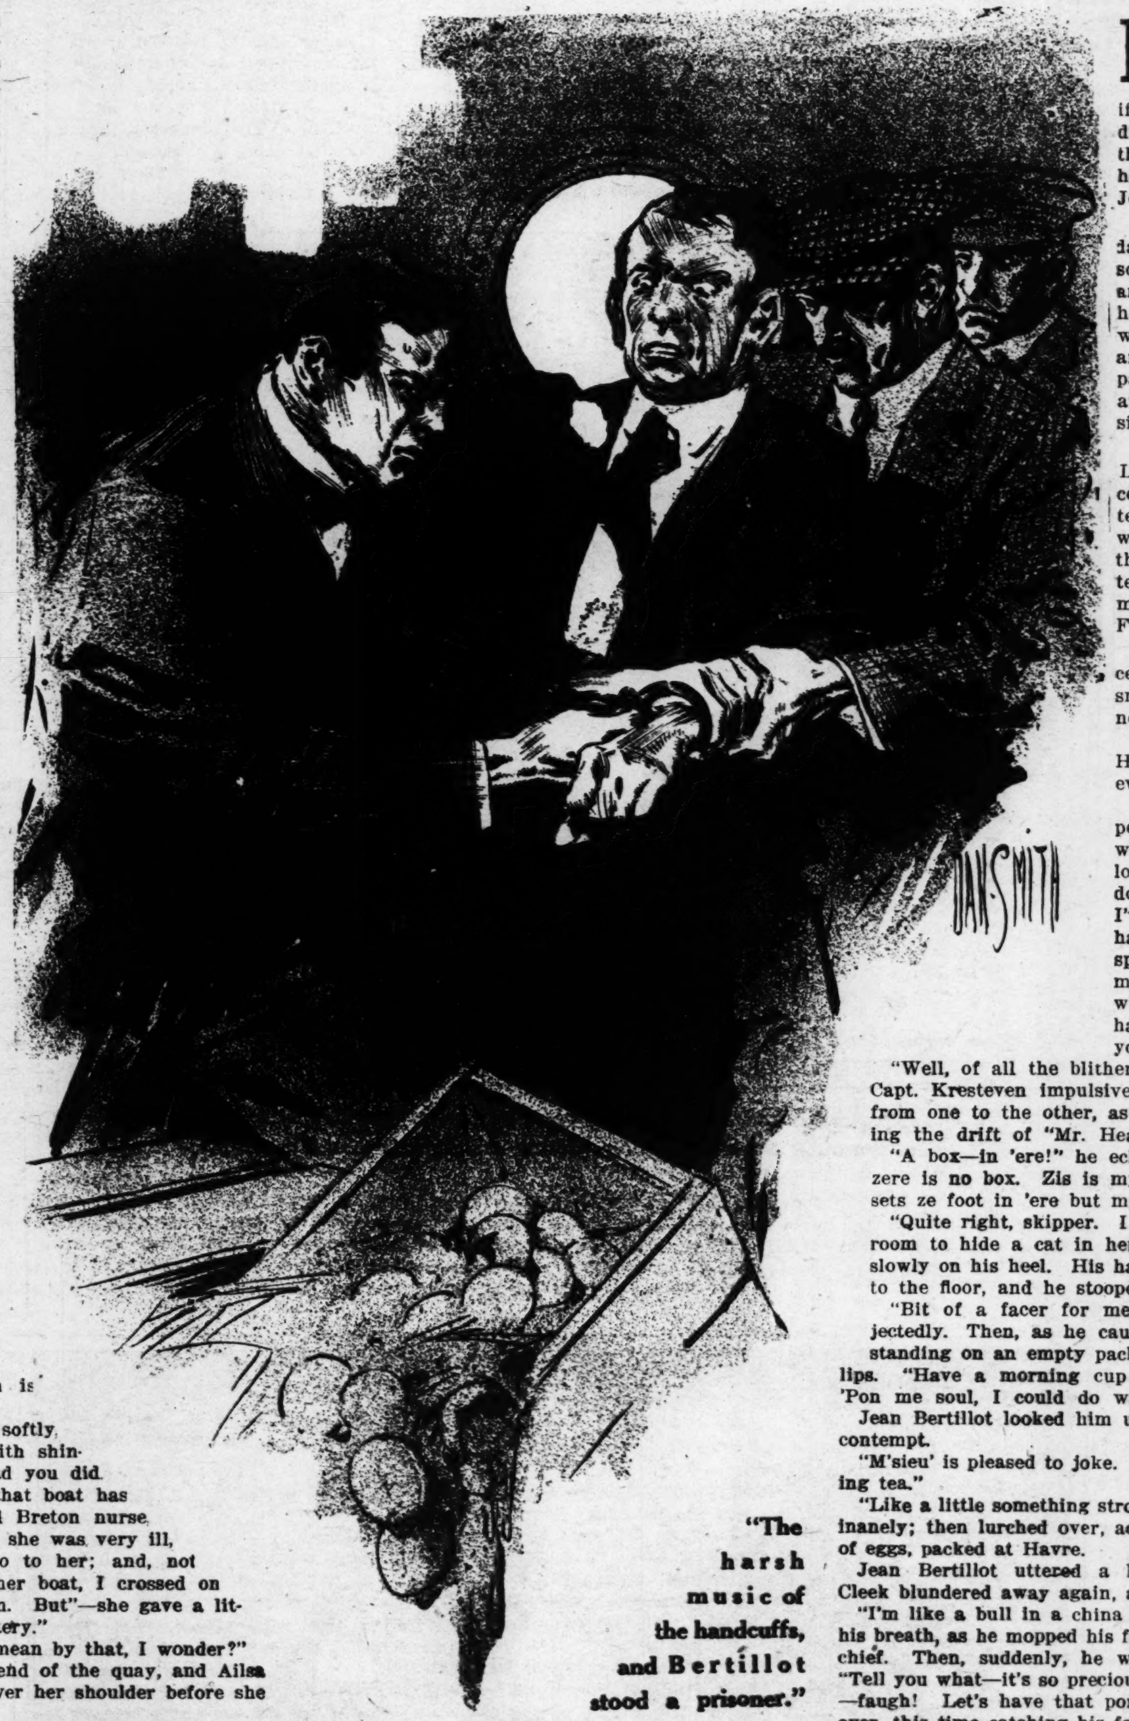
"Where did you see the match box?" asked Cleek, quietly, watching her face.

"Just inside the cabin next to mine. Rose-Marie's cabin, they call it, and the crew swear that it is haunted. The deck lies just beside the cabins on these boats; in fact, the deck and the cabins are all on one floor, and there are big windows on either side of them to let in the light. It was through one of these I saw—Hush!" She stopped short as the Superintendent, together with Capt. Kesteven and a tall, pale-looking woman with faded hair approached and lifted a warning finger. "Don't say a word. They are both so fond of Jean Bertillot. I've known Capt. Kesteven for years, you know, and I wouldn't hurt their feelings for worlds, just for my own foolish imagining."

Cleek nodded silently and, joining the others, the whole party drove to the Captain's house, at the Captain's own suggestion, for tea and a wash-up after their journey. There was time enough to see over the boats tomorrow morning; tonight he insisted that they must rest.

"Jean doesn't unload till the morning," said Mrs. Kesteven, as they drove away. "He told me he was in no hurry."

"I've put a man on guard," said the Captain. "No one will be allowed to set foot in the town or leave it till I'm on duty tomorrow. Here's the house, gentlemen. I expect you'll be glad enough for a rest and a wash. Motoring isn't as conducive to cleanliness as some people think."



"The harsh music of the handcuffs, and Bertillot stood a prisoner."

WHEN, half-an-hour later, Cleek and Mr. Narkom went upstairs to their bedroom and shut the door, Cleek's face was as keen as a terrier's and his eyes fairly snapped with excited interest.

"Going to be a corker this time, and no mistake," said Mr. Narkom dejectedly. "I stopped to speak to that chap Bertillot, while you were with Miss Lorne, and it's just what they say—he's a fine fellow—a—a"—— His voice trailed off into silence as he noted the curious look on Cleek's face. "Cleek, old chap!" he cried. "Good Lord, man! don't say you've got a clew already!"

"It's only just a faint idea, old chap—mayn't lead anywhere. So let me alone, like a good fellow. Go downstairs, like a friend, and entertain these people for me. Do anything, say anything, but just let me alone!"

And Mr. Narkom, suppressing his curiosity with a slightly disappointed air, promptly went out of the room, and left Cleek to his own resources.

It was barely 6 o'clock on the following morning when Cleek and Mr. Narkom found themselves once more on the quay, looking out for Capt. Kesteven.

"Early birds," said that gentleman as soon as he caught sight of them. "Going to take a turn at helping Jean unload, eh?"

"Yes, that's it," said Cleek serenely. "I'd like to have a look at his boat. You never can tell"——

"Preposterous nonsense!" The Captain shrugged his shoulders scornfully. "You're barking up the wrong tree, I can tell you. Still, come along. Boat ahoy!" he shouted; and in a minute or so a sleepy figure came tumbling up on deck. "Jean, mon gars, we're coming on board."

"Mais oui, monsieur. But one moment, if you please," came back in the hoarse, broken tone of the Breton peasant. Then the black-painted gangway came crashing down and the three men crossed over on Le Fleurette Noire.

EVEN as Cleek set foot on the pitch-black deck he shivered in the morning sun as if the shadow of impending disaster hung over everything; and in that minute he came face to face with Jean Bertillot.

The man was tall and dark, with heavy lids and soot-black hair. There was an olive hue to his skin, but his fine eyes were gray and wrinkled at the corners, and his mouth had a pathetic droop. He stared at the newcomers with simple unconsciousness.

"A couple of officers from London, Jean, who have come to look into the matter of smuggling," was the way the Captain introduced the subject. "Just a matter of form. You do not mind them seeing over La Fleurette, do you?"

"Mais non, m'sieu', of a certainty not," said Jean smoothly. "It is of a business but all mysterious."

"That's so," agreed George Headland, his heavy face even stupider than before.

"A fine boat this, skipper." They had reached what was evidently Bertillot's own cabin. "And I don't mind telling you, now I've seen it, that my ideas have gone to smash, so to speak. I'd a notion there might be a place in here, where one of the men might have pushed in a box, don't you know."

"Well, of all the blithering nonsense!" broke out Capt. Kresteven impulsively, while Bertillot looked from one to the other, as if only half comprehending the drift of "Mr. Headland's" remarks.

"A box—in 'ere!" he echoed, "But non, M'sieur', zere is no box. Zis is my cabin—my own—no one sets ze foot in 'ere but myself."

"Quite right, skipper. I see now I am wrong. No room to hide a cat in here." Cleek swung around slowly on his heel. His hat slipped from his fingers to the floor, and he stooped slowly to pick it up.

"Bit of a facer for me, eh, what?" he said dejectedly. Then, as he caught sight of an oil stove standing on an empty packing case, he smacked his lips. "Have a morning cup of tea and an egg, eh? 'Pon me soul, I could do with a cup myself."

Jean Bertillot looked him up and down in withering contempt.

"M'sieu' is pleased to joke. I not 'ave time for morning tea."

"Like a little something stronger, eh?" Cleek chuckled inanely; then lurched over, accidentally striking a case of eggs, packed at Havre.

Jean Bertillot uttered a hurried exclamation, and Cleek blundered away again, apologizing profusely.

"I'm like a bull in a china shop," he muttered unde his breath, as he mopped his forehead with his handkerchief. Then, suddenly, he went off on another tack "Tell you what—it's so precious dark in here, and stuffy—faugh! Let's have that porthole open." He lurched over, this time catching his foot in the black-dyed matting which covered the floor and, it was only natur that he should lose his balance. With a hasty exclamation of dismay, he clutched hold of the nearest crate of eggs, righting himself from what would have been a foolish fall, and sent the crate clattering to the floor with a heavy crash that made everything in the cabin clatter and jangle together.

BERTILLOT'S face grew red with anger as the lid burst open, and the top layer of eggs tumbled out pell-mell over the floor. Considering the force of the fall, it was surprising that more eggs had not broken. Cleek, fairly covered with confusion at the blunder he had made, tried to make restitution by saving as many as possible, to a running accompaniment of oaths and maledictions from Bertillot, who, when there were only the broken yolks to be seen, darted from the cabin, returning in a second with a cloth of a brilliant yellow color, with which he wiped up the stains. Still apologetic, Cleek raised himself up.

"I think, m'sieur, a cigarette would not be unacceptable."

He stopped short, as a faint, clicking sound came through the closed door; but only for a second; then h fumbled clumsily in his pocket, pulling out his cigar case and holding it toward Bertillot.

The Breton scowled, but his love of good tobacco triumphed, and he put out a brawny hand.

Like a flash Cleek's hand closed on it, and Nark leaped forward. Came a struggle—short, sharp,

REAL HEROES OF THE FIRING LINE

Duty of army surgeons is to go into the bullet-swept trenches themselves to relieve the wounded, and their loss in killed and injured is greater than in any arm of the service except the infantry ❧ How the medical corps work is organized in time of battle

LET us turn from the Captains and the Kings, from the tumult and the shouting of battle, to celebrate a department of modern warfare which has nothing to do with the lusty thrill of combat or with medals and decorations for bravery on the field, but whose losses in killed and wounded, as statistics show, surpass in proportion those of the cavalry and artillery and are exceeded only by the casualties of the infantry—the department, namely, of the army medical corps.

To save and not to slay, on a mission of mercy instead of murder, the officers and men of the medical corps during the battles waged today in Europe take their stand on the very firing line, and freely hazard their lives to bring succor to the wounded, whether on their own side or that of the enemy.

Along the bullet-swept trenches, through thunder-claps of exploding shrapnel, pass these unsung heroes, on their errands of pity, pausing in the hail of steel and fire to ease some wretch's sufferings with an injection of morphine, to stop a hemorrhage with a tourniquet, or to stretch out a wounded man in a more comfortable position. Sometimes the same shell kills physician and patient. In these days of long-range firing, when the target is invisible to the gunner, the Red Cross brassards worn on the sleeves of the medical corps are a mockery; for how could the scarlet insignia be distinguished at a distance of a mile?

At the slightest lull in the firing, litter bearers rush forward to the trenches to bear the wounded to the rear, for the movements of the fighting men must not be encumbered, or their spirits depressed, by the presence of suffering comrades. The bearers are not supposed to reflect that, without an opportunity of striking back, for they are unarmed, they themselves may be shot down in the act of carrying their pitiable burdens out of danger.

It is of extreme interest to now just how the work of the medical corps is organized during a battle. In the van is a division of picked surgeon-officers and their helpers, who go wherever the fighting men go, to the very battle-front itself. It is among these medical pioneers that most of the department casualties occur. It is they who creep into the trenches to assuage the pain of the wounded, they who find those who have been hit and point them out to the stretcher carriers.

A wounded British marine on his way to the hospital from one of the outer trenches at Liere, during the fighting about Antwerp.

Behind the line are four successive stations for the wounded: First, the dressing station; second, the field hospital; third, the base hospital, and fourth, the evacuation hospital.

The dressing stations are immediately behind the firing line, and usually consist of a line of ambulances, equipped for emergency treatment. To these the men wounded at the front are borne on litters. If possible, the ambulances are stationed in some protected spot. Those who are only slightly wounded are here treated in the open air and then sent back to the front.

The others are sent on in ambulances or motor cars, to the field hospitals a bit farther to the rear, and here a second process of elimination is performed, only the wounded who may recover in two or three days being retained. The field hospitals are structures of canvas, borne on wagons or trucks, and have emergency facilities for minor surgical operations. It is the rule, however, except in cases of instant necessity, to perform no operations at the first two hospital stations.

Men with serious wounds are dispatched from the field hospital as swiftly as possible, by hospital train if a railroad is included in the line of communications, or, if not, by motor ambulance, to the base hospital, which is often twenty to twenty-five miles from the front. This is usually established in a build- and is planned as a more or less permanent station. It customarily adjoins the army's base of supplies for ammunition and provisions, and also serves a base of medical supplies for physicians and their istants at the front.

base hospital is completely equipped for the performance of operations and for the care of patients during their convalescence. However, if a sick or wounded man seems likely to be invalided for any length of time—say three or four months—he is again forwarded to the evacuation hospital, which is always outside the fighting zone. In the present war, for instance, Great Britain's evacuation hospitals are in England and Germany's are on German soil.

Only male nurses are employed at the dressing stations, the field hospitals and the base hospitals. Female nurses are admitted only to the evacuation hospitals. Military surgeons serve at the first three stations from the front, but at the evacuation hospital the medical corps reserves, consisting of civilian surgeons, may be utilized. Each of the four stations is under the protection of the Geneva flag, but the dressing stations and sometimes the field hospitals are subject to the chances of gunfire.

Every officer and enlisted man of the medical corps is fitted with a pouch with appliances for first aid to the wounded. It contains a roll of bandages, a flask of aromatic spirits of ammonia, used instead of alcohol as a stimulant, and splints of woven wire. Each man carries a knife, about the size of a bayonet, but blunt at the end, for making temporary splints, cutting brush, etc. This knife cannot be used as a weapon. For tourniquets strips of bandage are used, and are tightened with a knife or a stick.

In addition, every soldier in a modern army carries attached to his belt, along with his cartridges, a "first-aid" package, in the use of which he has taken a course of instruction. He is taught how to stop bleeding and how to apply a bandage in a sanitary way. When he is wounded he may be able to aid himself, or if his injury is too severe he may be assisted by one of his comrades. This self-treatment is intended only in the emergency between the time the soldier is hit and that when the stretcher carriers can come up.

The numerical proportion of the medical corps to the army is about one to 20. The United States army consists of 89,642 officers and men. The United States Army Medical Corps is composed of 4137 men, commissioned and enlisted. The same proportion holds true in France. In Germany and England it is somewhat larger; in Russia and Austria it is probably rather less.

Officers in the medical corps are especially trained for their responsibilities. In this country, for instance, there is an Army Medical School at Washington to which only graduate physicians and surgeons are admitted, and then only after they pass a difficult entrance examination. Here they receive a nine-months course—in studies ranging from drill, the army system of administration work and military law, to handling the wounded on the field, special bacteriology and chemistry, water analysis, clinical microscopy and animal parisitology.

On completing the course and passing the proper examinations, the graduates receive commissions as Second Lieutenants in the United States army. They may rise grade by grade in their own department to become Surgeon-General, with the rank of Brigadier-General. However, the career of Gen. Leonard Wood has shown that an army surgeon may rise in the United States to the very summit of military command.

As officers in the army and at the same time as neutrals under The Hague conventions, the medical corps personnel occupies a somewhat anomalous position. Its fundamental function is to aid its side to win victories, and to this purpose the care of the sick and wounded is only subsidiary. A United States Army Medical Corps officer defines the main duties of his department as follows:

1. To keep the largest number of efficient fighting men on the battle line; and

2. To keep the firing line cleared of the incubus of wounded men.

Under the first head come the swift and skillful treatment of wounds so that incapacitated soldiers may return to the front as soon as possible, and also the vast field of preventive medicine, in which surgeons of the United States army have won world-celebrated triumphs in Cuba, the Philippines and Panama.

For instance, at the Chickamauga camp in 1897-8 there occurred in three brigades of troops 3000 cases of typhoid, resulting in 300 deaths. In a camp of the same size, during the mobilization in Texas in 1912, there was not a single case of typhoid. Likewise, in the Philippines, beri-beri, which formerly decimated our troops, has been eliminated.

As for the treatment of wounds, the injuries inflicted today are in one respect more terrible than ever before—those caused by shrapnel fire. Bayonet wounds remain as formidable as they ever were.

But in perhaps the most important respect, that of injuries by rifle fire, the care of wounds is now more simple than ever.. This rule is laid down by an army officer:

"Either a man is killed outright by modern rifle fire, or he has every chance of recovery."

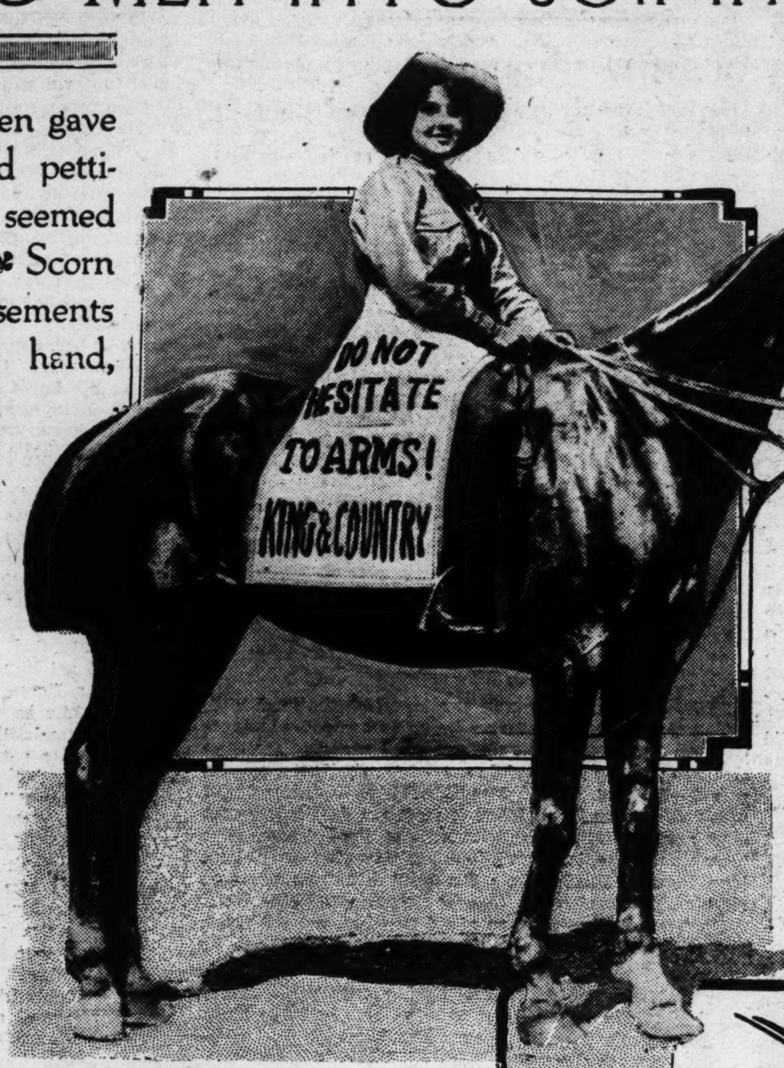
Patriotic English women gave white feathers and petticoats to those who seemed reluctant to enlist ☘ Scorn displayed in advertisements ☘ On the other hand, many men too old for service solemnly averred they were "only 35" and asked to be sent to the front . . . .



Miss Winifred Mulroney on her daily ride through London. She was but one of hundreds who made appeals of this kind.

HARRYING the reluctant British male who hesitates to enlist and fight for his country has become the favorite outdoor amusement of many British women. It is believed in England that many a man, lashed to action by the feminine scorn, is at the front today who otherwise would have been about his customary pursuits at home.

Public demonstrations among crowds of men on the boulevards, the cricket and football fields, placards posted in the cities, sarcastic advertisements in the newspapers and often personal remarks addressed to some men who might be expected to enlist, have made life miserable to the Stay-at-Homes. Even those who have the valid excuse of having been rejected for service because of physical disability find it unpleasant to go about the streets of London at times.

It must not be supposed, however, that the Britishers as a unit have been reluctant to offer their services to their country. The annals of the recruiting offices show many instances of patriotic devotions. Grandfathers have been turned away in spite of their protestations that they were only 35 years old. Then there is the celebrated anecdote of the middle-age volunteer who was rejected because his teeth were unsound. "Don't you understand?" he asked. "I want to fight the Germans, not bite them!" The glaring exceptions are the ones the women have been trying to reach.

At the beginning of the war, Great Britain decided not to resort to conscription but to call for volunteers instead. There were thousands of responses from hosts of true Britons who are martial by nature. Thousands of others decided to stay at home and look after their personal interests. The women of the tight little island determined to see to it that these latter changed their minds.

At first the women adopted peaceable means. They put on sashes and badges and went into the highroads trying to pursuade men to enlist. They caused great placards to be printed and displayed on their autos or hung from their skirts when they were horseback riding in the parks. Each appealed to the highest motives of patriotism and warned of the gravity of the situation.

In spite of all this, numbers of Englishmen remained apathetic. It was hard to get them to realize there was any immediate danger. They had lived so long in the confidence that the British fleet would protect England from all danger, that they couldn't seem to get it into their heads that this protection was not so sure. And this indifference inflamed the women patriots to more drastic means.

Lady Maxwell, wife of Lieutenant-General Sir John Grenfeld Maxwell, formerly Colonel of a famous regiment of Highlanders, through the papers addressed a stirring appeal for enlistment. "My man has gone," was a phrase that rang like a trumpet note through her challenge, a defiant declaration that since she had staked her all she could consistently call upon others to stake theirs.

"Every man in Germany, every man in France," she cried, "all—save the old and the ill—have risen to their country's call and gone forth to prove their manhood or die. Will Englishmen alone sit by the fire and spin? Must we be ashamed to be Englishwomen when we see you skulking at home, watching football or cricket matches, lying on the grass in the sun, safe and secure—as you fondly delude yourselves—while the manhood of Europe sheds its bloods on the battlefield?

"Awake! If you will not answer the call of the bugle, at least let the women's voices call you out to fight for us and our children. I am a woman, alas, and I cannot go, but my man has gone, and had I sons I would send every one forth to fight for England's sake.

"Will you let the Germans brand you as cowards? They have called you a nation of shopkeepers. What then? But will you be scorned by a nation of waiters? Yet the waiters have dropped their napkins and gone forth to fight!

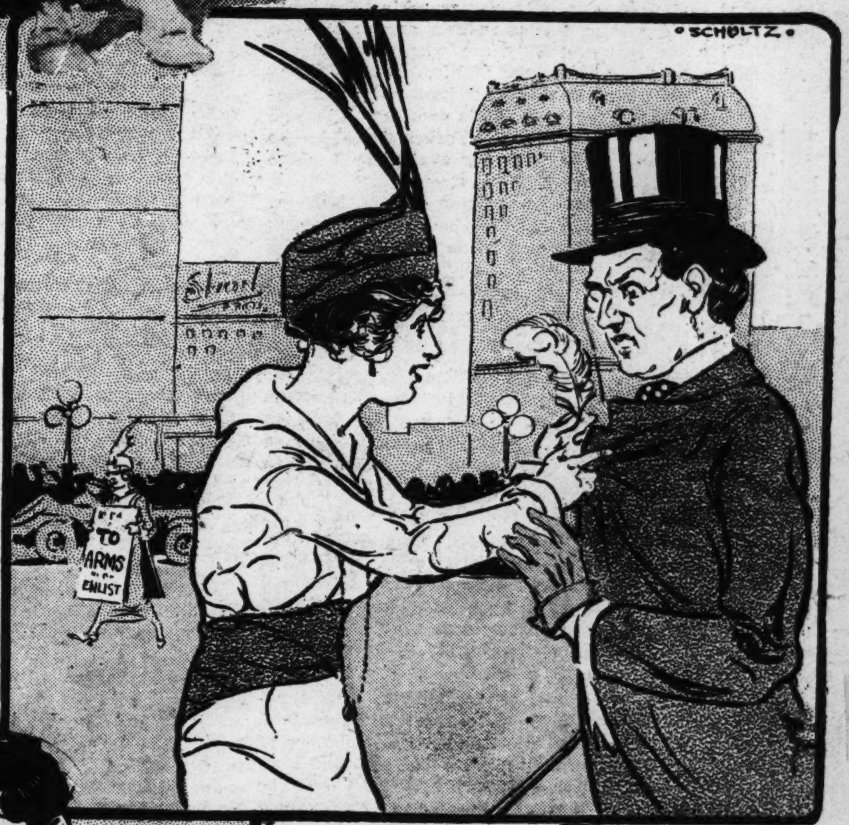
"Won't the sturdy shopkeepers put up their shutters and likewise prove themselves men? Must we women ask 'Where is the manhood of England, sleeping or dead? Nearly 100,000 men have answered the call, but what of the millions who remain behind? Have they enlisted in a brigade of wholeskins?"

Such a scourging from a woman of Lady Maxwell's standing may well have been expected to stir the hesitant Briton to action. There is no doubt that it did, too, although he took his time about stirring. Before he was well on his way to the recruiting office, however, he got renewed impetus from similar attacks by other Englishwomen of all classes.

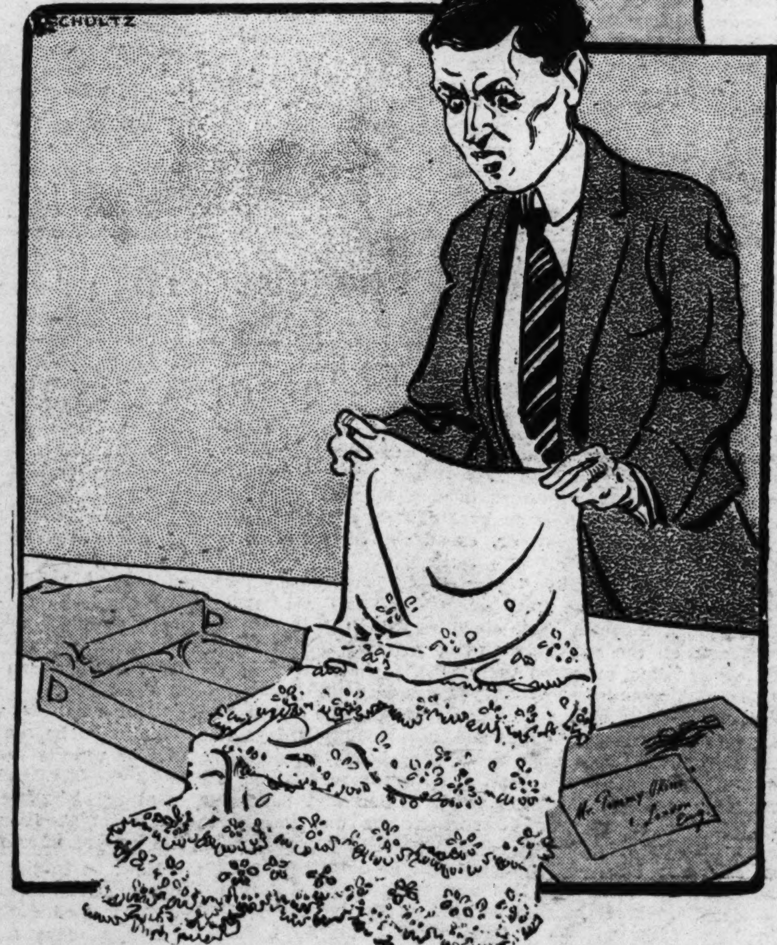
If he walked along the street, a pretty girl was likely to step up to him and pin a white feather—historic emblem of cowardice in England—upon his coat. He might protest, might blush, might stammer out some excuse, but the girl would simply laugh at him ironically and give him the street address of the nearest recruiting office.

Such things are pleasant to no man. They are particularly unpleasant to the self-sufficient British male, with his traditions of sex superiority and his idea of manliness. Many of them found what they thought was a happy way out of the difficulty, by saying to the women that they had offered to enlist but had been rejected. The women, women-like, believed it for a day or two. But they heard their excuse so often that they came to consider it a dodge. Their activities redoubled and they caused this advertisement to be inserted in the London Times:

> What is this glib tale we hear from fine (as yet) unlicked cubs: "I have volunteered, but they would not take me?" There must be a large Government badge for the disqualified. Unless we receive this in Whitehall and Great streets at 1 o'clock, we shall offer the only badge we have, The White Feather. The streets of Paris and all French towns are empty of men.



"If he walked along the street a pretty girl was likely to step up to him and pin a white feather upon his coat."



—"was surprised to find a petticoat in the mail."

Nor did the women conduct their campaign in a haphazard way. One morning a large part of the stay-at-home male population of London was surprised to find petticoats in its mail. That the delicacy of the hint might not be altogether lost, the following advertisement appeared in the newspapers:

> In Preparation! A COWARD'S CATALOGUE. For those whom my gifts of petticoats have failed to arouse to their duty, so that posterity may justly apportion the blame of any misfortunes which our Empire may endure in the present war.

It is easy to conceive that this notice caused more than one recipient of a petticoat to shiver. In these militant suffrage days, the masculine Londoner has learned that the women usually are not bluffing: that they will undertake to perform what they promise. The idea that a man's name and address had been obtained and that he might at any time expect to be pilloried in some pamphlet or on some poster could not have been very comfortable.

The women found a way also to overcome the natural excuses, that one had a family of dependants to support, that one's work would not permit him to go to the front; that somebody had to stay to do the necessary labor of the country. The newspapers began carrying such advertisements as these:

> To Would-be recruits: Lady will act as a substitute during war: practical knowledge of shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping, office routine, cooking, dairy work; organist; bee expert.

> Mrs. C. W. will be glad to help in the present crisis by taking into her house two or three ladies whose husbands have gone will she? Well, we'll see what an old politician can do to countermine an old lady."

What Will People Say?

"Speaking of politics," said Forbes, "the papers are full of the possibility of your being an Ambassador somewhere. Is there anything in it?"

"Well, my old friend the President has written me a few letters and whispered it in my ear, but I don't want to go. I'm too old. I like my own country and my own slippers. Foreign languages and foreign cooking and all that would play the devil with me. I don't want to go."

Forbes laughed at the spectacle of a big, rich man pouting like a reluctant child against having a sweetmeat forced on him.

"Then why are you going?" he grinned.

"How did you know I was?"

"Because you said you didn't want to. We only say, 'I don't want to,' when we're just about to."

Tait looked at him in surprise. Forbes was not the type from whom one expects epigrams and generalizations. That was among his chief attractions. Tait laughed sheepishly.

"Well, I'll tell you, Harvey. There's just one reason—I'm worried about Mildred. She's getting in too deep with her crusades and causes. Now, I can't pry Mildred loose from her clubs and committees. No marrying young man will go near her.

"I got an idea that if I went abroad as an Ambassador, she'd have to go along to take care of me and run the social end of the embassy. Anyway, my last business on this earth is leaving my only child provided for, and I'm worried because—because—well, I'm too fat around the heart, and my neck is too thick, and the doctor tells me to be ready. You understand?

"I wish I had a son to leave her with, Harvey; then I'd feel better, but my only boy—well, he married the wrong woman, and she drove him to the dogs, deceived him and tormented him and—finally he had to make her divorce him.

"Don't repeat his mistake, Harvey. Don't let a pretty face and a fascinating body blind you to a bad, selfish heart. There are fine enough women on the straight road, just as beautiful, just as passionate with the right man. If only"——

He paused, looked at Harvey, who was looking everywhere but at the Senator. He was searching the landscape for Persis, and he was as restless among his own thoughts as the young usually are when the old are commenting on the helplessness of life.

But Tait did not notice Forbes' inattention. Rummaging among the confusions of his own griefs, he had come upon a bright hope. What if Forbes should be the man to win Mildred away from her avocations back to the main business of love?

He smiled. He felt like apologizing to Mrs. Neff for stealing a hint from her. Why should not old men engage in the pleasant chess game of matchmaking, too?

The idea was so exhilarating that it almost leaped from his heart. But he was politician enough to realize that such a plan would be frustrated in advance by premature publication.

He studied Forbes with admiring affection. His heart went out to him as to a son, or, better yet, a son-in-law. He put a hand on Forbes' shoulder to claim him just as Forbes started with a sudden elation, just as a light broke forth in his eyes.

Tait followed the line of Forbes' gaze and made out a man and a woman on horseback turning in at the gate marked "Exit Only."

Forbes spoke. "Shan't we stroll back to the clubhouse? I'm expected there for luncheon."

"By all means," said Tait. "And I want you to meet Mildred again."

"I'd love to," said Forbes, absently. He said nothing more, but strode on so rapidly down the steep slope that Tait had to take his arm for support to hold him back.

"You're visiting at the Enslee's, Mrs. Neff tells me," the old man panted.

"Yes."

"Well, my boy, I don't know who she is, but I bet she isn't worth it—not if she trails with the Enslee pack."

"Oh, but she is beautiful—and wonderful."

"You must be hit damned hard."

"Am."

And then, not heeding the connotation, he exclaimed, as Persis emerged from the eclipsing shrubbery:

"There's only one woman can ride like that."

Tait stared again, and now he made her out. Instantly, with the exultance one feels over a secret someone else lets slip, he cried: "Oho, my boy, that's the woman who keeps you here! Mrs. Neff hinted at it, but I wouldn't believe it till I had it from you." His gloating sank again to fatherly solicitude as he pleaded earnestly: "For God's sake, boy, don't love her! Of all women don't love Persis Cabot! She's the most heartless of them all."

He was not the first man of eld that had warned youth against beauty. Nor was the last that shall fail to be heeded. He tried another tack.

"I understand that Willie Enslee expects to marry her."

"She doesn't expect to marry him."

"How do you know?"

"Oh, I have my reasons for believing that she doesn't love him."

"Nobody ever accused her of that, but—well, does she think what Mrs. Neff thinks—that you have money?"

Forbes did not answer except with a blush. The Senator spared him any pressure on that point. He said simply:

"Enslee has a lot of money—more than her father has. In fact, her father is in a very bad plight."

"Poor Persis!" Forbes groaned. "Poor Persis!"

There was such anguish in his tone that the Senator gripped his arm and murmured:

"Do you care so much for her?"

Forbes stopped short and stared into the old man's eyes. "A man like me loves once, and loves hard. If I lost her, my life wouldn't be worth the snap of my finger." And he added in a raucous voice "Or the click of a trigger."

The Senator leaned heavily on him and closed his eyes in a wince of pain. He had heard his own dead son speak just that way.

When he opened his eyes he saw that Forbes was smiling glowingly.

"Look at her, Senator! She's so beautiful! I can't let Enslee have her! Look at him? He's as afraid of his horse as his horse is ashamed of him. What's he up to now? Rein him in, you fool! He'd drive a hobby horse into hysterics. And now he's sent Persis' horse in the air! What's the matter with him? Why doesn't he"——

They crashed through the cedars and rhodendrons, and plunged across the lawn to the clear space of the golf links. Forbes saw the demon look in the white eyes of Persis' horse. He had seen mustangs in that humor shake off their tormentors and tear them wolfishly with their fangs.

"He's got the bit in his teeth!" he groaned. "He'll kill her! My God, he'll kill her! She can't hold him! I've got to get him somehow."

He had a fierce impulse to meet the horse, leap at him, catch him by the bridle and the nose and smother him to a standstill. But Tait had seen a policeman killed trying to stop a horse so, and he flung his arms about Forbes.

"No, you won't!" he gasped. "You can't stop him! I won't let you risk your life—not for that woman."

"Let me go! Let me go!" Forbes pleaded, unwilling to use his strength against the old man. But Tait clung to him, seized him anew as Forbes wrenched his hand loose; fell to his knees, but still held fast and was dragged along moaning:

"My boy, I love you like a son. You shan't risk your life—not for her!"

Then suddenly his clutch relaxed; his fingers opened; he rolled forward on his face, his white hair fluttering in the grass.

And Forbes, hardly knowing that he was released, felt himself free, and ran with all his might to intercept the plunging monster, who came snorting his rage, flinging his huge barrel this way and that, and shaking the white saliva from his mouth.

Former Missourian Possible King of Poland

bieski served in the Army of the Potomac, and fought at the battle of Gettysburg, where he was left on the field for dead. At the end of the war he went to Mexico and enlisted in the republican army, which was fighting against Emperor Maximilian, receiving the rank of Colonel. His service in Mexico was inspired by the wrongs done to his family and people by Austria.

It fell to the lot of Col. Sobieski, whom Maximilian had banished from Genoa, to assist in a military capacity at the trial and execution of that ill-starred ruler, who was shot to death by a firing squad in 1867. Thus, through his person, Poland was enabled to strike a tragic blow against the Hapsburgs, so long the oppressors of the nation.

Sobieski, after the collapse of Maximilian's empire, returned to the United States and settled in Minnesota. Only a year later, in 1868, he was elected a member of the Minnesota Legislature, and there distinguished himself by introducing three bills which at that time, he says, stamped him as a crank. One was to give women the right of suffrage, another was to prohibit the sale of liquor and the third was to abolish capital punishment. None of them passed.

In 1882 Sobieski established himself at Neosho, Mo., with his wife and two children, a boy named John Sobieski, and a daughter. In 1886 he was nominated by the Prohibitionists and Greenbackers of his district for Congress and polled several hundred votes. Ten years later he accepted the forlorn hope of the Prohibition party's nomination for Governor of Missouri. "I did not run for election," says he good-humoredly, "I walked. It was my Democratic opponent, William Joel Stone, who ran. Not many Missourians in those days seemed to agree with my views on prohibition."

Col. Sobieski's son died at the age of 13 years, and his daughter, Mary, wedded Louis S. Gilhousen. They have a son 8 years old. So that the name of the line may not die out, the name of the boy has been changed by law to John Gilhousen Sobieski. For several years Col. Sobieski and his family have lived at 2807 Brighton avenue, Los Angeles. The boy has been chosen to represent Los Angeles at the children's exercises at the Panama Exposition, in which school children from every state will take part.

Since the death of John B. Gough, Col. Sobieski has been probably the best-known lecturer on temperance in the United States. He has delivered addresses in every city in the Union, besides touring England, Ireland and Wales and the English colonies. He has been in the lecture field for 47 years.

He takes his pretensions to the kingship of Poland lightly, pointing out that his claim would be sentimental and historical rather than dynastic. For in the later history of Poland there was no such thing as a royal dynasty. The monarchy was elective, the Kings being chosen by the nobles. It was by such an election that John III won his crown.

Still, the name Sobieski is one to conjure with in Poland. as John III was the most brilliant figure in the nation's gallery of heroes. His victory over the Turks at Vienna, a victory which preserved Europe from the menace of Ottoman subjection, made him not only the national hero of Poland, but also the paladin of the whole of Christendom.

But Col. Sobieski, even if the crown were proffered to him, declares he would refuse it. "My American citizenship," he declares, "is more precious to me than the kingship of any country in Europe." The hardships of his boyhood, the execution of his father, grandfather and uncles, and the misfortunes which drove his mother to her grave, filled him with an inextinguishable hatred of monarchs Kings and Emperors. At Gettysburg the awful cries of anguish which rang about him, as he himself lay near death, inspired him with a horror for war which the years have not dulled. Besides, he holds the Czar's promise to erect an autonomous Poland in contempt, declaring that this is not the first time Russia has sought to beguile Poland with similar rosy hopes. He believes that the great result of the present war will be the abolition of all monarchies.

A symbol of the intensely pacific character of this son of warriors is a picture of Jesus of Nazareth, which he wears always in his buttonhole. He has written three books, an autobiography, a "Life of President Faure" and "The Adventures of a Polish Nobleman."

Do You Want to Go Adventuring for Lost Islands?

WANTED: Adventurers!

Men who are ready for almost anything, who are unafraid, who love remote, strange places, who are willing to put civilization and its lures out of mind and thought for six or seven years, may find the chance of a lifetime with Capt. J. Foster Stackhouse, F. R. G. S., F. R. Z. S., F. R. S. G. S., etc., commander of the British-American Oceanographic Expedition, Explorers' Club, New York.

The rewards offered are a trip to all the seven seas of the world, visits to islands and territories as yet untrod by the feet of white men, adventure and discovery in every latitude from the equatorial Pacific to the Sea of Okhotsk and back to the Antarctic—and glory.

The men who go down to sea on this expedition will see civilization and savagery in almost every climate from the tropics to the Arctic and Antarctic circles. They will have a chance to study the oceans as they were never observed before, and they will be participants in the principal object of the voyage, the discovery and mapping of 2500 unknown islands, rocks and reefs in the Pacific, reported from time to time by skippers and never officially charted.

What other discoveries may be made—of tribes, species, secrets of the unplumbed seas—it remains for the voyage itself to disclose.

The trip will be made in the Discovery, the ship by means of which Capt. Scott reached the South Pole, only to die on his return journey. The Discovery is now fitting in London and will cross to New York in the early spring for the start of the voyage in May.

Even before the expedition reaches New York it is to perform a service at once interesting and remarkable. The whole section of the sea in which the Titanic sank is to be plumbed and sounded, in order to determine whether the cause of the disaster may not be fixed upon the tip of a submerged volcano whose existence in the vicinity has been thrice reported.

The Titanic went down approximately in 51 west longitude and 41 north latitude. The supposed mountain head has been three times reported within 365 miles of this place and about 11 miles from the place where the Titanic struck. In 1816 Lourp, a Norwegian, reported breakers or a rock in this vicinity. In 1827 a similar report was made by Maxwell, a Briton. Marquand, a French skipper, confirmed these rumors in 1855.

"It seems plausible," says Capt. Stackhouse. "The theory is that some great berg ran foul on the tip of this supposed mountain and clung there. Such a berg attracts all the smaller pieces of ice, and soon becomes a great floe, anchored there on the pinnacle of a submerged mountain. When you consider that these immense bergs ride submerged seven-eighths below the surface, you will understand how readily this might happen. At any rate, there have been no soundings within forty miles of the Titanic's graveyard, so we are going out to sound the whole region and determine whether or not her destruction was due merely to a floating berg."

The first leg of the voyage will be down to the Panama Canal, through this new waterway and into the Pacific, where the first and one of the most important large tasks will be undertaken. Of this Capt. Stackhouse said the other day:

"Your great canal loses much of its value until a trade route across the Pacific is explored. Those at present in use are all in the North Pacific, either from San Francisco or Vancouver to Japan direct, or to Japan and Australia via Hawaii. Before the canal can be used generally by transpacific steamers, a safe route must be charted.

"Your hydrographic office in Washington has records of 2500 rocks, reefs, submerged banks and islands in the Pacific which appear on no map ever drawn. These unknown perils in the sea have been reported from time to time by skippers of every nation, and the records kept in Washington. It is easy to understand what a menace to shipping these things are. Our first business is to go over this geat ocean with a fine-tooth comb, so to speak, and clear up all these mysteries. In many instances, no doubt, it will be discovered that the skippers saw a floating whale or the hulk of a wreck, or suffered from excessive imagination. But that does not matter. A reported danger is almost as costly as a real one. Every skipper gives these reported peril zones a wide berth and steers off his course to do it. We must get all these reports substantiated or disproved. Only then will shipping be safe and economical in the Pacific.

"Just what we will discover in the way of islands remains to be seen, but it stands to reason that out of 2500 reports there ought to be some actual islands, and some of real size and value. We may possibly find inhabited islands, heretofore unknown. We are also likely to make important discoveries of plant and animal life as yet unrecorded."

Now, as to the kind of men wanted. Here are the specifications as given by the commander:

"Men of education preferred. Must be sound in wind and limb. Must fit into an expedition, be of good disposition and possess courage. Thorough sportsmen are best. The expedition will need an ornithologist, an anthropologist, a geologist, a zoologist, a biologist, a magnetic observer and a meteorologist. There will be no objection if one person combine several of these qualifications. In addition, a little later on, about ten real sailormen will be needed. Some have already been enlisted from the British Navy, but more are wanted."

finitely fierce—then: the snapping of steel against steel, the harsh music of the handcuffs, and Bertillot stood a prisoner, while Capt. Kesteven, too dazed by the sudden turn of events, gazed helplessly at the three.

"Good heavens!" he cried out at last. "Are you mad! Mr. Narkom, I appeal to you! This is rankest idiocy! What has Jean done?"

"He has smuggled his last tube of saccharine into the country, my friend—that's what he's done!" Cleek said, with a little theatrical gesture that sat oddly upon the personality of George Headland.

"Impossible!" Capt. Kesteven's face still showed utter disdain of the matter. "How has he done it, man? How could he?"

"By a very simple but effective plan. I rather think you will find the tubes in those hard-boiled eggs over there. And I shouldn't be surprised if the pats of butter had not got their little loads also."

HE stepped over to the big crate and lifted an egg from it, tapping the shell upon the window sill, while Bertillot watched him with hatred in his eyes. The shell broke, and he severed the egg with his fingers. In the center of the crumbling yolk lay a tiny glass tube, an inch or so long, filled with what appeared to be white powder.

"Bertillot—Jean—Jean! And I would have trusted you with my life!" broke forth the Captain.

But Cleek laid a gentle hand upon his shoulder.

"You wouldn't if you knew he was cousin to Gaston Merode, the worst Apache in Paris," said he quietly. "I've a good memory for faces, mon ami, and I haven't lived in the old 'Twisted Arm' so many days for nothing. Margot's slave! Margot's pet! Margot's pretty tool for the execution of her vile work! A dollar to a ducat she's at the bottom of this!"

The man made no response; merely stood there in a sullen silence, and Cleek switched round upon his heel and laid a hand upon the Superintendent's arm.

"How did I guess?" he said in answer to Mr. Narkom's excited query. "Firstly, I wasn't so impressed with that mourning idea as the rest of you. And when anyone sees a match strike itself on a box, by invisible hands, I felt sure that some trickery was being done. And that's the explanation of the vanishing-lady trick, a clever trick, too, by Jupiter. Simply black against black. Put a man in a black suit, mask and gloves in the center of equally black surroundings and I'll swear you won't any of you see him. Bertillot could pass from one cabin to the other unnoticed. I confess I was a bit puzzled about his method of smuggling in the stuff, until I saw that egg-timer over there."

He pointed to the somewhat old-fashioned contrivance standing on a little shelf above the oil stove.

"That settled it. Then, again, a fall like that which the crate received ought to have smashed every egg in the place; and when I picked them up and helped the good work a little bit further with my fingers, I knew I was right. I had suspected something when I picked up the chip of eggshell just by the table, and the yellow cloth settled the matter. Why the yellow cloth, my friend? Because it would show no yellow stains, after wiping away the yolk, when the tubes were pressed into the egg. A clever trick, Monsieur Jean Bertillot, a very clever trick, but"——

THE sentence was never finished. For just then a strange thing happened. From between Bertillot's lips a chuckle proceeded, fiendish, malicious, full of deviltry, and the Fleurette Noire, which was anchored in harbor and as safe as houses, so to speak, lifted suddenly, dropped, swung round a little and began slowly to move!

Someone had cut the cable; someone in this devil's pay had released the ship from its mooring and set it free!

"My God!" broke out Capt. Kesteven furiously. But Cleek's extended hand silenced him.

There was the soft splashing of oars outside, telling of an approaching boat; some enemy's trick, no doubt. The three of them made a wild plunge for the door, but it was locked, and locked from the outside? As Bertillot was their prisoner, so they were Bertillot's.

Mr. Narkom looked at Cleek. Cleek looked at Mr. Narkom; their silent lips framed the one word, "Apaches!" Their faces grew a shade paler.

Then Cleek drew himself up. The character of George Headland fell from him like a mantle. There was something almost regal in his bearing, something that brought the wonder light into Capt. Kesteven's astonished eyes.

"Who are you?"

"Cleek! . . . Just Cleek of Scotland Yard. And so this, after all, is the end—the end!"

Bertillot chuckled again. He lifted his head and chimed out the old Apache cry, "Hola! hola! la! la! la!"

An answering call came to him.

"Aha! we change places but ver' soon, M'sie' Cleek," he said shrilly, in an abandonment of triumph. "Ze Vanishing Cracksman who deserted us like a rat! Ze man of Forty Faces! Bah!" He spat furiously upon the ground in front of him. "Not all your tricks, nor all your faces can save you now. It is your last trick that has been played, not mine!"

Cleek lifted up his head and shut his fists.

"That remains to be seen, mon ami! So, someone is to let us out of this, are they? Well, we shall see, we shall see. Steady yourself, Mr. Narkom; there's likely to be some little rush for our company shortly, and we must stand prepared."

AND rush there was. For at that identical moment a key grated in the rusty lock of the doorway; came the sound of the door crashing back against the woodwork, a scream of triumph, the harsh sound of many voices, and Margot, followed by a string of chattering, gesticulating Apaches, plunged into the room. She faced Cleek with flashing eyes and upthrown head, all the hatred of a thousand years crammed into her insolent face.

"So, M'sieur Cleek," said she, sweeping him a deep curtsey, "so M'sieur' we come face to face at last! My revenge, eh? Not yours, but mine, mine! Nom de Dieu! but I shall enjoy it. If I could kill you but 50 times, instead of a paltry once, for every insult, every sneer! So many times you have escaped us, but now—now!"

She lifted her hand and struck him across the face. But Cleek never moved, merely stood there, staring back into her eyes with a charming courtesy.

Finally she turned away.

"Unloosen Bertillot," she commanded, and the man stood free instantly.

"Hurry, mes amis, hurry! We must not be caught like rats in a trap. Oh, mon Dieu! but it was a grand idea—a grand idea!" She turned her black eyes toward Cleek. "Rats in a trap—but that is splendid—magnifique! Quick! Bind them to the chairs, and scuttle the ship. La Fleurette will be sunk before help can come, and we can watch from a safe distance. * * * Jean Bertillot, fitting your boat with wireless was a masterly stroke. Name of a devil! but of a verity I cannot yet believe it! The great Cleek, the Cracksman, caught, caught! And the fat English pig, too!"

"Shall we gag them, Margot, ma reine?" put in Bertillot, as the last knot was tied.

"But no, of a certainty. Let them squeal like the rats they are! Rats in a trap! Come, mes enfants! Come away from the ship, home again to Paris, and to the end of the Cracksman at last!"

She turned at that and faced Cleek smilingly.

He smiled a little and twisted his head over in the direction of Mr. Narkom, whose fat body had found but poor comfort in the flat top of a table. The Superintendent's eyes met his. A sudden lurch of the ship, a sudden rushing noise as of the sound of incoming water, made his face gray. La Fleurette Noire had indeed been scuttled, as Margot had said, and there was nothing for it but to wait—and pray.

"Cleek—my pal—my friend," he said shortly between sobbing breaths, "it is I who have brought you to this. My God! If I could only have given my life for yours!"

A MIST swam up before Cleek's eyes.

"I know, I know, old chap. But, as the fatalists say 'What will be, will be,' and who are we to attempt to alter it. Anyway, it was the Yard's call, Mr. Narkom, and in the Yard's service. We shall have—passed—in harness. Remember that."

Finally a silence dropped. Each man was thinking of his own—thoughts that they would have died sooner than have repeated—and the slow swish-swish, gurgle-gurgle of the water was the only sound that broke into it.

"Only a matter of—er—half an hour or so now, I should say, gentlemen," said the Captain, somewhat unevenly, with his eyes glued upon the window.

Suddenly Cleek twitched up his head. His ears had caught the sound of something in the distance that sounded like the whisper of oars in the water.

Mr. Narkom looked round quickly; his position was hardly one conducive to much movement, but he managed to raise his head a little.

"A boat," he said shortly.

"A boat!" echoed the Captain in a hoarse voice.

Cleek looked at them.

"They're coming back, in all probability, to—er—hasten their handiwork. Hard luck to go like this, isn't it? Listen!"

There was the trample of many feet upon the deck; the injured ship keeled over at the extra weight that was put upon her side, and a great cry went up, echoing from one end of her to the other, calling forth other echoes. And at the sound of it, the three men looked at one another and gave three little, choking, gurgling, half-hysterical laughs.

"English, by James!" shouted Mr. Narkom hoarsely.

"English!" echoed Capt. Kesteven, with a little gurgle of thankfulness.

CLEEK said nothing; merely lay with his hands bound behind him to the chair back, and his thankful eyes looking out over the great distance.

And at that moment the cabin door came open with such force that it sent the handle grinding against the woodwork; came a stream of blue-coated, eager-faced sailors, with grim mouths and ready fingers, and before you could say "Jack Robinson" the three men found themselves free of their bonds and were led out on deck by the shouting crowd of sailors, to where, in the water below, a veritable colony of boats awaited them.

La Fleurette Noire pitched dangerously, rolled, pitched again, and as the last man left her decks, plunged her black prow into the rolling, swirling, hungry waters felt them lick over her, and then—slipped down into them and took her black paint into the greater blackness below.

Mr. Narkom looked at Cleek, but Cleek was not noticing him. His eyes were set upon a slim, white-clad figure upon the quayside, who was waving frantically.

It was Ailsa—even at this distance he could tell—Ailsa!

"That's the young lady, sir, that warned us. She saw those French beggars climbing on board and guessed something was wrong," said one man respectfully as he followed Cleek's eyes to the harbor. "They'd escaped, though, by the time we got the boat out. They must have been more of the French fishing smacks that came in the night."

So it was Ailsa who had saved them! Cleek owed his life to her now; he had owed even more to her before. As they landed he made his way straight to her and took her hand in his.

"We might have solved the greatest riddle of all, Aisla, but for you," said he simply, looking down into the flower of her upturned face.

"The Sealed Art Gallery," next in the "Cleek, of Scotland Yard" Story series, will appear, complete, in the Sunday Post-Disptach Magazine next Sunday.

Nagging Men Into Joining the Army to the front and who have no homes in this country and who are in delicate health or financially straightened.

> Your Country Calls! Experienced lady journalist (linguist, traveler, reporter) "specials" or office hand will give services to release a man, retaining half pay only.

These offers were varied by advertisements of a decidedly harsher nature. At the beginning these appeals were rather mild, such as the following, printed as early as Aug. 19:

> To all who call themselves English gentlemen: Are you drilled and armed and ready to defend your country?

This was followed by others gradually more vituperative in nature. The cricketers and footballers and those who idled time watching them play came in for especial excoriation. The first of these, which appeared Aug. 19, was as follows:

> Could not the physical effort, now dissipated in professional cricket matches, be put to greater and more lasting good to the nation at this time of crisis?

A few days later came the following:

> Cricket! Who, in the name of wonder, is interested in able-bodied Englishmen at this moment taking nine wickets in an inning and making a century not out? Why are they not, being so physically fit, in the fighting lines with 700,000 other Englishmen? In the name of decency, stop cricket and, above all, stop reports of it in the newspapers!
> "Flanneled fools at the wicket
> "And muddied oafs at the goal"——
> have now an opportunity of proving whether Mr. Kipling was right.

> "When Minos hath passed his majestic sentence, not wealth nor eloquence nor goodness shall save thee, Torquatus."

> ENGLAND'S Disgrace! To Brighton women: Make trousers wearers, supposed men, enlist, unless you prefer that the Germans kill you and yours.

Moving as these appeals were, they were mild in comparison with the more passionate appeals that were to come later. Early in September a London newspaper carried the following advertisement, signed by an army surgeon's widow:

> Attention! Men of Britain, have you no children to be cast into the flames of burning villages on the route of a German dash on our coasts? Are Belgian experiences nothing to you? They have come out to the last man for their country. Germans have no hatred for them, but what white flame, what vitriolic hatred, what barbaric degradation and money levies for us who are baulking them? They have always hated us for our prosperity—what traveler does not know that?—What must this be now? What if France and our small force, our best, should fail to hold back their millions? Our fleet cannot be everywhere at once. Is it nothing to you- taxi-men, cricketers, footballers, golfers and dwellers in quiet towns? You expect to be protected. (WHY?) Recruit, in Heaven's name, and for your own sakes! Personal care and assistance will be given by advertiser to recruits' relatives needing it.

More practical if less impassioned was this advertisement:

> Doctor's wife, middle-aged, will undertake to perform the work of any tramway conductor, coachman, shop assistant or other married worker with child, provided that worker will undertake to enlist and fight for his country in her hour of need. All wages earned will be paid over to the wife and family.

Then, on different days, followed a string of such advertisements as these:

> WANTED: A press gang in Folkstone. Capture of 1000 able "knuts," idlers and lady-killers guaranteed.

> We have flung ourselves into work for the wounded, but there would be far fewer wounded if we would devote the same energy to instruct, help and persuade the able-bodied to go to the assistance of their brothers and to protect their homes.

> The fine young men in the ticket offices can be easily spared. The unemployed female typist might do their job until the end of the war.

> The splendid men of the navy have sucked away the energy of the Stay-at-Homes. "We shall be quite safe; the fleet will take care of us." Lord Roberts does not think so. Every Frenchman takes care of himself. He does not leave it to others.

> If a man is prevented from joining the forces because he has no one to look after his motherless children, the retired principals of a successful ladies' college will, free of all cost, take entire charge of his boys and girls while their father is serving his country.

The climax of this advertising campaign came in the following sarcastic announcement in the Times:

> Englishwoman undertakes to form and equip a regiment of women for the firing line, if lawn tennis and cricketing young men will agree to act as Red Cross nurses for such regiment.

How much the tireless propaganda of the women had to do with encouraging enlistment may never be known, but it is certain that enlistments became much more rapid towards the close of September and the advertisements gradually disappeared. It may be supposed that some of the athletes grew ashamed and joined for the war, as the following advertisement in the Times would seem to indicate:

> Will any firm or individual provide territorials (volunteers) going on foreign station with cricket materials, and 25 hockey sticks? Wanted immediately.

It may fairly be inferred that the women had a great deal to do with awakening the British young men to the seriousness of the situation.

NEW AND ODD THINGS IN SCIENCE

We May Be Good Unconsciously, Say Psychologists

THERE is a decided reaction against certain features of Freud's much exploited theories of the subconscious mind. These may be expressed by the statement that he regards the subconscious mind as containing a record of all the thoughts and ideas we have suppressed because we did not like them, whether this was done deliberately or otherwise. As Dr. H. Crichton-Miller put it in a discussion at the recent meeting of the British Medical Association, in the unconscious we are dealing, according to Freud, with experiences that had to be fought against.

Dr. C. C. Jung of Zurich expressed the newer and more satisfactory view that the relation between the conscious and the unconscious was a compensatory one; compensatory vices were part of the essential content of the unconscious; unconscious virtues compensated for conscious deficiencies. An individual's life might be one-sided, but, failing to realize this, he might battle against his unconscious, that is to say, against what were really compensating elements in him.

Dr. Constance E. Long of London regarded the unconscious as a friend as well as an enemy.

All of which goes to show that some of the best psychologists have come to recognize that the subconscious is not all evil, as Freud's writings infer, but a storehouse in which good and evil may be about equally mixed.

Sterilization of Milk

MILK can be sterilized by electricity. Passing an electric current through milk appeared at first more likely to destroy the milk than to kill the microbes, and the first experiments seemed to prove that the pessimists were right. Currents of all kinds were sent through masses of milk, and the result was to leave the microbes fairly happy. Later work showed that high-frequency currents passed through the milk without changing either its flavor or its nutrient value, yet cleaning out all the disease-carrying microbes.

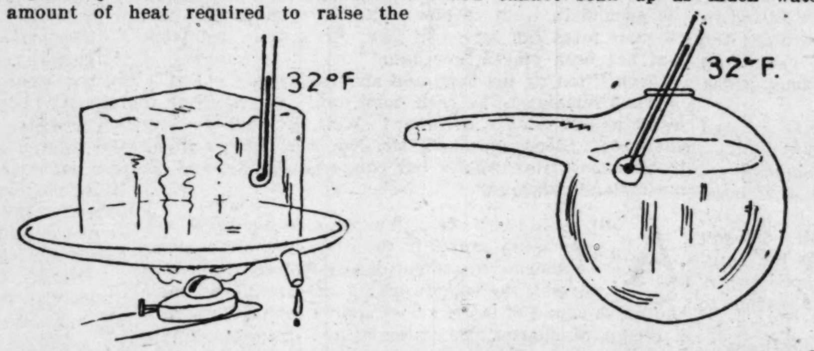
The apparatus generally consists of a glass tube having electrodes therein with the necessary electrical connections, the milk entering at one end of the tube and leaving it at the other and practically sterile, the central electrode connected with one pole of the transformer and the two outer electrodes connected with the other pole. As the electrical supply of the city of Liverpool is on the continuous system, an alternator, driven by a direct current motor, was necessary but, on the other hand where the electric supply is already alternating the alternator can be dispensed with. At the Liverpool infants'. milk depot the electrical apparatus consists of a direct current motor coupled to an alternating current generator, a high tension transformer, together with a current transformer, a pressure transformer and the usual switch gear and regulating devices. The transformers are kept in a safety cupboard, the lethal tube in a glass-fronted cupboard, the switchboard so placed that the operator has complete control over the installation, and the whole made foolproof.

The milk is not sterilized in the strictest sense of the word, but there is a reduction in the total number of bacteria by 99.93 per cent over a series of 15 daily examinations. In heat-sterilized milk and in pasteurized milk the whole of the bacteria are not destroyed, for the reason that some bacteria resist boiling temperature for some minutes, and that a temperature below boiling point they may resist for long periods. The difference is, no doubt, also exhibited towards electricity. The milk will keep perfectly sweet for at least three or four days after treatment, and this period will cover distribution and use in all cases of household milk supplies.

Why Ice Melts and Water Boils; A Study in Heat

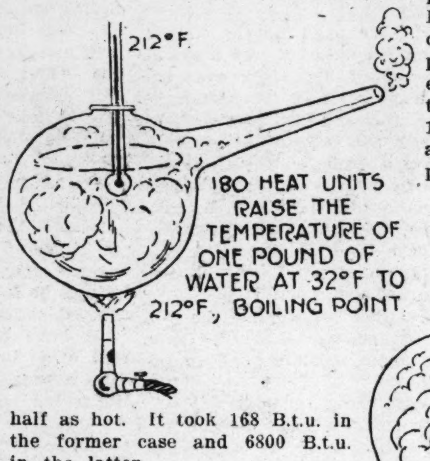
HERE are the most important facts about heat, divested of all theory and stated as simply as ever they have been. They are from an article written by Charles H. Bromley, especially for boiler operators and printed in Power.

The standard quantity or unit of heat is the British thermal unit, generally expressed as the B.t.u. This is the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of water 1 degree Fahrenheit.



144 HEAT UNITS MELT ONE POUND OF ICE AT 32°F AND INTO ONE POUND OF WATER AT 32°F

The temperature indicates the quality of the heat. One hundred pounds of water at 100 degrees Fahrenheit contains more heat than one pound of water at 200 degrees Fahrenheit. The latter is twice as hot as the other, but it did not take as much heat to make it that hot as it took to make the larger body half as hot. It took 168 B.t.u. in the former case and 6800 B.t.u. in the latter.



212°F.
180 HEAT UNITS RAISE THE TEMPERATURE OF ONE POUND OF WATER AT 32°F TO 212°F, BOILING POINT

Thermometers are instruments graduated arbitrarily to suit our convenience. On Fahrenheit thermometers the freezing point of water is marked at 32 degrees and the boiling point at 212 degrees. On Centigrade thermometers the freezing point is marked at 0 degree and the boiling point at 100.

At the temperature of 32 degrees Fahrenheit water changes from a solid to a liquid or from a liquid to a solid; ice forms or melts; it is a critical temperature. To melt one pound of ice at 32 degrees into water at 32 degrees, 144 heat units or B.t.u. must be applied to the ice; and, to freeze one pound at 32 degrees into ice at 32 degrees, 144 B.t.u. must be taken out of the water. To raise the temperature of one pound of water from 32 to 212 degrees, which is the boiling point at atmospheric pressure, 180 B.t.u. must be absorbed, and to cool it from 212 to 32 degrees, 180 B.t.u. must be given up by the water.

To boil one pound of water at 32 degrees into steam at 212 degrees will require 180 B.t.u.+970.4 B.t.u.=1150.4 B.t.u.

Notice that the steam is no hotter than the water from which it was produced after the water reached 212 degrees, although it took over 5.3 times as much heat to turn it into steam as it did to raise its temperature from 32 degrees to 212 degrees.

The heat required to make steam of water at 212 degrees is called latent, because the thermometers do not show it, while that required to raise its temperature to 212 degrees is called sensible, because we can see it. The two together produce the total heat of the steam.

You cannot soak up as much water with a wad of paper as you can with a sponge. Neither will a granite block soak up as much as an ordinary red brick. The capacities of various substances for absorbing liquids are not the same. The capacities of different substances for absorbing heat vary in the same way. If you put one heat unit into a pound of water, which is at, say, 62 degrees Fahrenheit, you raise its temperature 1 degree, or to 63 degrees Fahrenheit. If you put the same amount of heat into a pound of silver, its temperature will increase 18.1 degrees Fahrenheit, and for lead it would increase the temperature 33 degrees; for copper, 10.75 degrees; for ammonia, 0.99 degrees, and so on, each substance having its own peculiar capacity for absorbing heat to produce a given rise in temperature. This capacity is called the specific heat of a substance.

9704 HEAT UNITS REQUIRED TO TURN ONE POUND OF BOILING WATER (212°F) INTO STEAM AT 212°F

Specific heat, then, is the heat energy required to raise a unit weight of matter 1 degree as compared with the heat needed to raise a unit weight of water 1 degree.

Turbid Air Due to Cosmic Dust

METEOROLOGISTS have explained the turbid sky that marked the summer of 1912 to the volcanic dust ejected by Mount Katmai in Alaska, which burst into violent eruption that summer. But Dr. Barkow of the Filsher Antarctic Expedition records similar turbidity in latitude 70 degrees south in the middle of June, 1912, and for several months thereafter. He observed cirrus clouds at unusual altitudes and was able to read several hours daily by the light of the sky, although the sun was below the horizon, even at noon. In short, everything indicated the presence of reflecting particles at exceptional altitudes.

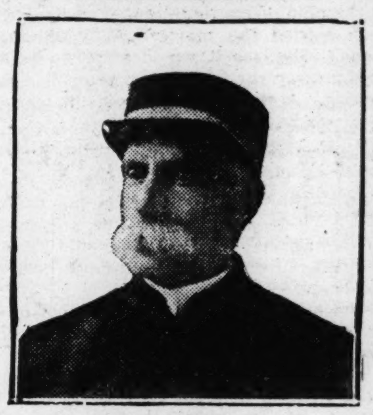
As it seems impossible that the dust of Katmai could have reached the Antarctic so soon after the eruption, Dr. Barkow concludes that the phenomena observed by him were caused by dust of cosmic origin, although this may have been reinforced, in the northern hemisphere, by volcanic dust from Mount Katmai.

Preventing Malaria

SCREENS are placed on all openings on our warships at Vera Cruz and Tampico, the men are kept below after dark, except those required by duty to be on the decks, and these are obliged to wear gloves and a netting over the head and neck. These precautions have resulted in an almost complete absence of malaria on American vessels, although the ships of other nations had numerous cases.

He Was Deaf

Astonishing Improvement in Hearing, Edward Gregory, Engineer, Gives Information Free.



An engineer who had ear trouble for years finally became so deaf he could not hear the sound of a steam engine, bells or voices. After vainly seeking relief he was compelled to give up his position. His case seemed hopeless. His deafness was aggravated by head disturbances, dry catarrh, nervousness and despondency.

To the surprise of all, he began to hear and continued improving until he could listen to conversations, could hear a train at a distance and even the singing of the birds in the trees. His head and nerves became tranquil. He got his position back again. This was no miracle; no surgery, no artificial hearing devices, no electric apparatus, no loss of time.

Whoever is becoming deaf can obtain particulars free by writing to Edward Gregory, 342A Forbes St., Jamaica Plains, Mass.

NOVEL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Cost More Than $15,000 to Kill a Man in War

GEN. PERCIN of the French army, in a recent magazine article declared an American estimate that it costs $15,000 to kill a single man in warfare rather underestimates the figures. He gave figures of his own which seem to prove that the cost is greatly in excess of that.

He arrives at results by considering the cost of killing a single man as the quotient of a division of the total cost of a war to one of the sides by the number of men slain on the other side. He estimates that in the Franco-German War of 1870-1871 France spent $4,000,000,000 for actual war expenses, $2,000,000,000 to repair the damages of the war and $10,000,000,000 in indemnities, interest, etc., and that it cost $21,000 for each German killed. Similarly in 1877 and 1878 it cost Russia $15,000 for each Turk slain and, in 1905, it cost Russia $20,400 for each Jap slain. The same method carried into our own Civil War would fix a price of $12,380 on each Confederate killed.

Percin argues that while the destructiveness of modern warfare is much greater than formerly, the cost of it is also much greater. Furthermore he declares that the increased killing power of modern arms is relatively set off by the increased defensive power of modern fortifications. As a result, he says, the number of men killed to the hour of actual combat is steadily diminishing. The percentage of those slain to the hour of fighting was 6 per cent under Frederick the Great, 3 per cent under Napoleon, 2 per cent in 1870 and 0.5 in the Russo-Japanese War.

"On the other hand," he points out, "in the Franco-German War there were only a dozen or so big battles The soldiers fought little between Froeschwiller and Sedan, between Sedan and Coulmeirs. In Manchuria, to the contrary, the soldiers fought virtually every day. The battle of Mukden lasted 15 days, that of Cha-Ho, 12 days, and that of Liao-Yang eight days. This increase in the total length of the fighting has compensated for the difference between the number of men slain to the actual hour of combat. This explains why the cost of killing an individual in 1905 was not greater than the cost of killing an individual in 1870.

"It is impossible to estimate closely what the actual cost of killing each man will be in the present war. The sum will depend a great deal on the topography of the battle field and the character of the fighting. If the fighting is continual as in Manchuria or the recent Balkan War, the cost will be in the neighborhood of $15,000. If the fighting takes place at rare intervals it will be much greater. At any rate it will not diminish.

"What kills most and reduces most rapidly the total effective fighting force is not the rifle or the cannon, but it is fatigue and disease. In 1870 there were 380,000 Germans in hospital and these, whether they died or survived, had to be subtracted from the total effective fighting force. The Crimean War cost the allies four times as many men from disease as from bullets. I count greatly, in the present war, upon a great diminution of hospital deaths because of our better sanitary precautions."

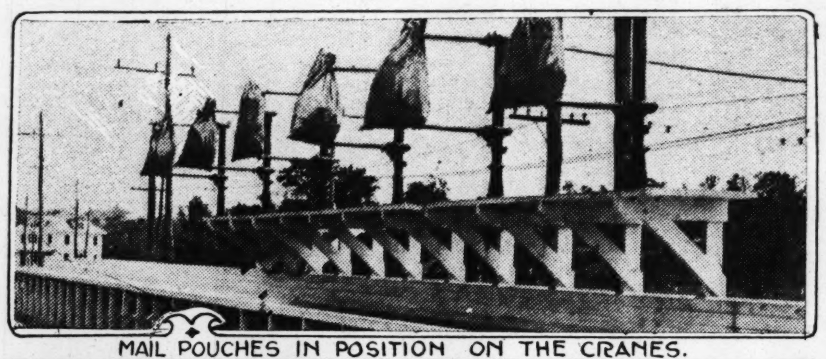
"Explosion Piles" for Foundations

A STRANGELY simple and economical yet extraordinarily strong method of making concrete piles for foundation purposes has recently been introduced in France. It is based upon the fact that a charge of explosive set at the bottom of a vertical hole filled with compact matter will produce an excavation, thus compressing the earth all about it.

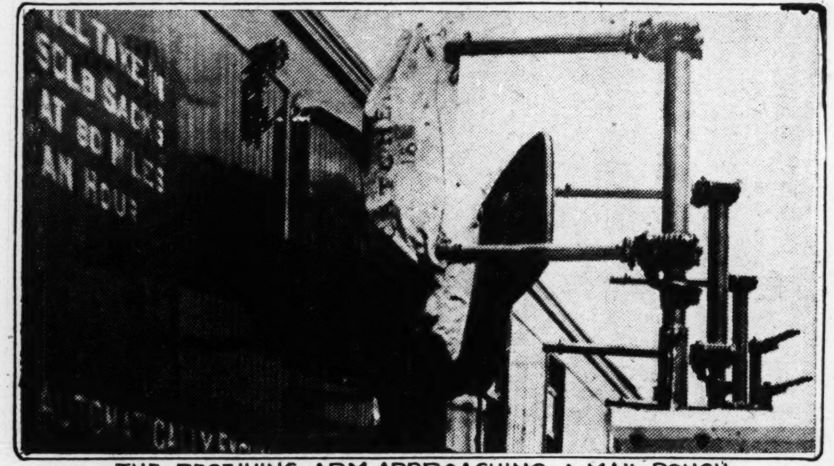
A steel tube, about twenty inches in diamter, with a wooden core, is forced into the earth to a depth of from fifteen to twenty-five feet. The wooden core is withdrawn; an explosive cartridge containing about a pound and a half of powder, is sent to the bottom and so placed that its explosive force shall be principally horizontal. The tube is filled up with wet concrete and is then drawn up about three feet. The cartridge is exploded by a detonator and a small magnet. Immediately after the explosion the still wet concrete flows down into the cavity thus produced, filling it entirely. The tube is then filled up with concrete well rammed down. The pile is now complete and is in the form of a pillar resting upon a bulbous base about 3 feet 9 inches wide, imbedded in firm earth.

The size of the base can be regulated by the charge of powder and can be measured accurately by the fall of the concrete in the tube.

Automatic Mail Catcher That Requires No Human Assistance

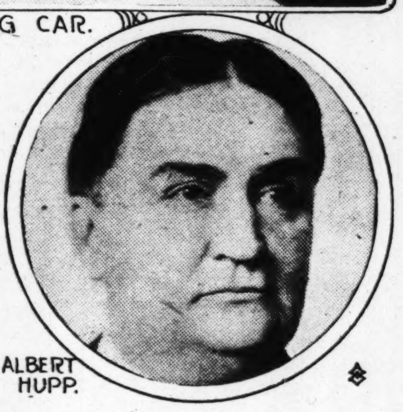


MAIL POUCHES IN POSITION ON THE CRANES.



THE RECEIVING ARM APPROACHING A MAIL POUCH.

DISCHARGING MAIL FROM A MOVING CAR.



ALBERT HUPP.

ALONG the line of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Co., between Chicago and St. Louis, equipment is installed for the automatic handling of United States mails on railroad trains. By automatic mechanism it will be possible to take on or discharge from rapidly moving trains—and with equal safety and facility—a parcel post package of eggs or a heavy sack of mail. Albert Hupp, the inventor and builder of the automatic device, was for many years a traveling salesman in Kansas City.

The United States Postoffice Department several months ago granted permission to Mr. Hupp, for the purposes of final demonstration, to install his equipment and handle United States mails on some line of railroad where there was heavy traffic. A contract was made with the Chicago & Alton, for service between Chicago and St. Louis. There will be 35 stations where mail will be automatically received and delivered.

The power that operates this automatic system is derived from the axle of the mail car when the latter is in motion. Outside the rails, at a point 360 feet from where the exchange of mail is to be made, is a trip, which is struck by a trip on the approaching mail car. This instantly releases the mechanism in the car, which is controlled by a worm attached to the middle of the axle. The mechanism is geared to turn one degree of its revolution while the train travels three feet on the rails, thus insuring exchange of mail, regardless of the speed of the train, whether it be four miles or sixty miles an hour.

The moment the mechanism is tripped, the car door begins opening and is fully open after a distance of 180 feet has been traveled. The receiving arm, slightly curved, now begins reaching out from the side of the car, to take on the mail sacks, each of which is suspended from an upright crane—the number being optional, up to 25—that stands beside the track. By the time the train has moved a second 180 feet, the receiving arm is fully extended, and each sack, as it is taken from the crane, slides swiftly along the curve of the receiving arm and drops always at the same place inside the car, its impetus coming from the progress of the Immediately beneath the upright cranes is a trough for receiving whatever mail is discharged from the train. This trough is 150 feet long, with its bottom inclined at an angle of 45 degrees. The mechanism that operates the receiving arm that takes on the mail also operates a delivery chute that begins moving from the car doors as soon as the latter is open. The bottom of the chute telescopes and lets the mail fall into the receiving trough, from which there is no possibility of a sack's being drawn under the wheels of the train. The chute is drawn back into the car at once after it has made delivery. The receiving arm remains fully extended, however, until the full 150 feet covered by the receiving trough has been traversed, after which the arm returns automatically to its place on the side of the car. Both the receiving arm and the delivery chute now become securely locked. All this takes place without the slightest attention on the part of the mail clerks inside the car.

The capacity of the system is such that a train can collect up to 25 pouches and sacks from 25 cranes at any one station. In actual tests, 12 sacks, one at a time, weighing more than 600 pounds in the aggregate, have been taken in. Measured by the average postal clerk catch, this is equal to the catch of 30 clerks in 30 mail cars, with 30 iron hooks and 30 station cranes at 30 stations. There are now 12,000 stations in the United States where mail is caught by fast trains running at full speed.

Fungi That Are Good to Eat

IN a lecture W. A. Murrill described the fungi that are good to eat and the few that are poisonous. He said the majority of fleshy fungi are edible, and through ignorance of this fact "an immense quantity of nutritious, digestible and palatable food goes to waste in our fields and forests which would be utilized in China and many other parts of the Old World."

Mr. Murrill advised all who are not experts to confine themselves to the following kinds of fungi:

Common mushroom, morel, chantarelle, beefsteak and sulphur colored polypore; shaggy mane, common inkcap and glistening inkcap; all puffballs, provided they are white, tender and homogeneous within; all coral fungi, if they are fresh, crisp, tender and have no bad odor or bad taste.

The oyster mushroom and its near relatives. These are large, with white gills and short stems, and grow on dead wood above ground.

All the foregoing are safe.

He also gave the following valuable hints about cooking fungi:

"Reject old specimens or those infested with insects, cut off the stems except in rare cases where they are unusually tender, peel a few kinds that seem to require it, wash quickly in cold water, drain and keep in a cool place until ready to cook.

"The most practical and successful methods of cooking resolve themselves into broiling, baking and stewing. In the first, which I prefer to all other methods, the mushrooms are cooked thoroughly but as quickly as possible on both sides over a hot fire; seasoned with pepper, salt, butter and perhaps small bits of toasted bacon, and served hot on toast.

"To bake mushrooms, line the pan with toast, add the specimens, season, pour in half a cup of cream, cover closely, and bake rather slowly for 15 minutes or more, according to quality. In stewing, the mushrooms are boiled in water until thoroughly cooked, then seasoned, thickened and served on toast. This last method is often used for the tougher or poorer varieties."

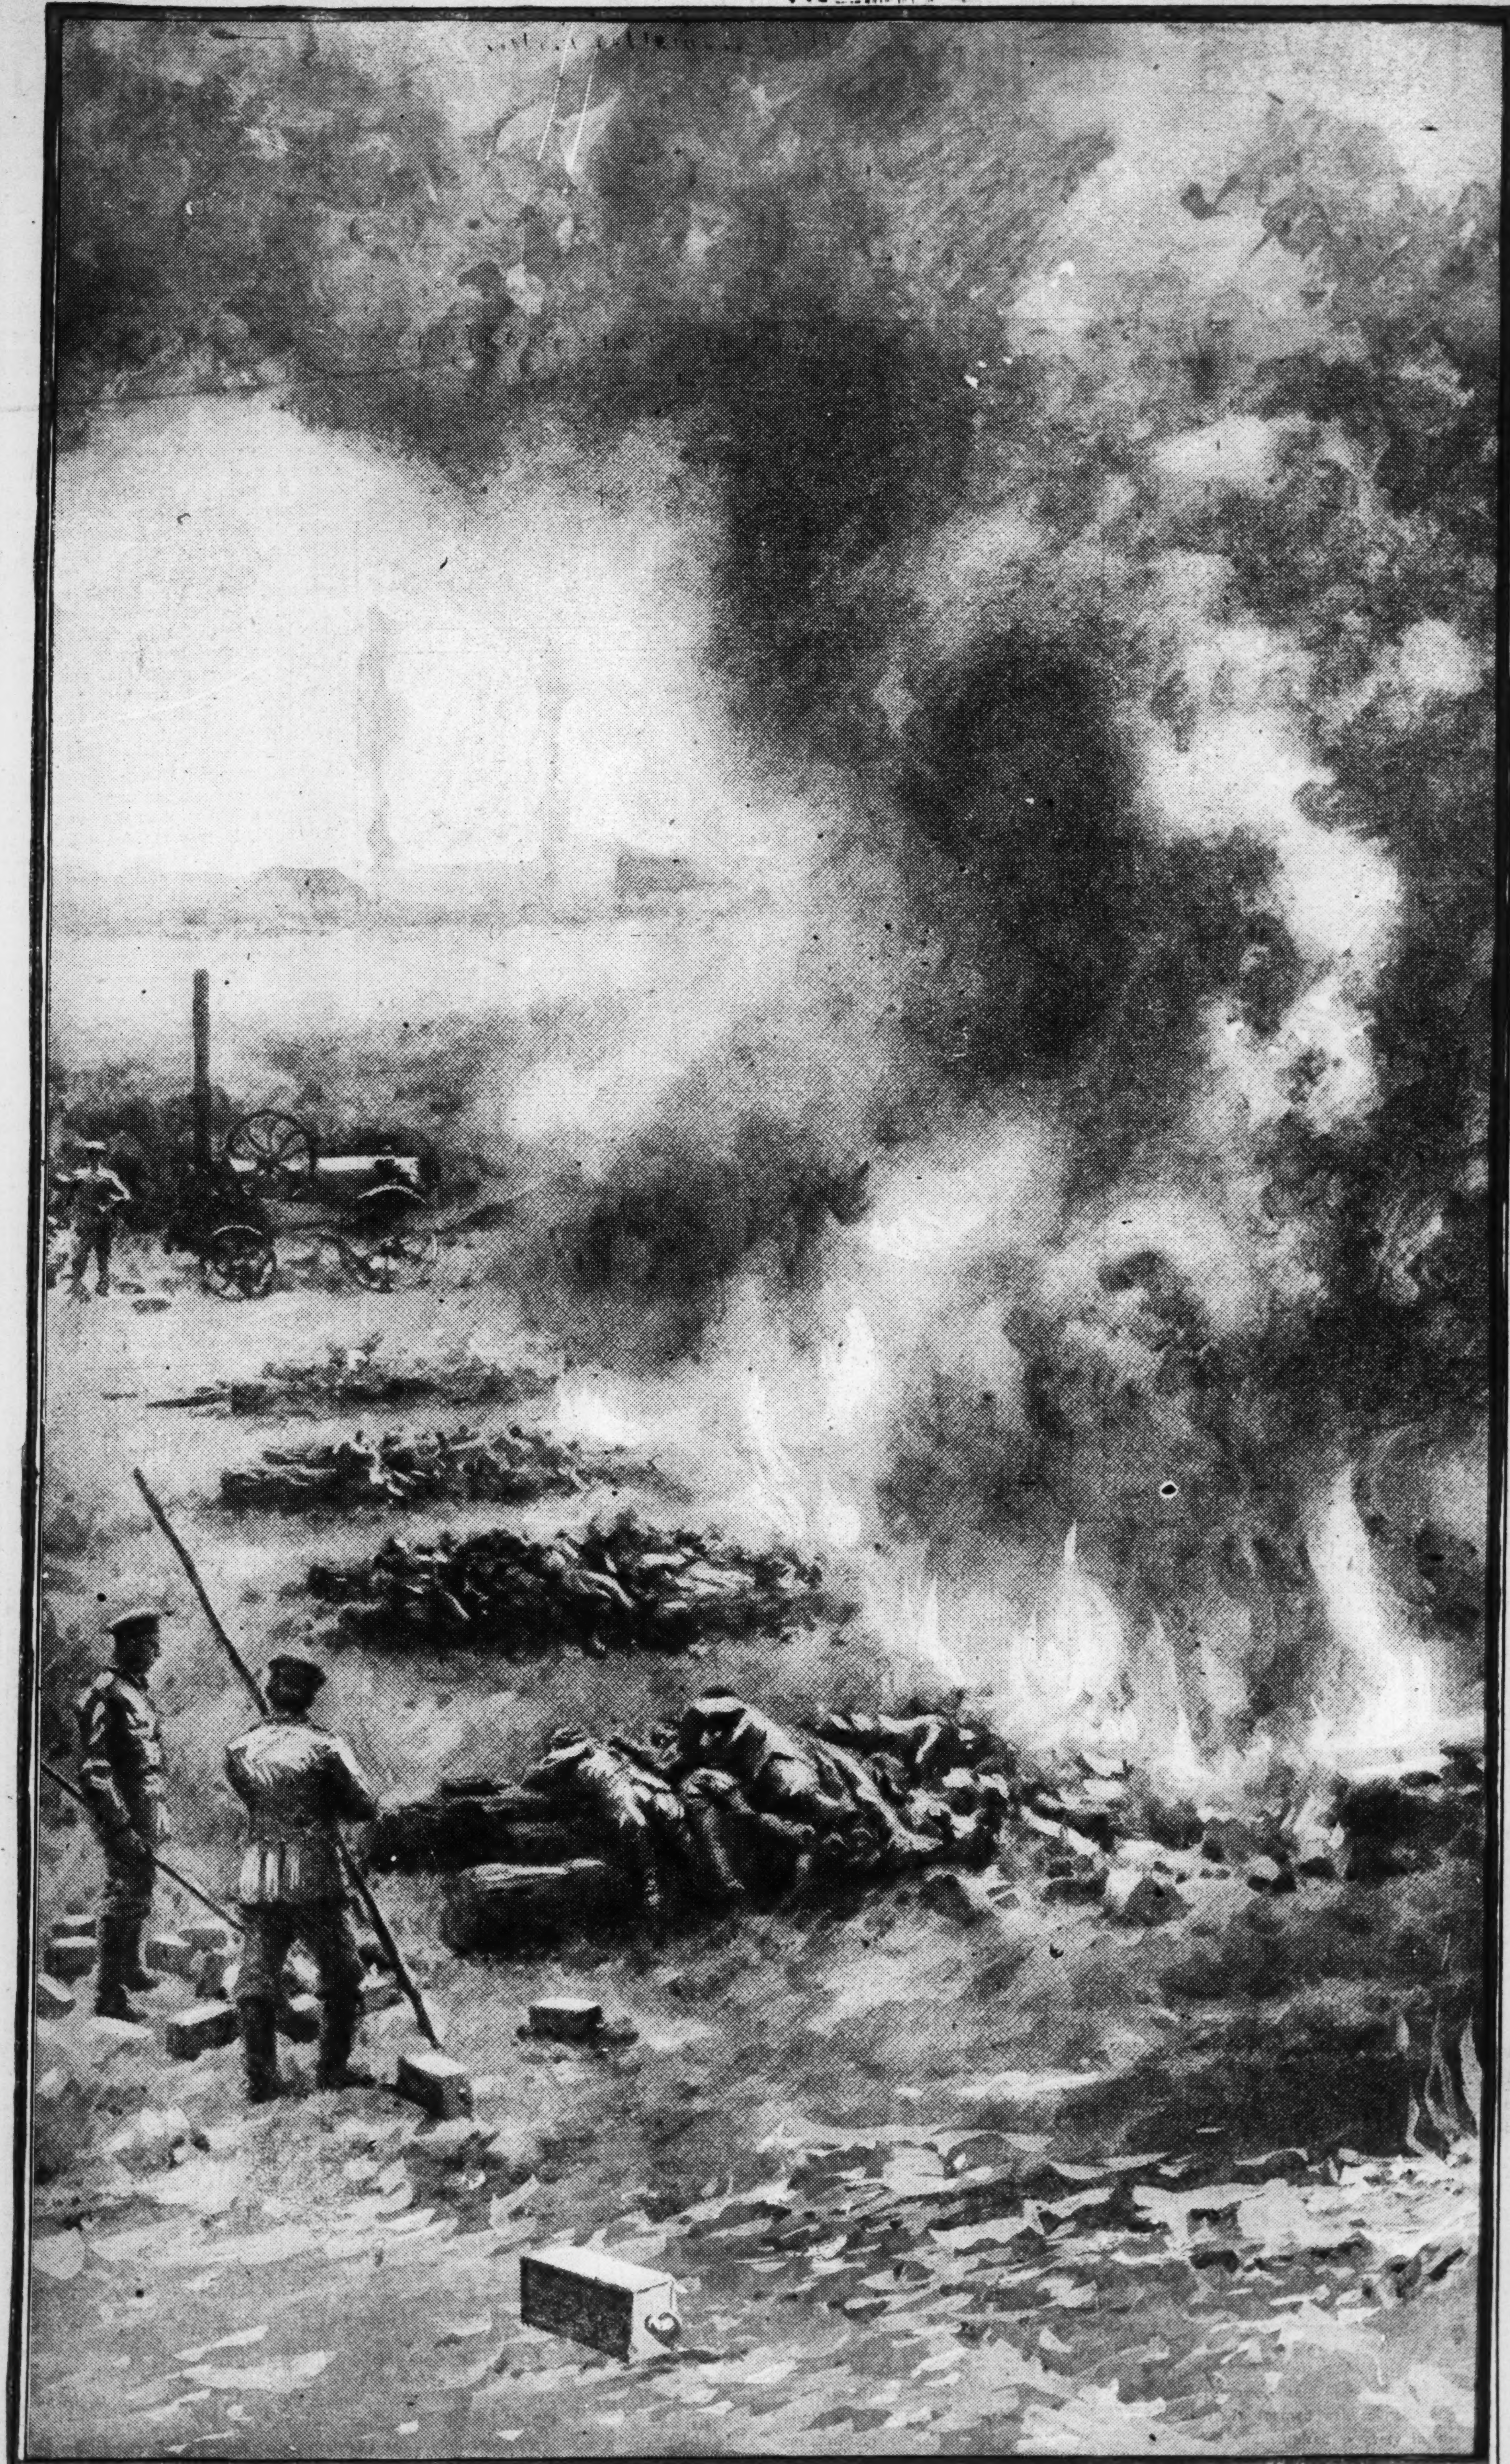
Work Done by a Balance Wheel

THE balance wheel of a watch vibrates 300 times a minute, 18,000 times each hour, 432,000 times a day and 157,788,000 times a year. As each vibration covers about one and a half revolutions, the shaft on which the balance wheel is mounted makes 236,682,000 revolutions in its bearings each year. Compare this, says the Scientific American, with a modern locomotive with seven-foot drivers, which would have to run 985,824 miles to make an equal number of revolutions; and, running at the rate of a mile a minute, without stopping, it would take 683 days, or nearly two years, for the axle of the drive wheel of the locomotive to make as many revolutions as the balance wheel shaft of the watch does in one year, and it would cover a distance of more than 39 times around the world.

Springless Valves

THE possibilities of the springless type of poppet valve were pretty thoroughly demonstrated in some of the recent foreign road races. In fact, they worked so well that the Scientific American thinks there is every probability that they will come into fairly general use in the not far distant future. The positively operated valve differs from the usual type in that the cam not only opens the valve but closes it as well. In the generally accepted type of poppet valve, the valve itself is closed by a heavy spring. It is claimed for the springless valves that a higher rate of speed is possible; that greater power naturally results and that the factor of safety is increased. With the spring-controlled valve, the piston speed is limited by the inability of the spring to close the valve before the cam has come around and started to open it again. Heavy springs and light valves have partly solved the problem, which still remains where springs are used. With the positively operated valve it is no longer the valve which limits the speed of the motor.

THE Utah Light and Railway Co. has installed in its stables at Salt Lake City two 56-inch four-blade ceiling fans and two 15-inch blowers. On warm nights these help to keep the horses cool, and they keep the flies out of the stable.



Germany's Nightly Holocausts of the Slain

Drawn by A. C. Michael From a Sketch by Frederic Villiers

ONE of the ghastliest spectacles of the war, one worthy of Zola or the pencil of Verestchagin, is the immense funeral pyres upon which each night the Germans cremate their dead. Artist Villiers, who is at the front, describes the scene pictured here as having occurred at the village of Esternay, only nine miles from Paris.

He writes that the bodies were collected and that after their number plates were removed for identification in the death lists, they were taken to a clearing near a sawmill, piled in long windrows upon logs, saturated with gasoline and ignited.

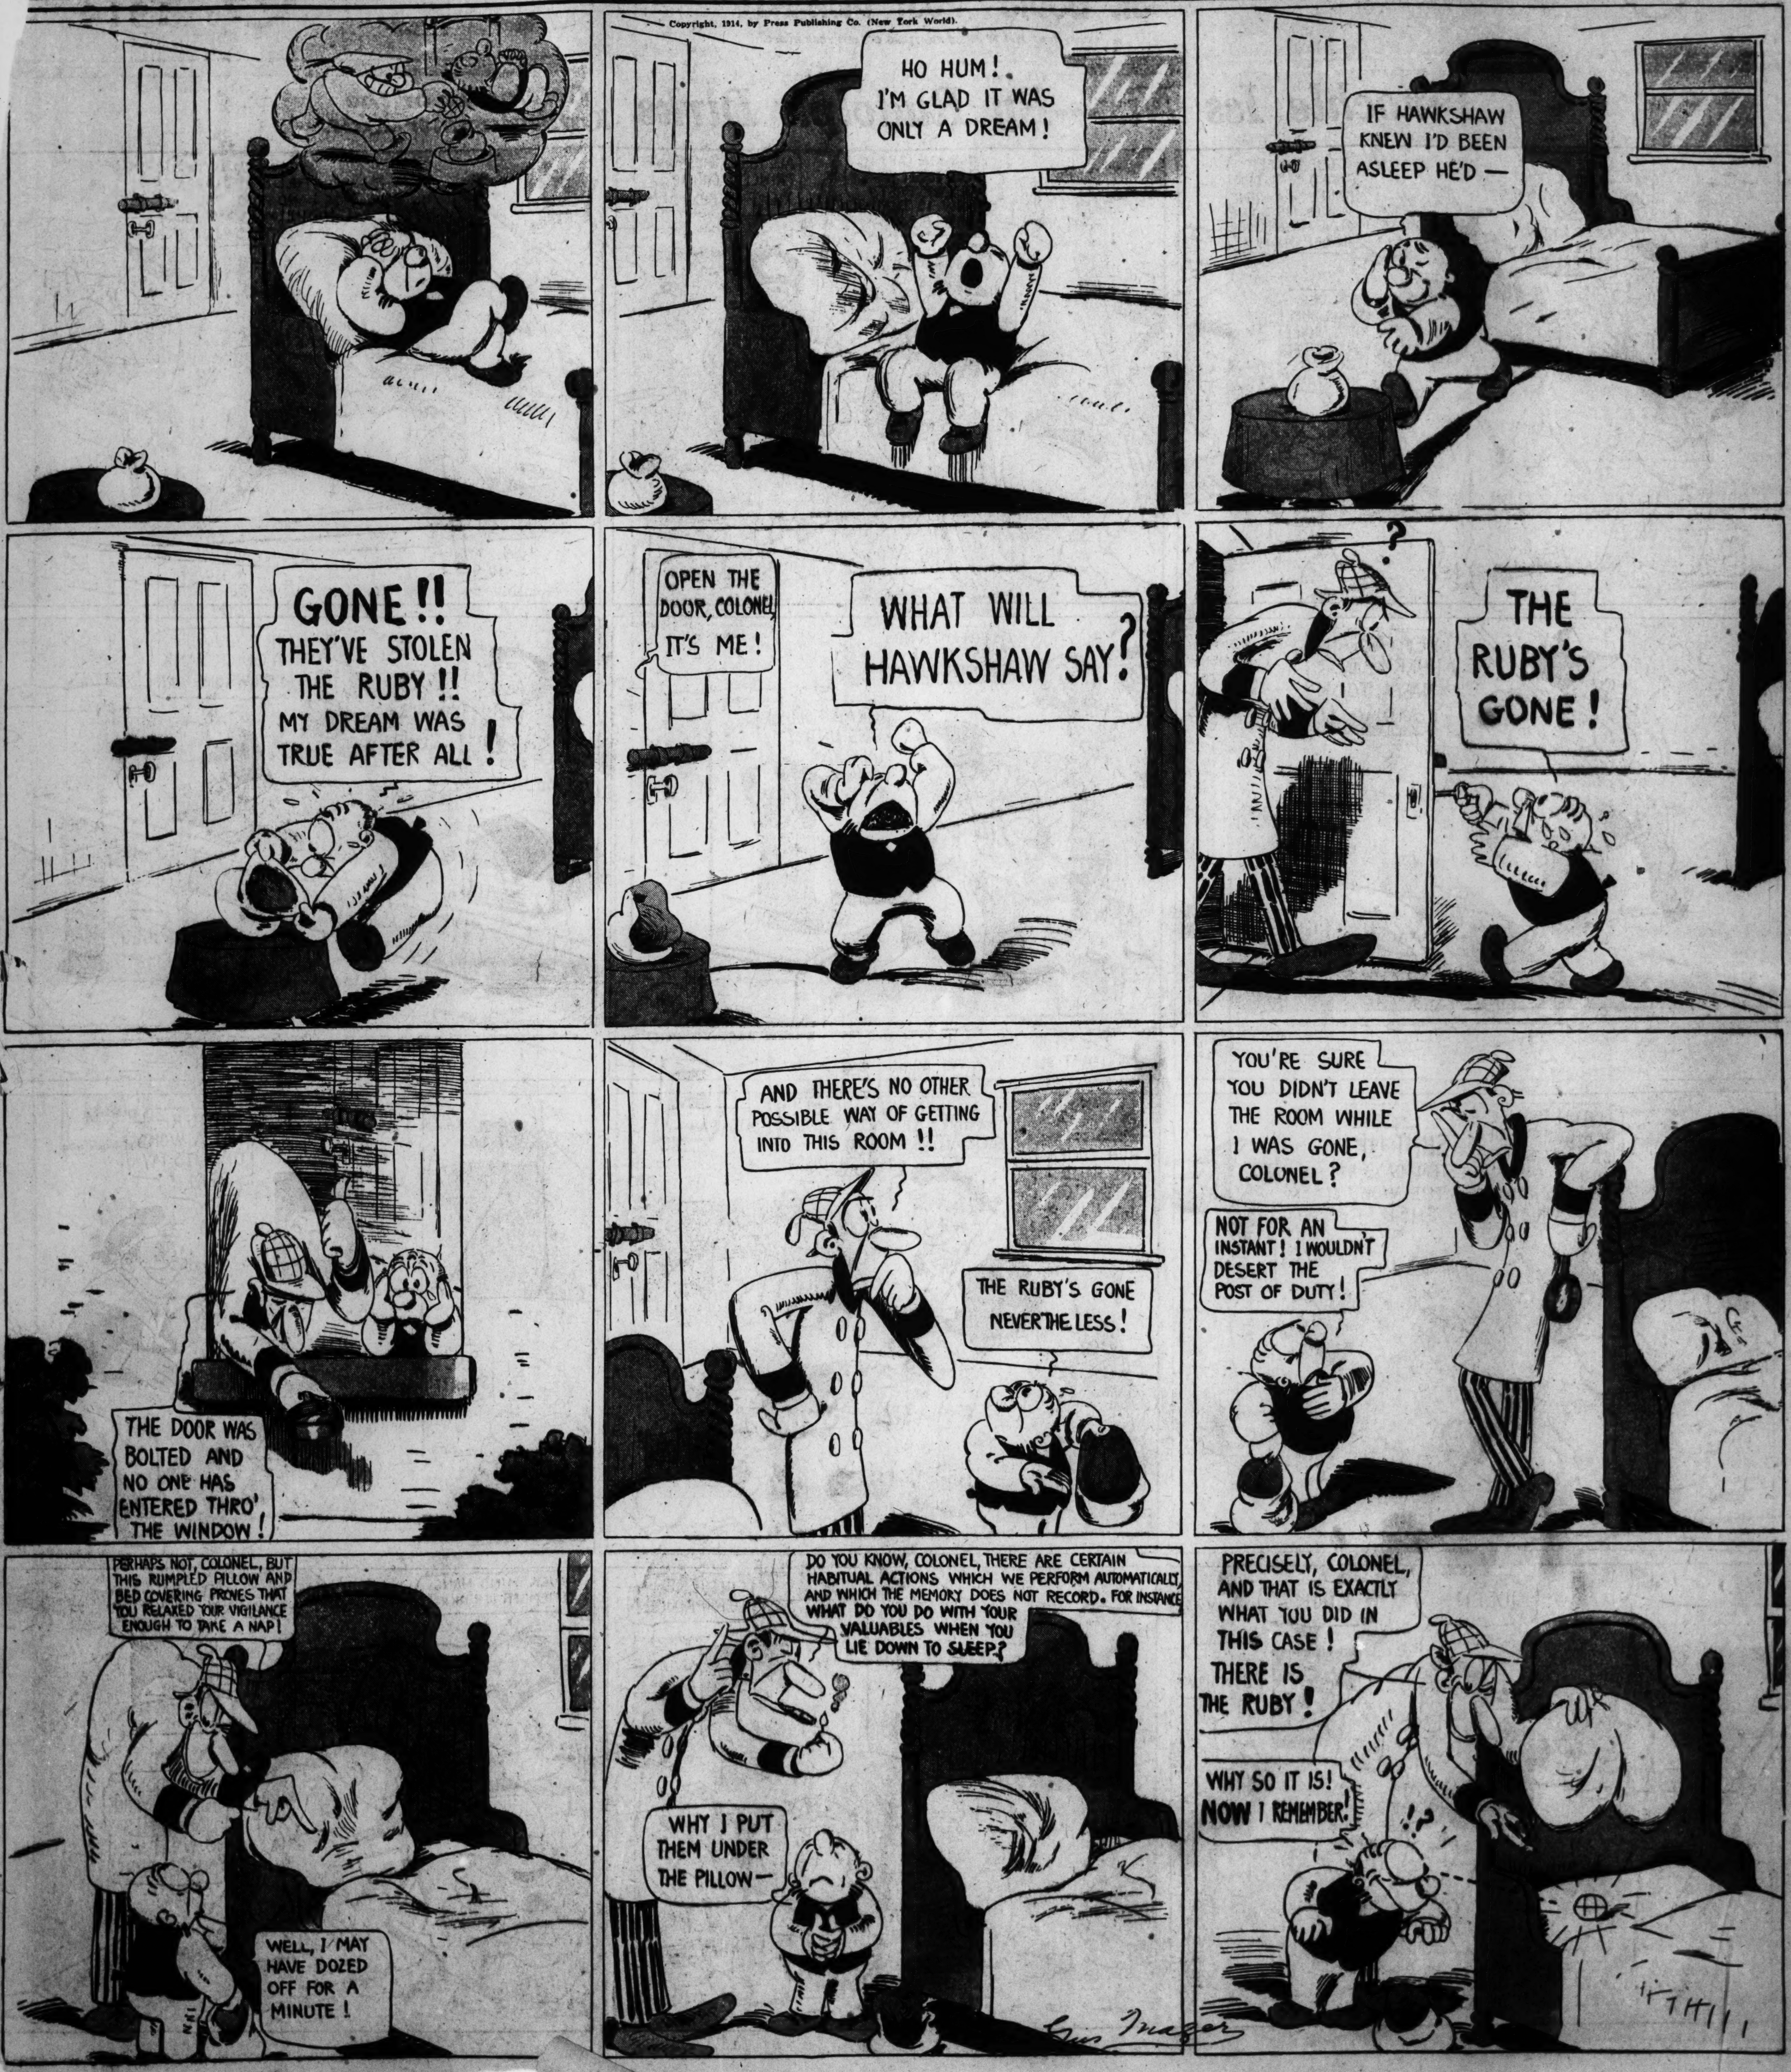
Hawkshaw the Detective---The Colonel Has a Terrible Dream

Copyright, 1914, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World).



HO HUM! I'M GLAD IT WAS ONLY A DREAM!
IF HAWKSHAW KNEW I'D BEEN ASLEEP HE'D —
GONE!! THEY'VE STOLEN THE RUBY!! MY DREAM WAS TRUE AFTER ALL!
OPEN THE DOOR, COLONEL, IT'S ME!
WHAT WILL HAWKSHAW SAY?
THE RUBY'S GONE!
THE DOOR WAS BOLTED AND NO ONE HAS ENTERED THRO' THE WINDOW!
AND THERE'S NO OTHER POSSIBLE WAY OF GETTING INTO THIS ROOM!!
THE RUBY'S GONE NEVERTHELESS!
YOU'RE SURE YOU DIDN'T LEAVE THE ROOM WHILE I WAS GONE, COLONEL?
NOT FOR AN INSTANT! I WOULDN'T DESERT THE POST OF DUTY!
PERHAPS NOT, COLONEL, BUT THIS RUMPLED PILLOW AND BED COVERING PROVES THAT YOU RELAXED YOUR VIGILANCE ENOUGH TO TAKE A NAP!
WELL, I MAY HAVE DOZED OFF FOR A MINUTE!
DO YOU KNOW, COLONEL, THERE ARE CERTAIN HABITUAL ACTIONS WHICH WE PERFORM AUTOMATICALLY, AND WHICH THE MEMORY DOES NOT RECORD. FOR INSTANCE WHAT DO YOU DO WITH YOUR VALUABLES WHEN YOU LIE DOWN TO SLEEP?
WHY I PUT THEM UNDER THE PILLOW—
PRECISELY, COLONEL, AND THAT IS EXACTLY WHAT YOU DID IN THIS CASE! THERE IS THE RUBY!
WHY SO IT IS! NOW I REMEMBER!
!?

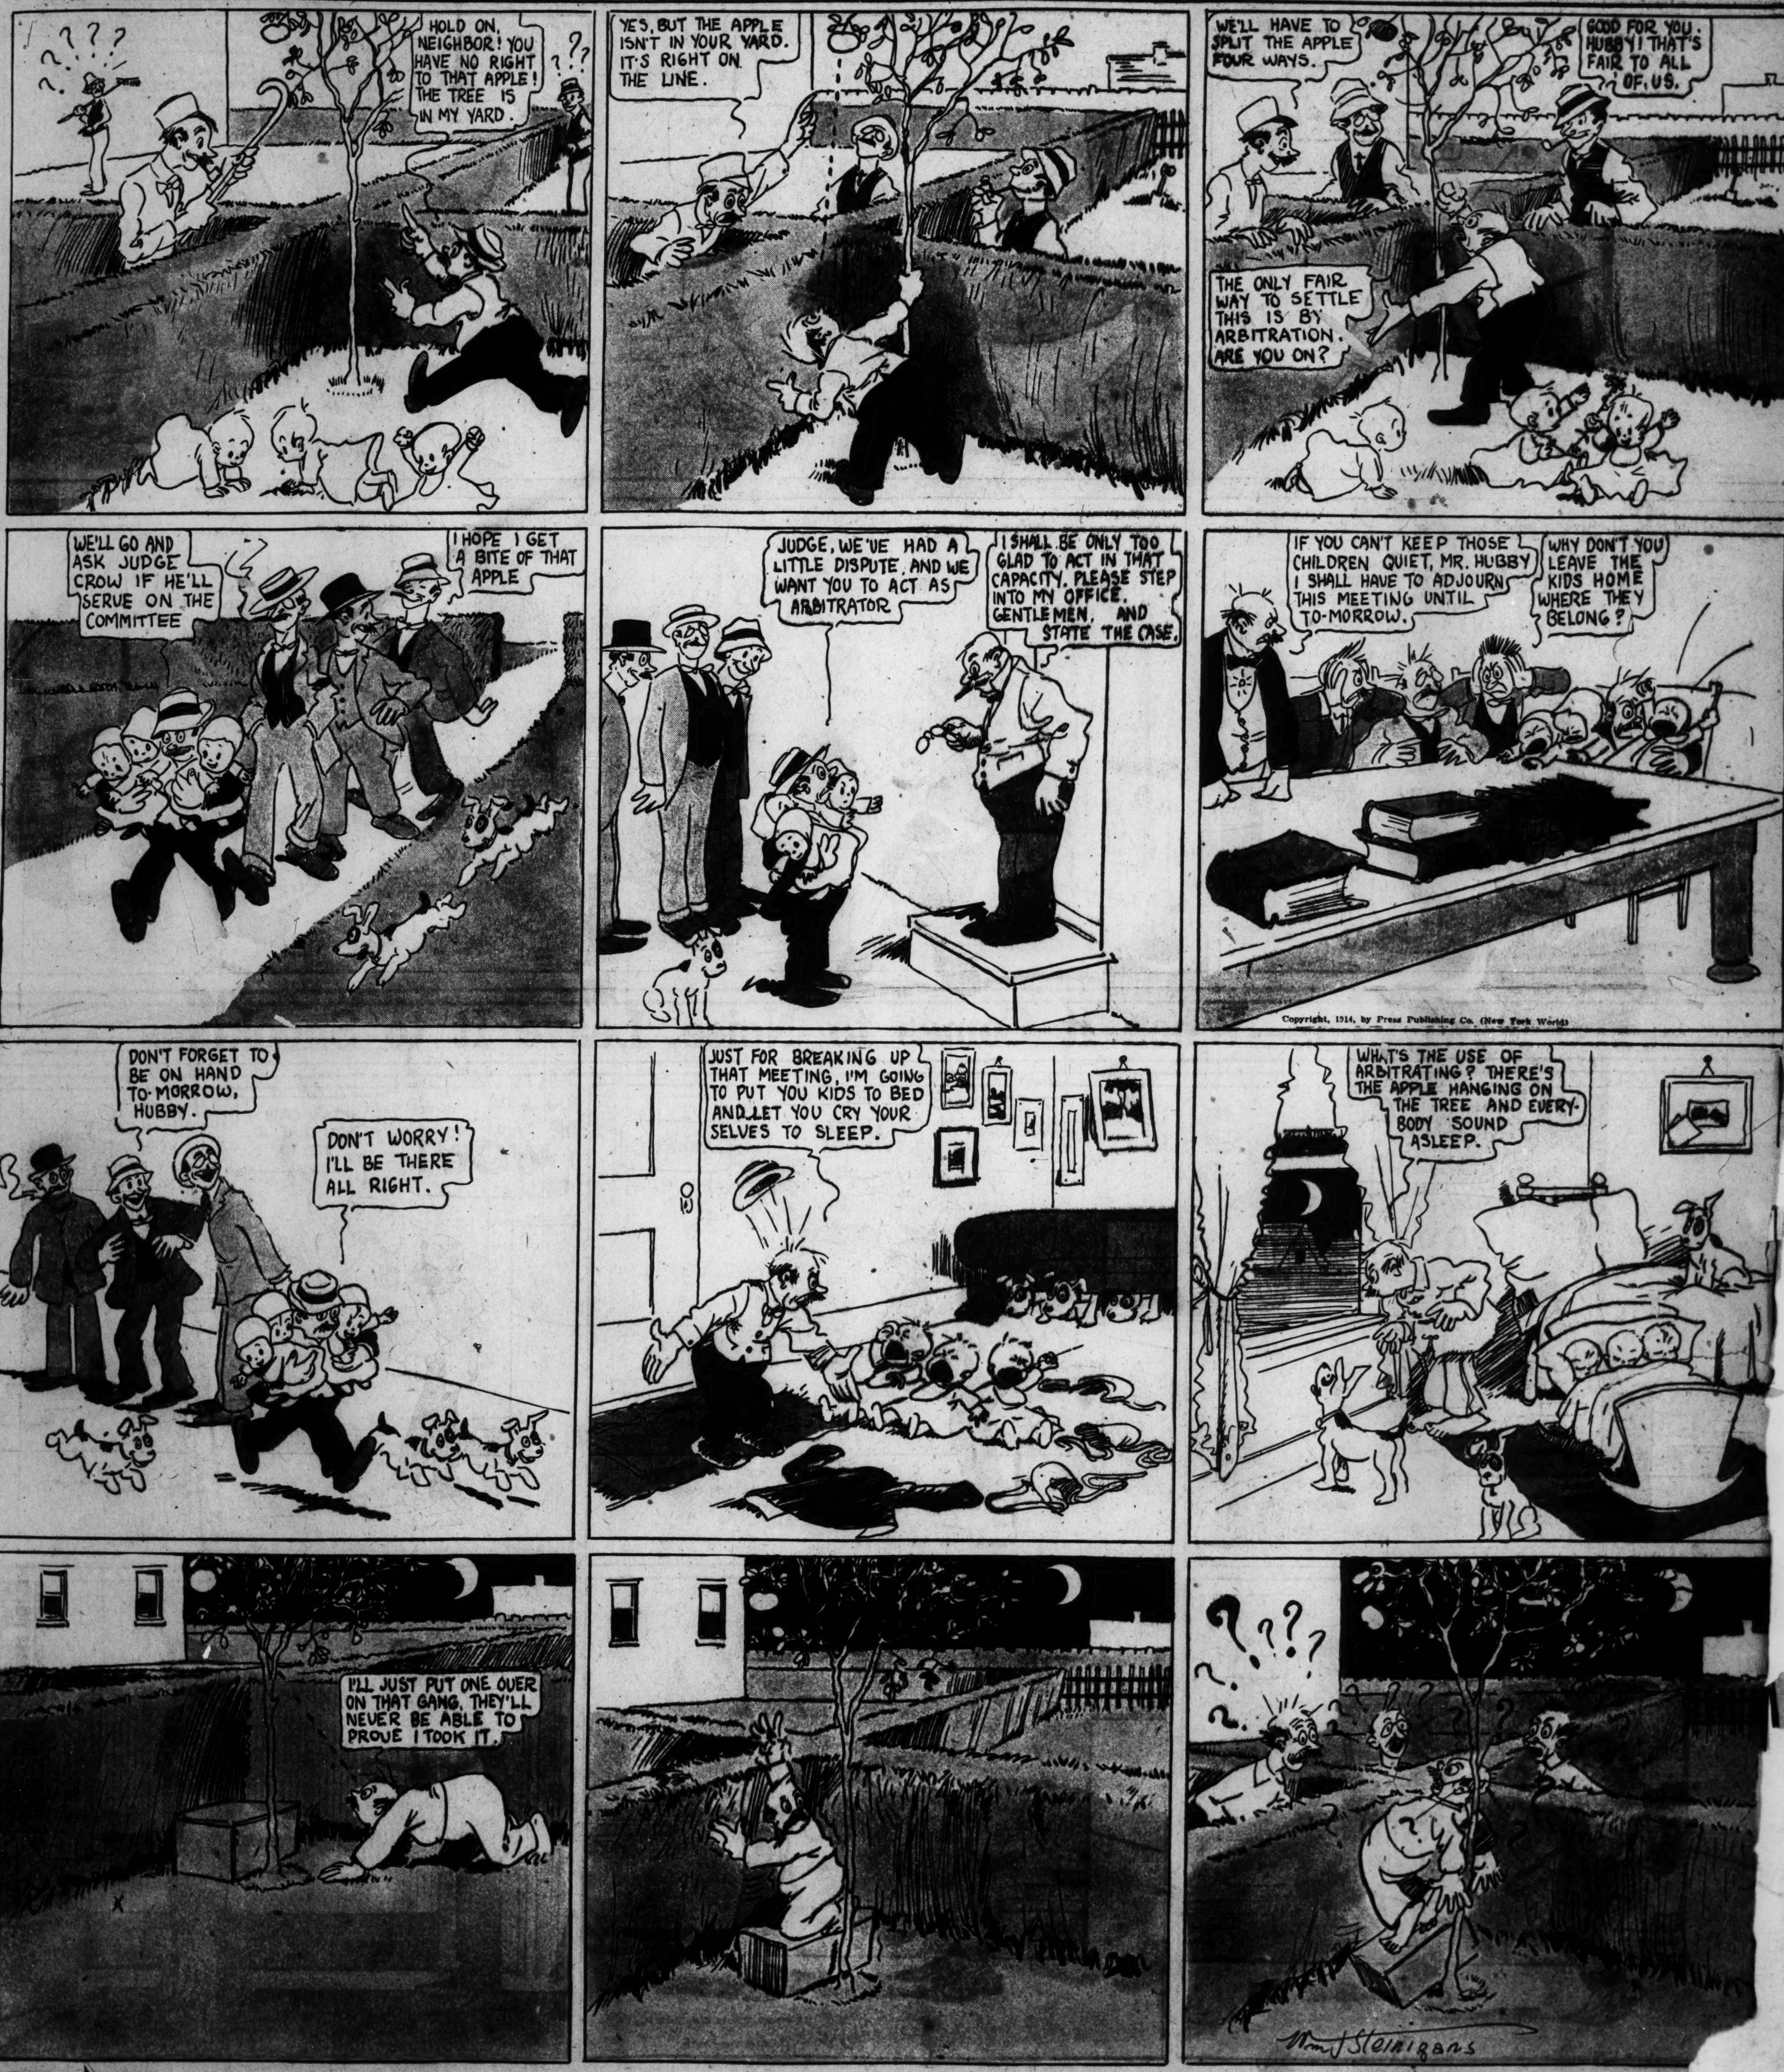
Mr. Hubby---His Wife Is at the Arbitration Club



? ? ? ?
HOLD ON, NEIGHBOR! YOU HAVE NO RIGHT TO THAT APPLE! THE TREE IS IN MY YARD.
YES, BUT THE APPLE ISN'T IN YOUR YARD. IT'S RIGHT ON THE LINE.
WE'LL HAVE TO SPLIT THE APPLE FOUR WAYS.
GOOD FOR YOU. HUBBY! THAT'S FAIR TO ALL OF US.
THE ONLY FAIR WAY TO SETTLE THIS IS BY ARBITRATION. ARE YOU ON?
WE'LL GO AND ASK JUDGE CROW IF HE'LL SERVE ON THE COMMITTEE
I HOPE I GET A BITE OF THAT APPLE
JUDGE, WE'VE HAD A LITTLE DISPUTE, AND WE WANT YOU TO ACT AS ARBITRATOR
I SHALL BE ONLY TOO GLAD TO ACT IN THAT CAPACITY. PLEASE STEP INTO MY OFFICE, GENTLEMEN, AND STATE THE CASE.
IF YOU CAN'T KEEP THOSE CHILDREN QUIET, MR. HUBBY I SHALL HAVE TO ADJOURN THIS MEETING UNTIL TO-MORROW.
WHY DON'T YOU LEAVE THE KIDS HOME WHERE THEY BELONG?
DON'T FORGET TO BE ON HAND TO-MORROW, HUBBY.
DON'T WORRY! I'LL BE THERE ALL RIGHT.
JUST FOR BREAKING UP THAT MEETING, I'M GOING TO PUT YOU KIDS TO BED AND LET YOU CRY YOUR SELVES TO SLEEP.
WHAT'S THE USE OF ARBITRATING? THERE'S THE APPLE HANGING ON THE TREE AND EVERY-BODY SOUND ASLEEP.
I'LL JUST PUT ONE OVER ON THAT GANG, THEY'LL NEVER BE ABLE TO PROVE I TOOK IT.
